PORTLAND OUTBATS LOS ANGELES BUT PAILS TO MAKE THE GAME-ANGELS STEAL MANY BASES AND BECK ENOUS NOME BUN-PRANCIS RELEASED.

Los Angeles, 8; Portland, 6. Newton and Spies; Iberg, Roach and horrig.

These lines, dear brethren, are the subject of my story today. The appropriateness of that homely text is as self evident as if it were a geometrical runneth thus, "Early to bed and early to rise, makes men healthy, wealthy and wise;" but the more modern one, "Late to bed and early to rise make players healthy, wealthy and otherwise," has its uses today as much as the former was adhered to in early days. There was keno in the air,

There was fumbling everywhere,
And Angels stealing bases;
Old Steelman couldn't throw,

Twas either high or either low,
And the manager made faces.

A good sized crowd left the ball park yesterday in a very unpleasant frame of mind. The Browns, who had the day before put up a brilliant game of ball, fell asleep and allowed the Angels to skip around the bases undisturbed, and skip around the bases undisturbed, and win a game to which they, were not entitled. The Browns batted hard, making 15 hits, which included a home run, one triple, four doubles and a score of singles, yet they couldn't pull together long enough to cinch the game. Iberg, while touched up some, pitched a far better game than Newton and with a live team behind him would have won out. The Angels stole bases at will, and would have stolen more if there were would have stolen more if there were any to pilfer. Steelman was away off in his throwing to beses and the visitors realized this at once, and the fun was Angels going out one, two three, and in her half Portland pushed two across the pan. In the second the Angels tied up her half Portland pushed two across the pan. In the second the Angels tied up affairs by getting two and in the third took the lead by one. In the sixth Los Angeles increased her lead four more on four hits, a bunch of stolen bases and a fumble. In this same inning Portland hit Newton for a few and scored twice, but the Angels couldn't resist the temptation of making two more in the seventh. In the seventh and eighth Portland got one in each inning, and made a desperate effort to the the score, but couldn't muster hits chough.

Manager Dugdale sat on the bench and fumed away, but his men couldn't do the trick. After the game Francis got his walking papers for playing stupid ball and will be replaced today by J. R. Ballestro, an amateur from Ho-

"HUMAN FLY" SUES FOR DIAMOND PIN

Oscar Vanderbilt, who was formerly in the show business, but is now a farmer at Hood River, is the defendant in a suit brought in the state circuit court for Multnomah county by Aimee Austin, known as "the human fly," to recover a diamond horseshoe pin and a pair of diamond ear-rings which she says are worth $800. Mr. Vanderbilt has just filed an answer to the suit, in which he says that he held the jeweiry as security for payment of a bill for printing, and that after Aimee had failed to pay the bill at the time stipulated he sold the jeweis, realizing $255 therefrom; that he made her a tender of the surplus $55 but she refused it, preferring to sue him to recover the diamonds. He asks that her suit be dismissed.

WOULD LICENSE SLOT MACHINES

Efforts will be made by certain members of the city council to pass an ordinance imposing a license of $15 a quarter on slot machines such as are used in cigar stores and saloons. These councilmen favor this ordinance for the reason that it will prove a source of a large amount of revenue each month. At the present time there are in the neighborhood of 2,500 such machines in use in Portland, and it is reckoned that if such a license is imposed not more than 1,000 will remain in use. If this number is licensed it will mean a quarterly income of $15,000 or an annual income of $50,000.

The matter was broached by several of the councilmen several weeks ago. The ordinance may be presented at the next meeting of the council. The mayor and others of the council do not look upon slot machines as gambling devices, but consider them as cigar-sellers.

REPUTATION OF QUALITY.

was due to two things principally—overproduction, and a lack of knowledge in the proper curing of the fruit. The average Oregon prune man puts his prunes into the dryer and gives them as much heat as they will stand without actually cooking or burning the fruit.
This leaves the product in a very hard and unsightly condition.

When properly cured Oregon prunes take first place among the prunes of the world and the following report of United States Consul Tourgee at Bordeaux. France, will be of vital interest to many prune men of this state inasmuch as it not only tells of how Oregon prunes are used to keep the reputation of the French prune up to standard, but it also tells of the process employed:

I have the honor to acknowledge recelpt of a dispatch asking the exact meaning of my "statement" that "Callfornia prunes are imported to Bordeaux and there repacked to maintain the superiority of French prunes."

The following is the paragraph in my annual report which I suppose to be that which is referred to:

The failure of the prune crop would have entailed very serious consequences on the trade of this region but for the

The failure of the prune crop would have entailed very serious consequences on the tgade of this region but for the large stock of California prunes which were held over from last year, and the sagacious enterprise of French dealers in securing early control of this year's crop on our Pacific coast. Bordeaux is the real center of the prune trade of the world. The methods of preparing this the manipulation it receives elsewhere, that California prunes brought here and repacked maintain the superiority of French prunes and are re-exported in large quantities to the United States. where they compete successfully with the American fruit which has not incurred the cost of a double exportation.

plicit. Last year (1963) for instance, there were almost no prunes raised in this region, probably not one-twentieth of a normal crop. The deficit was supplied by the importation of prunes grown in California and Oregon. This fact I know from having been required to make inspection of the condition of the hopportations and afterwards to such importations and afterwards take testimony in litigation result from controversies over the quality and salable character of such prunes.

Though the prune crop of this region was so small as to be almost a negligible quantity in the markets of the world, not enough, in fact, to supply the home demand, the export of French prunes was not materially lessened. A considerable portion to 95,000 francs ($18,835) in the last six to 95,000 francs ($13,335) in the last six months. I have been unable to get any information that any were shipped as "California prunes." None passing through this consulate were invoiced as nia prunes and French prunes as they come from the growers' hands is that the latter are "cooked." I have seen a few shipments of California prunes which seemed to have undergone some sort of process to assimilate the appearance of the French prune. I do not know what it was, but official experts here concluded that the same had been steamed and some viscid substance like giverine used to give the peculiar glis-difference in the result of treatment. The French prime is allowed to remain on the tree until it is thoroughly ripe and soft. Very often a considerable sortion of the grop falls of its own other, and the crates are then put in stone ovens raised to a temperature of about 40 degrees C. This very moderate heat is intended to remove the moisture of the fruit so gradually as to avoid breaking the skin by explosion. They remain exposed to it for several hours, according to the condition of the fruit, and are then removed and allowed to cool. When entirely cold they are replaced in the oven and the temperature raised to 80 degree C., and after a sufficient time again taken out and allowed to cool, after which they are replaced and the temperature raised to 90 degrees C., the whole process occupying from 30 to 40 hours.

Stone Easily Slipped out.

result of the saccharine which is brought to the surface by the long process of heating and cooling alternately. The fruit is thoroughly cured prunes, and is not liable to become dry or hard. After this treatment the fruit is sorted and packed in $6-pound cases and sold to the wholessle merchants and exporters. By these it is again sorted and put up in small floxes with various ornamentation. Those which are exported to the United States are sometimes packed in jars. They are used as sweetmeats and employed in the making of confectionery—not for cooking purposes. These require a special preparation which is a trade secret, probably varying in character with the different manufacturers. It is believed that the California prunes are dried in the open air, or at a much lower temperature than the Franch prune, and so are fitted for consumption, not as sweetmeats, but only when stewed or otherwise cooked as a table dish. The smaller sizes are usually dried and used for the making of jams and other fruit comeatibles.

The ovens which are used in the curing process to which the prunes are submitted here are of various sorts, some being of stone and others of metal, but there is nothing special about their construction requiring description. They are, simply ovens with hars or flanges to support the crates of fruit. This method of curing produces an altogether different result from the means by which the importer of Callfornia prunes prepares them for sale or export is by a process practically of the same character. Precisely what it is I am unable to say.

PATROLMAN PLACED ON MACADAM ROAD

Chief of Police Hunt today created a new beat, placing Mounted Policeman Hammersley in charge. It is the Macadam road, from Hamilton avenue, south Portland, to the city limits., It includes the course used by hundreds of people for driving and riding, and the object of placing an officer there is to keep down automobile speeding, of which there is a great deal, and to keep a general lookout over the road in cases of runaways or accidents.

"The district has long needed an officer," said Chief Hunt, "and I decided "The district has long needed an officer," said Chief Hunt, "and I decided yesterday to place one there. There is a great deal of riding and driving over the Macadam road, there have been several bad runaway accidents there and also automobile speeding. This will be stopped. The officer will be on duty from 3 to 11 p. m."

CURES NERVOUSNESS

There is a broad streak of hard luck that is pursuing Jack Day, well known locally as a fight-promoter. It landed an appearcut the other day from which he has not recovered.

The manager of the Portland Riding club had seen a horse on the streets which struck his fancy, and which was just the kind of animal the club needed.

which struck his fancy, and which was just the kind of animal the club needed. He agreed to pay the sum of $125 for the animal delivered at the club. The offer was accepted, and he owner was taking the horse to the new purchaser when it suddenly succumbed to an attack of congestion of the stomach.

Thinking the horse's death was certain, the owner save the animal to a grocer near the place where the animal fell. The grocer immediately began efforts to revive the animal.

It was about this time that Jack Day happened along. Mr. Day is said to have boasted on numerous occasions that he never saw a case of congestion of the stomach that he could not cure. So when the grocer offered to dispose of the stricken horse for the trifling sum of $10 the offer was like a pretty yellow fly to a mountain trout. Mr. Day accepted at once.

By means of derricks and carts he succeeded in removing the horse to his home, waire he devoted a week's constant attention to treating the ailing animal. The horse improved, and in the course of a week had recovered sufficiently to be pronounced cured.

It was after the cure was pronounced permanent that Mr. Day noticed a scratch on the animal's side. He remembered that in falling the horse had been cut with a rusty nail that lay on the street. No attention was given to
