How Society Folk Are Keeping Cool During the Heated Term

THE city is still quiet and empty of social gayety, but already plans are being made for fall work. Students are preparing to leave next week for the early opening of Stanford and Berkeley. Musicians are interesting themselves in arrangements for choir work during the winter. However, a large number are just starting on their summer outings, and August promises to remain a quiet month.

The marriage of Mr. C. A. Bell and Miss Charlotte Mae Bennett at Gearhart was an interesting one. A number of other popular weddings have been celebrated. September promises several fashionable weddings.

The Oregon Development league convention attracted attention the first of the week, and was the occasion of some pretty social events.

The river baths have been very popular this week with people remaining in town. A number of small launching and boating parties have gone out every evening.

WHEN WE LEFT POOR PA AT HOME.

S. E. Kiser in Chicago Record-Herald.

My pa he said to ma and me,
That he don't want no trip this year,
'Cause everything's so high, you see—
He said he'd have to stay right here.
"You two can go," he says to ma,
"I'll trp to get along some way,
It does beat all I ever saw,
The prices that they make us pay.
Take Willie where you'll have fresh air
And board ain't very high and I'll
Stay here and work on like a Turk,
And we'll save money for awhile."

It worried ma to have to go,
Because she had a tender heart;
She claimed she'd rather stay, although
She kept on packin' things to start.
"Poor pa," she said, "he's tired out,
And needs a change, he's all run down."
And pa looked sad and talked about
How lonesome he'd be here in town.
"But you and Willie go," he said,
"I couldn't get away, just now"—
And ma she stroked his weary head
And kissed him on the wrinkled brow.

Ma packed three trunks and her and me
Left pa to stay at home and slave;
We didn't travel to the sea,
Because, you know, we had to save.
There wasn't anything to do,
They had no style of any kind
Around the place she took me to,
