

DIG UP BONES SO SOULS MAY REPOSE

Last Relics of 60 Chinamen Are Exhumed at Lone Fir and Will Be Buried in the Orient to Enable Souls to Enter Heaven.

Sixty funeral urns, containing the former tenements of 60 celestial souls, have just been shipped to China from Lone Fir cemetery to be buried in the Flowery Kingdom for future resurrection. The work of exhuming the bodies was begun two weeks ago, and has been practically completed.

It is a custom universally observed by Chinamen. Whenever a yellow corpse is buried in any country foreign to his native land it is the Chinese belief that his soul flies wanton throughout space until the body is transported across the sea. It is only within the mighty walls of the Flowery Kingdom that the dead shall rise on the resurrection day.

Now They Will Rise.

When Gabriel's slant-eyed prototype shall sound his bugle note upon that day there will be a universal arising of the Chinese dead. Hundreds of millions of souls will shake off the pall of death and, reincarnated in the bodies they possessed before death, shall do homage to the great Confucius for the rest of eternity. But there is eternal doom for him who sleeps outside the great walls of the empire. Beyond that barrier the sound of the bugle cannot penetrate the sea. He will sleep forever, unredeemed and lost eternally.

Because of this religious belief, no pious Chinaman will permit a relative or friend to remain buried in a distant land. At intervals of every eight or ten years the foreign cemeteries are robbed of their dead and the bones are shipped back to the orient for burial.

For many days Chinamen have wended their way out to Lone Fir, many bearing small bundles wrapped in paper or in cloth. And on their return they also frequently carry the small bundles, though they have grown in weight. Few passengers on the cars have been aware of the gruesome nature of the contents of the bundles. The work of exhuming the bodies, however, has been under the care of white workmen. The dirt upon the grave is cast away and in case the coffin is strong enough to withstand the weight a living Chinaman, who chatters and laments, is lowered into the grave. He takes the small urn and carefully places within it the dried bones of his countryman.

Many Relics Found.

Many quaint and curious relics have been found inside the graves. Coins of ancient date have been found in profusion that were placed upon the eyes of the dead Celestial to pay his fare across the Styx. Silks of costly texture, brought from far Cathay, have been found wrapped round the body, while bowls which had contained rice and other articles of food have also been found.

Many years ago war broke out in Portland between two rival gangs of Highlanders. Murders were frequent. Hop Loy, a wealthy Celestial, finally yielded up his life to the murderous gang and was buried in Lone Fir. He was found a few days ago and beside him were two long, rusty revolvers. When the body was interred the dead Chinaman was armed by his friends who desired that on his journey across the grave he should be armed and deal out bitter retribution to his slayers. His exit from life was hasty and he was unable to prepare himself for the undertaking, so his friends placed the weapons beside him.

The bodies that were exhumed were placed in a small zinc urn and placed aboard a ship for transportation. The urn is made with only a narrow opening which is hermetically sealed when the bones are placed inside.

Officials at the cemetery declare that there were between 50 and 60 dead Chinamen removed within the past two weeks. No bodies were removed that had not been dead for at least six years. And only those upon which decomposition has been practically completed are exhumed. There are between 500 and 600 Chinamen buried in Lone Fir.

BROWNELL SAYS HE DOESN'T LIKE PLUMS

Bland and smiling, George C. Brownell came over from Oregon City this morning.

"How are you this morning?" he said with a handclasp that was affectionate in its warmth. "Yes, I am out of the race for president of the senate. You see I have had two terms and that was enough. I really didn't want it again. There are lots of other things, you know, besides the presidency of the senate."

"What, for instance?"

"Well," said the Clackamas statesman, with a smile, "there is a plum tree in my yard that is just loaded down with plums, and if I want one all I have to do is to pick it. But I didn't want anything and I didn't ask Mitchell or Fulton for a thing. Now you see how I really didn't want anything. And the way, who doesn't want anything hurried away."

"No," he said, "I never thought of such a thing. You are too far away anyway."

"And the way, who doesn't want anything hurried away."

PARK SCHOOL IS SAVED BY CHANCE

The new Park school, which has just been rebuilt after destruction by fire last year, narrowly escaped burning a second time yesterday afternoon. A small portable school building that stands at the corner of West Park and Jefferson streets, on the same lot with the big school, has been used as a storehouse by painters and other workmen, and a man passing about 5:30 last evening saw flames inside. He called help and with an axe forced open the door. A bench and quantity of paint and other things were found on fire. The fire was quickly extinguished. The damage to burned materials amounted to about $15.

HORSE BOLTS WITH LOAD OF DYNAMITE

With a 25-pound box of dynamite in his buggy, the horse of H. Jennings of Albina took fright at the corner of Third and Salmon streets this afternoon and ran away. Soon after starting the light rig collided with a heavy express wagon and turned over on its side.

The heavy box of giant powder was thrown violently to the rear of the buggy. The box was burst open, but the powder did not explode. There was a crowd gathered on the corner at the time, and if the dynamite had exploded many lives might have been lost.

The little yellow cayuse became more frightened than ever after the collision, and it ran up Salmon to Fourth, and thence up Fourth until the city wall was reached, where a boy ran after the animal and stopped the animal.

As soon as Mr. Jennings found that his horse and buggy were gone he hastened after the runaway, and after a long chase he was able to capture the animal. The box was burst open, but the powder did not explode. There was a crowd gathered on the corner at the time, and if the dynamite had exploded many lives might have been lost.

The arrests came about in a peculiar manner. Policemen L. C. Fones initiated during an address on discipline given this morning by Captain Bailey, and the wagon was dispatched to take him

KNIGHTS THROUGH WESTERN RESORTS

DELEGATES TO TEMPLAR CON-CLAVE HAVE CONGESTED YELLOWSTONE PARK AND COAST HOTELS AND STILL CONTINUE TO ARRIVE.

There is only one way for the Knights Templar at this season and that is to "Frisk." From all points of the compass the Golden Gate city is the Mecca. This morning the initial eastern contingent passed through Portland. More than 4,000 are en route over the Northern Pacific railway and more than half of them are taking in the trip through Yellowstone park.

The transportation and hotel companies in the great national playground are being taxed to their limit and will continue to be until the pilgrimage is over. They are taking care of the Templars at the rate of 250 per day, which almost precludes the presence of unattached visitors at the park hotels. The park is a revelation, declared Herbert L. McKinney of Chicago, a member of the board of trade and a well known broker. "The education of young America is not completed until a visit has been paid there."

Speaking about the big meat strike, Mr. McKinney declared that settlement was apparently a long way off and that until it was reached the suffering among the masses was acute.

"The worst stage has not been reached yet and almost prohibitive prices are sure to reign in the east even after the strike's settlement."

The following program has been arranged for the entertainment of the visiting Knights Templar tomorrow:

8:00 a. m.—Reception committee will meet at the Portland hotel.

8:30 a. m.—Grand Commander George H. Hill and committee will meet party at Union depot.

8:30 a. m.—Visit to fair grounds and drive about city.

10:00 a. m.—Take cars at Twenty-third and Washington street to "Loop the loop."

11:00 a. m.—Visit Scottish Rite cathedral. Received by P. S. Malcolm, brief organ recital.

12:00 noon—Arrive Portland hotel.

1:00 p. m.—Lunch.

2:00 to 3:30 p. m.—Reception in the parlors of the Portland hotel.

All sir knights and their ladies are required to attend and assist. Refreshments. Band.

4:00 p. m.—Party leaves for San Francisco.

(Journal Special Service.)

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—While his two little children looked on, and he himself was held helpless in a poundman's dog net, Rudolph Schultz, a boat builder, was shot to death by a poundman yesterday evening. He dragged himself to his own steps and died with a little girl's kiss upon his lips.

The poundman was pursuing a pet dog belonging to Schultz's little daughter, Ethel. Schultz interfered to save the dog, when one of the poundmen threw the dog net over his head and shoulders, rendering him helpless.

Gustav Scherf, a dog catcher, who sat on the wagon 50 feet away, fired his pistol and the bullet passed through Schultz's body near the heart. Schultz was then freed from the net and staggered to the steps of his home where his daughter was waiting. He said: "Kiss me, Ethel." Their lips met and the father fell dead. Passing a lodging house near Patrick Douglas' saloon, at 55 Third street, he was accosted by a young woman, and after a short conversation there went into the Acorn saloon, where Smith purchased the drinks, tendering in payment a $20 gold piece. The bartender was unable to change it, and Smith went out to get it changed, followed by the girl. Shortly afterwards he returned and said the $20 was missing from his pocket, and asked the bartender if a mistake had not been made in handing back his money. An investigation was made, but the bartender succeeded in concealing himself, and the police are now looking for the young woman.

INDIAN POKE POSTING NOTICES

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Pendleton, Or., Aug. 25.—Indian police are posting notices on the Umatilla reservation warning campers, fishermen and hunters to keep off. The trespass notices are signed by Acting General Agent Charles E. McNichols, and the official declares that he will prosecute to the fullest extent of the law any violations of his order.

"I do not wish to work any hardship," said the superintendent, "but by the terms of the old government treaty with the Umatillas the whites are not supposed to come on the reservation without authority. Pleasure-seekers and hunters have long disregarded this and have even gone so far as to grow insolent when ordered off the private allotments of the Indians. Then too much intoxicating liquor finds its way to the reservation and makes it difficult for the officers to enforce order among the Indians."
