Dr. Roland D. Grant preached yesterday morning and evening to large audiences at First Congregational church. In the evening his subject was: "Samson and His Fair Delliah." The speaker read from the Bible an account of Samson's hirth. "Samson became reckless if his great strength." said he. "After he became reckless he became a slave to a passion. The moment a man becomes a slave to a passion, no matter what it is, that moment he becomes an absolute wreck." Dr. Grant then told of Delliah and Samson's surrender to her of the secret of his strength and the betrayal of his secret to his enemies. Then the story of the awakening was told and Samson's prayer for an opportunity to redeem himself, and the answer to his prayer.

There seemed to be a lively spirit of rojoleing along the river when the trim and fleet steamer Charles R. Spencer resumed her run between Portland and The Dalles this morning. Led by the engineer of the Burnside street bridge, there was a general screeching of whistles all along the harbor, denoting the pleasure with which the handsome craft was welcomed back into service again. The boat started out with a fine complement of passengers and freight, and dashed away as nimble as a lad on a skating pond. The Spencer will leave foot of Washington street Monday, Wednesday and Friday, returning from The Dalles on alternate days. She will stop at all way landings.

With the completion of the proposed ensolidation of street railways in Portconsolidation of street railways in Portland and election of new officers, the people of Fairview expect some kind of a proposition from the company for extension of the Montavilla line to that point, and also to Troutdale. The line could be run eastward as far as the Vance road, thence northward half a mile, and then through Fairview and on to Troutdale. An extension down the Sandy river to the bank of the Columbia would result in the starting of a ferry at LaCamas. Such a road would be of benefit to the tributary country and would add to Portland's retail trade.

BISHOP PREACHES

His sermon yesterday was taken from the words contained in the eighth chap-ter of Acts, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" He urged his hearers to read the Bible understandingly and believe it. He described the Bible as a book for all ailke, and said that its teachings are better understood by the simple-hearted than great scholars and critics. Said he:

Funeral services over the body of F.

X. Auer, aged 76 years, were held yesterday at Holman's chapel, under the auspices of the German Aid society, of which he was a charter member. According to his wish, the body was incinerated in the Portland crematorium.

Critics. Said he:

"Happy is the scholar who knows how to come to a book as a man and not as a critic. It is conceded that all Christians do not read a book alike, but each in his own way. But they all agree that this book is inspired by God and is here by divine authority and sanction for the guidance of manki-1."

Cranston was read at the close of the service, and was endorsed by a rising vote of the congregation.

ROBBERS RETURN

PEREE MEN HOLD UP JOHN LANCE AND BOB HIM OF $150 - THEY GIVE HIM BACK SS AND THEN QUICELY ESCAPE—NO TRACE OF

A peculiar hold up was perpetrated last night at 10 o'clock on the steel bridge, John Lance, a race horse owner, being the victim. He was robbed of $150 by three masked and armed men, one of whom he says was a negro. After stripping him of every cent he possessed, the highwaymen handed back $5, saying he might need it. They then left and Lance reported the case to Policemen Baty and Burks.

Captain Moore detailed officers to investigate the story told by Lance and to endeavor to effect the capture of the bandits. No trace of them could be found, however.

It is believed by Lance and also by the police that the men who turned the trick were amateurs, probably transient hoboes, many of whom are making their headquarters in the city at present.

There being no rock pile, and it being the custom of the chief of police to release all vagrants the morning after their arrest, Deputy City Attorney Fitzgerald says there could be no better incentive to crime.

The three men met Lance as he was coming up the stairs from the first deck of the bridge. They ordered him to throw up his hands, but did so in such a peculiar manner that he laughed at them.
