PRETTY STORY OF SAILOR'S ROMANCE

TEAR AGO CONCORD GUNNER PELL IN LOVE WITH PORTLAND GIRL AND WHEN THE PAUL JONES COMES IT BRINGS RIM-SECRETLY MARRIES HIS CHOICE.

Charmed by the winsome graces of a Portland girl, Acting Quartermaster Inither Stevens of the destroyer Paul Jones, timidly asked Captain Davison for a few days' leave of absence as soon as the vessel anchored in the harbor. he slipped over to Vancouver and was married to Miss Myra Paunstone. All this happened on Wednesday, June 29. The very next day Stevens denied the water used for irrigation purposes. request was granted and then shyly

It was nearly a year ago that the courtship of Stevens began. At that time he was one of the men behind the guns on the Concord, which vessel, with guns on the Concord, which vessel, with the Marblehead, was in this port several days during last August. Mrs. Stevens is an expert oarsman, and one day she rowed by the white man-of-war as it lay anchored near the old steel bridge. When the rowboat and its fair crew rowed by the white warrior, Stevens was on the bridge of the Concord wig-wagging his captain's compliments to the "skipper" of the Marblehead and asking if their supply of iced tea had run out.

But when he saw Miss Paunstone, Berussel and Steel an

But when he saw Miss Paunstone, Stevens forgot how to wig, in fact he made up his mind that he did not care whether he ever wagged again. It was a case of love at first sight. After a case of love at first sight. After maneuvering about for several days to find a friend who would introduce him to the pretty earswomen, the young tar at last met the girl that had stopped for a time diplomatic connections between the two visiting warships. She, too, was giad they had met, and told the state of the transfer that the little row.

When the Paul Jones arrived in har-bor this time, Stevens was all ready to go ashore as soon as the "mud hooks" ped. He was met by the fair oars-in who had so charmed him a few ouths ago. Stevens was given a long ore leave by Captain Davidson, al-ough the skipper never dreamed that a happy sailor was to wed. Wednesday, June 29, Stevens and Miss

But lo, the very next day, when called upon by a Journal reporter, Stevens denied that he was married. He even said that he would give $5 to any one to find a girl that he could marry. He said that he was such a shy boy that he would rather face a Jap warship than to ask a girl to become his bride.

"This morning it was found out where Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were stopping. The house was rung up and the landlady answered the telephone."

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Prescott, Wash., July 9.—Mrs. Jane Waddell came near losing her life in this city today. She was walking along the banks of the river during a storm, when a sudden gust of wind struck her,
caught in her clothes and, lifting her from the ground, she descended in the river.

Mrs. Waddell did not lose her presence of mind and kept affoat, although the current was quite swift at the point where she fell into the water. After floating over 300 feet she managed to find a landing place and drew herself out of the water. Barring a cold drenching and a oad fright, the woman was uninjured.

ANCE DECIDED AT PENDLETON-COURT HOLDS THAT DISTRICT MUST ACQUIRE VESTED RIGHT BY LEGAL PROCEDURE.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Pendleton, Or, July 9.—Circuit Judge Ellis handed down an important and far-reaching decision this afternoon in the suit of the Little Walla Walla Irrigation district against O. N. Preston and other residents.

The court holds that before this can be done the district must acquire by legal procedure the vested rights which existed in the residents prior to the formation of the district.

W. A. Holmes, an O. R. & N. carpenter, was struck on the head with a shovel by M. J. Cane, a local yardmaster, following a difficulty in the yard this after-noon. A gash was cut four inches long on the head and the skull badly fractured. The blow may prove fatal. No arrest made as yet pending the result of

She, too, was giad they, had met, and told the sallor so. After that the little rowhoat had a first mate whenever it visited the vicinity of the warships.

At last ir came time for the great white ships to sail down the river and across the sea. Stevens had to follow the flag, but he left his heart behind for safe-keeping.

The sallor-lover was transferred to the destroyer a few weeks, after the Concord had sailed from Portland. The destroyer was then ordered to Panama. Letters passed meantime between the lovers.

The 19-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Robinson, 26 Water street, is the object of a search that has been going on for four days. Her father took her from home last Wednesday. He has placed her with some people, but where he refuses to teil. He declines to disclose the secret to Humane Officer Joseph Resing or Detective Hawley of the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society. The matter has been carried up to County Judge Wehster, in an effort to compel the father to make known the whereabouts of the child.

The baby is a twin whose mate died a year ago, and she is not healthy. She cannot walk.

The father and mother charge each other with gross neglect of the child, and the authorities are determined to the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the infant if the county was the charge of the child.

been quarreling since the baby was removed from the Water street home by the father, met on the steps leading to the municipal court room, and discussed the case. They grew loud in their de-nunciation of each other and parted, the father vowing he would never tell where the baby is, and the mother threatening to invoke the law to compel him.

Crying bitterly on the street at First and Oak, at 1:30 o'clock this morning. Policeman Johnson found Mrs. Wolf, wife of D. B. Wolf, a commission merchant, and the sweet reply. "Why?"

When told that her husband had denied that they were wed, she hesitated a minute and then gald:

"Oh, but we are. We just wanted to keep it quiet, that's all."

It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Stevens will make their future home in Los Angeles, although Stevens will spend much of his time during the next few months on the sea.

Special Policeman Childress, who walks the beat on which Wolf's commission house is located, also wanted Johnson to release Wolf, but he refused to do so.

In the melee Mrs. Wolf interfered and Johnson laid hold of her shoulder. She drew away and her slik waist was torn. There was a demonstration over the matter this morning, several prominent people calling at the central station to investigate.
