

DANGER IN FOREST AT EAGLE CREEK

Forest Blaze Breaks Out Afresh There and Burns Fiercely—Many of the Fires Are Reported as Under Control.

The principal danger point today from the forest fires is at Eagle Creek. There a renewed vigor was lent to the flames last night by strong winds from the east which attacked the green timber. Today heavy clouds of smoke obscure the sky and the fire is burning fiercely about three miles southeast of Eagle Creek, and most of them are now under control. A strong wind has sprung up from the south, and this will have the effect of driving the flames toward the town. All the sections and camps have had time to escape from the burning forest and most of them are now camped over on the north fork of Eagle Creek.

The town of Eagle Creek is a small trading point, with a few stores and houses on the O. W. & P. railway company's line, and has a considerable settlement in the surrounding country. Thus far no lives are reported lost, and settlers who live principally in the timber, however, have had time to escape with their stock and effects. Those who were within the burned district have lost their cabins, but these will be easily rebuilt. The principal destruction has been in the vicinity of Snag camp, on the divide between the Clackamas and Sandy rivers.

Less Smoke at Sandy.

In the vicinity of Sandy station and Gresham the fires are dying out and the sky is clearing. The smoke that has obscured the sky for the last week. No reports have as yet come to indicate loss of life or property, and it is believed that the destruction has been confined to the dead timber.

Less Smoke at Sandy.

The fire that broke out and burned fiercely near Barton yesterday was of small extent, and did not reach the O. W. & P. railway right of way. The fire about Boring and Damascus have destroyed some good timber and several hundred cords of wood, but have now burned themselves out and the danger is said to be past, unless winds spring up and fan the flames. John Wonnobuck, Sandy settler, today brought in the news that the fire which for some days looked very threatening between Gresham and Sandy are dying out and have burned only the dead timber, and that berry pickers have resumed operations in the woods that were threatened a few days ago.

Slashings' Fire the Cause.

The fires are said to have originated from the slashings of firwood and have spread on ground that was cut off during the spring. These slashings are now dry as tinder, and when they are burned during a windy day the embers are carried for miles and set fire to dry wood, especially in dead timber districts.

Southern Pacific timber cruisers who came in this morning from the burned district in the vicinity of Firwood and Sandy say that the fire is now completely under control, and there is but little wind. The burned district is chiefly an old burn, and the fire devoured only underbrush and dead timber. There were no settlers hurt in that locality, and the loss is nominal.

HEAVENLY TALKS IN COUNTY JAIL

Henry Creffield, self-styled "Joshua," the high Holy Roller apostle, has been kept busy at the county jail in the last few days, so he asserts, holding conferences with the Lord. He says he has received information from on high that there is a material hell and that when the wicked depart this life their bodies, as well as their souls, are tortured.

The apostle has employed a great deal of his time in reading a copy of the Bible. In view of his claims to the priesthood, the following from Malachi 1:7, which has been entered with a pencil mark, is interesting in this connection: "For the priests should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth; for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts."

BEATS HIS SON TO SECURE WAGES

Alex Rhipplemate, aged 14 years, was beaten by his father last night with a broomstick because he did not turn over to him the full amount of his time check, amounting to $1.15. He works at the American Can company's office and is the main support of the family, although the father is described as a large and powerful man, abundantly able to do hard work. Today the boy is in the hospital, his left forearm being broken. He is resting easily.

JOURNAL IS FOUND

"What!" exclaimed the judge, "the missing journal? Where did you get that book?"
Evans sat down and explained how he happened to have possession of the journal. Judge Webster listened in astonishment, and at length broke in with: "Do you know that two or three men have been arrested under suspicion of stealing that book? Do you know that suspicion has even been raised against some of the members of the bar?"
"No, I didn't know it," said Evans, "but I have read the beautiful mass of information out of it," naively answered the health officer. Then the court was unable to restrain himself and laughed heartily.

"If you had better tell Frank Fields about it right away, I believe he is going to have workmen tear all the steel compartments in the vault asunder, hoping to find the book behind some of the framework," he said.

Fields is Overjoyed.
When the book was taken to Mr. Fields he was the most surprised man in town. He grabbed the document and hung on to it like a father on to his long-lost son. His first question when he heard how the book had been secured was: "What clerk gave you this journal? He must have a memory as long as a man's thumb."

Mr. Evans couldn't remember from which one of the deputies he had procured the journal. The deputy himself has evidently forgotten loaning it. Attorney Freeman was notified of the discovery and inquired of the court house. He also was delighted to find the volume had not been lost or stolen.

The journal in question contains the only record of the early history of official Oregon in this country and which would have been irreplaceable. An idea of its importance, from a historical and reference point of view, is given by the first entry made in the book paragraphing, capitalizing and punctuating being followed:

SHIPS OF WAR ARE SENT TO TURKEY

The order to send warships to Smyrna was given by direction of the president after a consultation with the cabinet officers. Turkey's dilatory tactics in handling several important matters presented by Minister Leischman is officially given out as the cause. The state department, it is said, considers the recent evasions of promises by the Porte as almost tantamount to the insult of a year ago. Then Leischman had sought an interview with Sultan in order to present the matters referred to, and obtained it but a week ago, only to be again put off. It was soon agreed that the time had come to put out to the world the importance of giving attention to this country's requests.
