FINDS HIS PARENTS.
Kansas Boy Restored to Relatives After 17 Years.
 From the Kansas City Journal.
 Julius Spears of Saline county, aged 20 years, has just been restored to his relatives, after having been separated from them ever since he was 3 years old, and having never, as far as he can remember, heard of them. Young Spears' parents lived in Illinois. One night Willard Spears, the father, disappeared, taking his youngest child, Julius, with him. He went to Arkansas, and later came to Missouri, locating near Camden. The father died several years ago, leaving him without any knowledge whatever of his connections. While in Bedford, Ill., a short time ago, a man from Marshall met a family named Spears. Conversation revealed that they were relatives of Julius Spears; and the old mother has recently had restored to her the son whom she thought she had lost forever.

THE PATRON OF CITY LIFE.
 Mrs. Kelly, in McClure's.
 "Indeed, yes," the lady reassured the little band of East Side pilgrims; "this is Central Park."
 "It has looks of the country," Eva commented. "We're all, all healthy, and the country is for sick children."
 "The Central Park is awful pretty," Sadie soliloquized, as she lay on her back and watched the waving branches and blue sky far away. "Awful pretty! I like we should live here all the time."
 "Fair warning."
 From the Chicago News.
 Patient—"It's up to you, doctor. If you fail to cure me you'll get nothing for your services."
 Doctor—"How's that?"
 Patient—"I haven't money enough to pay both you and the undertaker."

Salmon Angling Is a Most Costly Investment

From the New York Sun.
 Quebec.—Enormous sums of money are expended by the American salmon fishermen who are at present flocking into eastern Canada as usual at this time of the year.

Apart from other expenses the cost of the fishing rights is often great. The rate of increase in values is illustrated by the fact that the angling of the Restigouche and its tributaries was leased some years ago for $100,000 and is still catching salmon in Canada for $150 a year, while thousands of dollars are now paid annually for the right to fish the waters of these rivers, controlled by the government, and $500,000 would not suffice to purchase the remaining riparian rights. Nearly 400,000 has actually been paid to riparian proprietors on the Restigouche by the present holders of fishing rights.

The largest owner of these rights at present is the Restigouche Salmon club, one of the most notable concerns of the kind in the world. Its membership includes thirty multi-millionaires and numbers at present but 33 in all. Its shares are eagerly sought at $10,000 each.

The headquarters and main clubhouse of the Restigouche are situated at Metapedia, at the junction of the Metapedia and Restigouche rivers. Here the members of the club who have fished by day, wearing the usual attire of anglers in the woods, must observe the club's rule of abstaining from dining for dinner. A New York chef supervises the preparation of the meals, and the dining-room has been the scene of many a good fishing story from such past masters of the art as Harry Hollis and late Dean Sage, the late Robert Golet, the Rev. W. B. Rainford and the late Dean Hoffman. Among others who are now, or have been, members of this famous club, are William K. Vanderbilt, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Henry W. De Forest, Philip Schuyler, Henry T. Sloan, Stanford White, Arthur D. Weekes, William E. Dodge, Robert G. Dunn, R. Walr. Mitchell, John Kennedy, John L. Cadwalader and William L. Rreeze.

Voluntuous Deeds.
 It would require a pretty large chest to hold all the title deeds in virtue of which the Restigouche Salmon club exercises its fishing rights. It is interesting to note that for the New Brunswick side of Tom's Brook and Indian House posts, the sum of $7,500 was paid in 1887, while the Quebec side of the Indian House property, all the way down to about one mile below Tom's Brook, cost $25,000 in 1895. Yet in 1890 S. and J. Wilnot bought the same property for $1,500. The difference in its value was thus $23,500 per cent in 15 years. The Patapedia pools were acquired by the club in 1894 for $25,000, the sellers having paid $2,500 for them in 1882 to the resident proprietors. High prices have also been paid for salmon fishing on the Restigouche by individual American sportsmen.

In 1890 the late Robert Golet purchased the Moore property, about six miles from Metapedia, on the Quebec side of the Restigouche, for $20,000. Yet he fished this water, which is about three-quarters of a mile in extent, only on two occasions, and then with poor success. The property was sold to the late Dean Sage, who in 1887 it cost Mr. Golet about $5,000.

Increase in Value.
 The Sweeney and Dean Sage estate properties at the mouth of the Estapitch, seven miles from Metapedia, were originally purchased from resident proprietors between 1870 and 1885, for about $5,000. The Sweeney lots are now held by Mr. Payne of Cleveland, who paid $25,000 for them in 1895. The late Dean Sage sold part of his rights on the New Brunswick side to his friend, Mr. Clyde of New York, for $7,000. Harry Hollis became the proprietor some 10 years ago of the Brandy Brook pool and neighboring waters, paying $15,000 for them.

And the salmon-fishers' angling outfit may be as expensive as he cares to make it. The flies are worth from 60 cents to $1.25 each, and good casting lines, strong enough to hold the king of fresh water fish, cost from $4 to $7 apiece. Rods, reels and lines command equally high prices.

Unless the fish are extremely plentiful, it is not too much to say that the salmon taken by anglers costs them from $5 to $25 a pound.

UNION OF CHURCHES.
 From the Pendleton East Oregonian.
 The East Oregonian's ideal of religious worship is now being carried out in Pendleton. The seven protestant churches have united in a series of union meetings, and will hold the services at the different churches on different nights. This is the true Christian spirit that, underlies all the teachings of the Nazarene and the only one that can allow of the fullest realization of Christian ideals. There is no more need of seven different churches in any community than there is need for seven Gods in heaven. From a religious, economic and scriptural standpoint, union of the present scattered creeds is the only logical solution of the problem.

Lachlin pays $900 a year for the Dartmouth. The St. John's Salmon club of Boston pays $700 per annum for the St. John's of Gaspe, and Thomas Murdoch of Chicago pays $650 a year for the York river.

Refuses $100,000.
 Louis Cabot of Boston owns the entire lower part of the Grand River of Gaspe, where the best fishing is to be had in the stream, and though it cost him a mere trifle he has refused for it an offer of nearly $100,000. Though not very large, as salmon rivers go, it is one of the most picturesque in the country and contains very large fish, salmon between 30 and 40 pounds in weight being common in it.

The lease or purchase of fishing rights is of course only the beginning of the salmon fisherman's outlay. Unless he is satisfied to live in tents, a camp is required.

Mountstephens's fishing lodge at Metis cost him $4,000. Many anglers are satisfied with more moderate quarters, however.

There are canoes to be provided, food, and experienced guides, cooks, etc., are necessary to comfort both in camp and upon the river. There is also the question of supplies and of transporting them from Quebec or Montreal to the fishing camp.
