Prof. Van Cortland Is a Wizard!

Clairvoyant Performs Feats of Mind Readily.

Prof. Van Cortland Astonishes People Boads Thoughts and Tells Past and Puture-Insists Upon Giving Satis-

Perhaps the most skeptical people alive are the men who are connected with the news end of a daily paper. They see so much of the other side of life and are thrown necessarily in contact with frauds and impostors of all kinds that they are always inclined to look upon any one with suspicion until they are satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that they are straight. In other words they are "from Missouri, and you have to show them."

So yesterday when a newspaper representative was assigned to go to the rooms of Professor Van Cortiand, the astrologer, paimist and clairvoyant, to investigate the wonderful stories that have been told of him and to also establish whether his advertised claims were genuine or not, the reporter felt that he was going up against a good story, in which the exposure of a faker would be the theme.

When the professor came into the room the newspaper man was immediately attracted by his appearance. He bears none of the earmarks of the charlatan, but impresses you with his scholarly bearing and perfect deportment. He ushered the newspaper man into his conference room, and the first word he said to the scribe was to ask him to write him up exactly as he found him to be. If he was a quark, to say somall that he asked for was a square deal. He told the visitor to first write the name of himself, his mother and father on pieces of, paper, and also to write four inquiries on matters in which the scribe was most interested. He bid the reporter to do this writing after he had left the foom, and as soon as he had written the seven notes to ring a bell and he would return. The scribe was to first fold the papers and put them in his vest pocket. The professor walked out of the room, and after the reporter had written the notes a placed them in his vest pocket. The professor to only answered them correctly, but was the first fold the papers and put them in his vest pocket he was man of wonderful power of some kind, either that of telepathy, clairvoyance or astrology, but w

HE KNEW HIS BUSINESS.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.
A country vicar, who invited his flock once a year to supper in the school room, intrusted his handy man with the delivery of the invitation cards. A day or two before the function his rever-ence found the falthful fellow sitting by the roadside in an advanced state of hilarity.

"Good gracious, Jenkins, what does this mean?"

"I'm dud—dud—drunk, sir."

"So it seems. How did you get into this shocking state?"

"It's all along o' them cards, sir. I takes 'em round, and this 'un asks me to drink summat, an' that 'un asks me to drink summat, and so I gots like this."

"Why, this is terrible! Are there no temperance people in the parish?"

temperance people in the parish?"
"Lor, yes, sir, lots of 'em; but I send their cards by post!" NOW GREAT WAS HIS MURRY.

From the Louisville Herald.

"I have just come down from one of your little country towns." said F. M. Carson of Buffalo last night. "And while there I saw a great big. tall, husky-looking fellow, wearing, a broadbrimmed black hat and with a mustache of luxurious growth, come rushing into a barroom, saying:

"Hello, Bill! Give me a drink quick. I'm in a hurry."

"Sorry, John, but whisky's just gave out. Have to tap a new barrel in the cellar, I guess.

"'All right,' said John, the broadbrimmed man, I reckon I've got to wait; but hurry up with that drink. I just heard my house is on fire.

"John had his drink, the burning of his bouse to the contrary notwithstanding."

Auction Sales HOW SENATOR DAVIS RECEIVED THE NEWS

Democratic Nominee for Vice President Learns That What He Thought a Joke in the Convention Is a Reality.

From the New York American.
Standing on the station platform at Grafton, W. Va., when the Baltimore & that it was really Senator Davis and that Ohio section of the Tammany special from St. Louis drew into the depot, was a tall, scholarly looking man with a couple of telegrams in his hand which he had just been reading. His straw hat was pushed well back from his broad forehead. In his right hand he held a pair of gold-rimmed glasses. On the faintest shadow of a brakeman to see Foley.

whiteness, are features that do more to denote advanced age than any other. The whole bearing of the man denotes an alert, vigorous interest in life and the matters that appeal to him for ac-tion. He is not a dreamer, if his looks and conversation prove anything. But he is of a kind disposition. He laughs easily. He is the soul of good nature, and he is essentially democratic. He was dressed in an ordinary black wor-sted coat and vest, black-and-white striped trousers.

His popularity was manifested the moment he appeared on the station platform. While the Tammany men did not know him, there was not a trainman there down to the water-boy who did not recognize him at sight. They were not afraid of him, either. They crowded up to him, sure of a welcome every one, and they were not disappointed.

Senator Davis shook the grimy hand of the engineer without the least heritation and called him by his first name. He asked how the run had been, and whether he had had any trouble with certain grades that the senator, as a railroad man, knew as well as the man in overalls. He shook hands with the others of the train crew and received their railroad man, knew as well as the man in overalls. He shook hands with the others of the train crew and received their congratulations with a smile that lit up his face wonderfully. He admitted good-naturedly that he had just heard of the nomination himself and that it was a genuine surprise to him. It was at this juncture that some one of the train crew told Lender Tom Foley of the second assembly district of New yeen are Democrate, at least," said Sentor Davis, emphactically. "They are for the principles that true Democracy stands for."

held a pair of gold-rimmed glasses. On his face was the faintest shadow of a smile.

He was Henry G. Davis, Democratic nominee for the vice-presidency, though not one of the Tammany men who streamed forth from the train to get breakfast knew him. On the siding near by was his special car in which he had arrived from St. Louis shead of the special. The telegrams in his hand were from William Jennings Bryan and Sentary Hill, congratulating him on his nomination, and they gave him the first information of the honor tendered.

Henry G. Davis does not look his 81 years. To the casual'observer he would appear to be not more than 65. He is more than six feet tail, erect and straight as in the days of his youth. His shoulders are square. He is well muscled. He has a springy heel-and-toe walk. There is not the silphtest evidence of any loss of mental or bodily vigor in this choice of the Democrate for vice-president.

His face features are regular and hold. His nose is aquiline. His eyes gray and sharply penetrating, but withal kindly in expression and set wide apart. His face is not deeply furrowed, though fine wrinkles appear about the eyes. His beard and mustache, of snowy whiteness, are features that do more to denote advanced age than any other.

Senator, looking over the head or alarman to see Foley.

"Well, sir, I wish to congratulate you on your nomination," pursued Foley, shading the other's hand cordially. "Thank you," replied the senator give land wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could have found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could five found a grip that almost make him wince. "I think they could five found a grip asked.

"I think that Judge Parker's position will be acceptable to the people," he replied. "The country demands a gold standard and we will elect a Democratic ticket that accepts gold. I believe that the coming election will give victory to the Democratic ticket. I do not know that my name adds weight to the ticket, but I am willing to make it up in work."

"How did I learn of my nomination."

"How did I learn of my nomination," he repeated. "Why I have only known of it a very few moments. I received word just before your train pulled in. You see I came in ahead of you," and he pointed to the special train on the siding. "I was at the convention," he continued, "as a member of the subcommittee on resolutions.

with Bryan and sometimes with Hill. Some time previous to the opening of the convention I asked Bryan and Hill, who were standing together, who would be nominated for vice-president. In a jocular way Senator Hill said: You are the choice. I did not regard the remark at all seriously. I thought it merely a joke and paid no more attention to it. Bryan and Hill both laughed when the remark was made. After my work on

REV. CHARLES SEYMOUR BULLOCK AND HIS ACCUSER, MISS BELLE SHAILER.

(Special Dispatch to The Jennal.)
New Haven, Conn., July 16.—Rev. Charles Seymour Bullock of Stratford proved what is in effect a perfect alibi in his trial under charges brought by Belle Shaller, who declares that he is the father of her child. Her testimony last week declared that he attacked her at his home. January 12, 1203, when she had gone there to care for his children while his wife was absent.

Miss Emma Blakeslee, a fifty-year-old spinster of Mr. Bullock's congregation, testified that she cared for the little Bullocks that aight, and that Miss Shaller did not come near the clergyman's house. Letters brought out afterward, however, have shallon the jury's fatth in Dr. Bullock's alibi.
