MISS PAULINE ASTOR TO WED A BRITON

MISS PAULINE ASTOR, Only daughter of W. W. Astor, the richest heiress in England, and her flances torratic society were surprised last week when they read in Astor's Pall Mall Gazette the following paragraph: "A marriage has been arranged be-tween Miss Pauline Astor, daughter of William Waldorf Astor, and Captain H.

William Waldorf Astor, and Captain H. Spender-Clay."

Captain Herbert Henry Spender-Clay, once a captain in the Second life guards, was the last man that London society would expect to capture the greatest heiress in England. Mr. Clay has been known only in the speedy set of society. He is neither remarkably handsome nor unusually intelligent. In the west end Clay has been known as a plunger, He was born in 1878, and is the only son of the late Joseph Spender-Clay of Ford Manor, Lingfield, Surrey, who made a fortune in the shipping trade and by his connection with that British institution, the Bass Brewing company.

after dawdling through college, Clay entered the Second life guards as a subaltern and served as captain during 1901-1902, when he retired because of his connection with the "ranging" scan-dal at Aldershot. When his father died Clai came into a large fortune which he began to spend lavishly. He made many friends on the turf and the rapid set of society, becoming the chum of Lord William Nevill, son of the Mar-quis of Abergavenny. Clay's associa-tion with Lord Nevill brought him his first notoristy: Clay and Nevill were members of a house party at Ascot. One morning Nevill entered Clay's bedroom and asked Clay to oblige him by witnessing some papers. Nevill said the papers were private, dealing with the marriage set-

London, July 22.—Clubland and aristocratic society were surprised last ter and Clay signed his name four times.

Nevill covered the papers with a blotter and Clay signed his name four times.

In the autumn of 1897 the papers signed by Clay turned up as promissory notes for $55,000, in the hands of Sam notes for $55,000, in the hands of Sam Lewis, the notorious money lender. Clay declined to pay, and Lewis threatened that if the notes were unpaid he would prosecute Lord Nevill for forgery. The margin of Abergavenny, who is poor, offered to pay Clay to save his son, but clay hands been nown only in the speedy set of solety. He is neither remarkably handtried for fraud, convicted and sentenced to five years' penal servitude. Lord Nevill was released last autumn, when he wrote a book on his prison ex-

At the time of the trial society and clubdom denounced Clay, saying it was the duty of a wealthy man like Clay to save his chum from prison and the noble house of Abergavenny from dise grace. Abergavenny's large family connection of aristocrats cut Clay.

It is known that it was Mr. Astor's ambition to have his daughter marry a title, and at one time or another it has been reported that Miss Pauline was engaged to every eligible nobleman in England and on the continent. Her last titled wooer was Lord Brooke, the Earl of Warwicks' son. Two months ago it was announced after the Astors had visited the king of Roumania, that Miss Pauline was engaged to J. C. Bratiano, the Roumanian foreign secretary.

Obviously Miss Pauline did not agree with her father about the desirability arms, Lizzle C. Simmons; assistant Obviously Miss Pauline did not agree with her father about the desirability of marrying a title, although it is the gossip of society that she had the pick of the unmarried titles of all Europe outside the reigning families.

Miss Pauline Astor is an unusually attractive girl, with an unusual charm of manner. Clay is of the usual type of guardsmen—tall, blond-mustached and having a swagger manner. Society concedes that the match is purely one of having a swasger manner. Society concedes that the match is purely one of love. Last week Miss Pauline appeared in a society tableau with Mrs. Henry Slegel of New Tork, and on Friday night she attended her father's musicals, given in honor of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, who are the first royalties to cross the Astor threshold since the row with the king. With Miss Astor's marriage to ex-Captain Clay, disappears one hope of the Astor family being enhobled. Mr. Astor's son, Waldorf, is a tall, thin, unattractive youth, but he may, however, marry into a titled family, while since Mr. Astor has been restored to the favor of the king he himself may acquire a title.

Hounds Put a Mob to Flight. The police of Leuvan, Belgium, unable to disperse a violent mob of political demonstrators, last night let loose the great hounds which accompany them on their nightly patrol. The dogs threw themselves upon the crowd, which instantly scattered. Several persons were badly bitten.

HOP YIELD WILL

EFRESHING AND BOUNTIPUL MAINS CAUSE LANGE INCREASE IN PRODUCTION—SEASON'S CROP IN OREGON NOW ESTIMATED AT 100,000 BALES.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Salem. July 12.—Every day, as the growth of the hop vine progresses and the season of harvest approaches a new estimate is made upon the probable hop yield for the state of Oregon. A short time previous to the breaking up of the extended dry season the total yield was estimated as low as 65,000 bales for the state. At the same time, however, other dealers and authorities said there would not be less than 80,000 bales.

Since the visitation of the refreshing and bountiful rains the estimates of the yield have grown apace until yesterday one dealer. E. C. Herren, made bold to state in all seriodsness that the hop crop of Oregon, for this year, would not fall far short of 100,000 bales.

Granting that there has been an increased agreage of perhaps more than $,000 acres this year over last, other dealers contend that the new yards will yield practically nothing as a result of the dry weather, and say that the old yards will not bear anywhere near, as heavily as they did last year, and they still place the yield at in the neighborhood of between $5,000 and $0,000 bales.

Another good feature has developed of late, as a direct result of the warm, dry weather, and that is that there will be very few or practically no lice with which to contend this year, and the absence of lice means the absence of mold, and in that case, the did adage of "it is an fill wind that blows no good" fits in very nicely here. The opinions of dealers as to the ruling price for choice goods, at the opening of the 1904 market continue to vary between 20 and 25 cents.

JUDGE CHRISMAN AND COUNTY COMMISSIONERS EDWARDS AND PRICE RETURN PROM VIEWING HIGHWAY TO BLUE RIVER MINES -$5,000 TO BE EXPENDED.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Eugene, Or., July 22.—County Judge Eugene, Or., July 22.—County Judge G. R. Chrisman, County Commissioners H. D. Edwards and H. M. Price have just returned from the Blue River mines where they went on an inspection tour of the McKenzle road upon which $5,000 or more is to be expended in improvements this summer, a part of which will be appropriated by the county court and the remainder subscribed by the citizens of Eugene. The members of the court were amazed at the scope of operations at the mines. It is not generally known that Blue River is one of the liveliest mining camps on the coast, and that mining camps on the coast, and that several hundred men are employed there all the time.
