

LEWIS AND CLARK DAY AT ST. LOUIS

Fenton Delivers Stirring Address While More Than 100 Descendants of Explorers Listen—Lewis' Grand-Daughter Present.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 St. Louis, Sept. 22.—Today there was celebrated at the world's fair one of the most interesting of the special days, inasmuch as there was represented in the exercises the claim of the far west for a hearing in its exposition commemorating the Lewis and Clark explorations.
 Virginia also celebrated today, but its participation was in a measure eclipsed by the exercises in the Oregon state building which took place at 11 o'clock this morning. One hundred and twenty prominently and has attracted the attention of St. Louis residents, which is that this is the 88th anniversary of the return of the explorers to this city.
 On the platform was Mrs. Carolyn Douglas, aged 70 years, the granddaughter of Lewis who, with Clark, explored the northwest territory. She came to St. Louis from Nashville, Tenn., on flying trip to participate in the Lewis and Clark day exercises. She only learned at 8 o'clock Thursday evening that the celebration had been fixed for today.
 The aged woman was presented with a beautiful bouquet of roses by Col. H. E. Dorsch, director of exhibits of the Lewis and Clark exposition to be held at Portland next year.
 About 500 persons, 100 of whom are descendants of the two famous explorers, attended the exercises.
 The leading features of the exercises which were participated in by President Francis and several other notables was the address by William D. Fenton, a prominent attorney from Portland, who gave an exhaustive and exceptionally interesting review of the explorations which led to the discovery of Oregon and the subsequent battle for its rights which has led that state to such a prominent position.
 Fenton's address.
 "This great territory lying west of the Mississippi," said the speaker, "and extending from Mexico on the south to the British North America upon the north and to Behring sea in the far northwest," said the speaker, "is the people of the Oregon country in particular, and comprising that portion of the United States within the limits of the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and parts of Montana and Wyoming, have undertaken to commemorate the great Lewis and Clark expedition by the exposition at Portland and to invite the world to participate in an exhibition of the acts, industries and products of modern civilization.
 "The scope and extent of this enterprise must necessarily fall far below the great world's exposition which now so richly celebrates the centenary of Louisiana territory; but in point of completeness, in the extent and richness of its exhibits, in the attractiveness and wealth of natural production, in the scope and extent of its territory, in the courage and helpfulness of its people and in the amount of money in proportion to population to be invested, this exposition will be credit to our people and worthy the support and patronage of all the states and territories and of all the foreign governments that can participate.
 "Naturally inquiry will be made, what has been done up to date toward this great enterprise, and what are the prospects of its complete success? Let the record speak for itself.
 State Appropriations.
 Amounts of money voted by states, are as follows:
 Oregon, for general state exhibit, $400,000; Oregon, for Lewis and Clark Memorial building, $150,000.
 For general state exhibits there have been made the following appropriations:
 California, $20,000; Montana, $10,000; Idaho, $10,000; Utah, $10,000; Missouri, $10,000; Nevada, $10,000; North Dakota, $10,000; Minnesota, $10,000; Arizona, $10,000; Virginia, $10,000; New York, $25,000; Massachusetts, $15,000; a total of $550,000.
 Its importance.
 After reviewing the objects of the exposition Mr. Fenton said:
 "The population of the city of Portland is 1,300,000; within 500 miles is 1,300,000, and approximately there is the same population within a radius of 300 and 500 miles of San Francisco.
 "Notwithstanding the Pacific ocean lies west of the city of Portland, only 50 miles distant, thus cutting off the possibility of settlement and population, there are more people within 500 miles of the city of Portland than within 500 miles of the city of Denver. The distance across the Pacific ocean is meas-

INTERMENT OF THE REMAINS OF HENRY WEINHARD TAKES PLACE AT RIVERVIEW—FLOOR OFFERED AS BEAUTIFUL—REASONS IN CHARGE.

One of the largest funeral processions ever witnessed in this city followed the remains of Henry Weinhard this afternoon from the family residence to Riverview cemetery, where the body was laid to rest in impressive ceremonies conducted by the Masonic order.
 All through the morning there was a continuous line of messengers carrying floral tributes to the residence, where the flowers were received by friends of the family and placed around the casket. Two rooms in the palatial home were filled by the floral offerings. During the morning many intimate friends called to view the remains, and between the hours of 12:30 and 1 o'clock the same privilege was granted the general public.
 The services began at 2 o'clock and were brief and simple. The music was provided by the Arion society and the sermon was delivered by the Rev. John Gantenbein, an old friend of the deceased. The services at the house occupied not more than 35 minutes, and the long cortege in charge of Funeral Director Holman then made its way to the cemetery. Every carriage in the street in line. At Riverview the Masonic rites were followed by a fervent prayer offered by Mr. Gantenbein.
 During the time of the funeral there was a general observation of the request of the retail liquor dealers that all liquor houses be closed, and in every way respect was shown the memory of Henry Weinhard.
 Amongst the numberless floral tributes was a piece six feet high from the brewery employes. Another beautiful design came from the retail liquor dealers of the city, while hundreds of personal friends sent flowers.
 At a meeting of the Manufacturers' association yesterday the following resolutions were adopted:
 "Whereas, the long and well-spent life, Henry Weinhard has been called from the busy scenes of this world; and
 "Whereas, in his death the Manufacturers' association of the northwest city called upon to mourn the loss of one of its oldest and most highly honored members, as a tribute to his memory, and in appreciation of a strong and forcible character, a large-hearted and true friend. Be it
 "Resolved, That the Manufacturers' association of the northwest sincerely mourns with his family, his friends and his fellow citizens the death of Henry Weinhard, and recognizes in his passing away a distinct and grievous loss to the community in which he had won for himself an enviable and honorable place of sterling integrity, rugged, upright, kindly character and unflinching prudence and enterprise; and be it further
 "Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the records of the association, and that a copy of same be forwarded to the family of the deceased, with expressions of heartfelt sympathy for their grief and loss."

Referring to western manufactures the speaker said:
 "The output of the manufacturers of California, Oregon and Washington in 1900 was $435,470,250, and California, has yielded between 1848 and 1900 $1,285,197,097, or about one eighth of the total gold production of the world since the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492. The states lying west of the Mississippi river in 1900 produced 99.6 per cent of the nation's gold, 98.3 per cent of its silver, and 18.1 per cent of its coal.
 "The state of Texas with 64,300 square miles of wood area is the first state of the Union in timber. Oregon is second, with 44,500 square miles. Minnesota third, with 33,200 square miles, while the states of Oregon, Washington and California have at least one third of the standing timber of the country.
 "In quantity of standing timber Oregon leads the Union with 23,000,000,000 feet, California with 20,000,000,000 feet, and Washington third with nearly 19,000,000,000 feet.
 "In an eloquent peroration he closed as follows:
 "And so in like manner these two illustrious Virginians—Lewis and Clark—have made immortal the name of the American traveler and explorer.
 "They were the forerunners of that gospel of civilization and conquest that has brought a mighty empire under the sway of the American nation.
 "They and their descendants have founded commonwealths whose teeming shores millions shall be the flowers of all that is best in the modern world.
 "Let us venerate their noble deeds, and from the abundant wealth of our country fittingly celebrate, next year, the centenary of American diplomacy, daring and exploration—their memorable labors which have enriched us as a nation, and made us leaders of the world in all the arts of peace and war."

TO PUT ON PLAY WITHOUT A NAME

Arrangements were completed today for the initial presentation of Melvin G. Winstock's new melodrama to take place at Corday's theatre during the week of October 3. It will be produced by James Keene, who purchased the play from the author.
 Mr. Winstock originally called the play "His Last Drink," but that title, while it is fitting, can be improved upon, the author believes, and he is going to give the public a chance to select a different title. The melodrama will be advertised as the unnamed play until after its presentation and after it has been seen, anybody may suggest a title for it. The one who suggests the best name will receive a prize of $25. The dramatic editors of Portland's three daily papers will be asked to officiate as judges of the suggestions.
 The entire production will be built in this city.

ROAD SUPERVISOR HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Road Supervisor Baybrook had a narrow escape from death, when his horse and buggy went over a cliff on the Helens road, on Germantown hill, yesterday. He got out of the buggy just as the edge of the bank crumbled under the wheels. County Commissioner Lightner assisted the road supervisor out of his predicament.
 Mr. Lightner had just passed the road supervisor after some trouble at a narrow place in the road, when Mr. Baybrook's horse attempted to jump a fence and follow the commissioner's animal. Being that horse and vehicle must inevitably go over the cliff, the supervisor leaped for his life. His feet did not touch the ground, however, that the rig and animal the bottom of the gulch, 30 feet below.
 Horse, buggy and harness became entangled in one confused mass over a large log. After hard work the horse was released and found to be uninjured. What was stranger, the buggy was not materially damaged. The horse was hauled out until this morning.

POLICE FALL OUT; GUN PLAY FOLLOWS

A sensational encounter is said to have taken place between Policemen Miller and Sloan and Frank Dolan, members of the first relief, this morning, after they had reported off duty at the central station. It ended in a gun play, when Dolan put a bullet through the chest of Sloan, who was lying on the ground in front of the Labbe building, where Sloan lives. The quarrel is not settled yet. Charges will probably be filed before the police commission.
 Dolan was reported to Chief Hunt by Sloan as having been too long a time in a certain saloon, it is said, and was reprimanded by his superior officer. Smarting under the reprimand, he set about to ascertain who "tipped" the matter to the chief. He found that Sloan was the man, and followed him, after being dismissed by Captain Moore at 1 o'clock this morning.
 Sloan, who lives in the Washington streets, Dolan caught up with Sloan, who went straight to the Labbe building, where he lives, and challenged him to fight. It is said, Sloan realized for the first time that his brother officer had been "tipped" on him, and was very much surprised. Both are powerful men, the physical giants of the first relief, and at a moment a battle royal was in prospect.
 Sloan put a sudden stop to the proceedings, incidentally putting Dolan to flight by drawing his revolver and advising Dolan to "move on."
 Dolan did so.
 Prior to the saloon trouble, it is said, Sloan and Dolan were good friends.

WESTERNER, WITH A GUN, SAVES PROPERTY

New York, Sept. 22.—A westerner with a big revolver put tenderloin thieves to rout at an early hour this morning and got back $20,000 in jewelry, mostly diamonds, which had been stolen from him. He registered at the Holland house, and when he did so pulled two big bags of gold out of his grip and asked the clerk to put them in the safe.
 His fingers were a little shaky, he admitted with diamonds. He left the hotel in the evening and did the tenderloin thoroughly, and returned at 2 o'clock.
 On his arrival at the hotel he discovered the loss of his valuables. He promptly got a revolver and started to find a man and woman whom he met in a tenderloin resort and whom he suspected. In a very short time he reported with his property, and my street in a restaurant. "Forty-three people," said the westerner, "and the sight of my gun was enough." The man's name was not ascertained.

VICTORIA ARRIVES AT SEATTLE WITH ADVISORS TO EFFORT THAT THREE STEAMERS ARE OF BEACH IN NORTHERN SEA AND MAY BE SMASHED TO PIECES.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Seattle, Sept. 22.—The side wheel steamer Sadie, the schooner Duxbury and the schooner Lily L. are piled up on the shores of Bering sea. This is the advice brought to Seattle by the steamer Victoria arriving from Nome. The Sadie, when the Victoria left Nome, was in danger as it a storm should arise, she would be battered to pieces. The Duxbury stood a good chance of being ground to pieces in the surf while the Lily L. was already a total loss.
 The Sadie lies on the beach at Cape York. She was wrecked on the afternoon of September 10. The Duxbury is on the beach at Nome and the Lily L. is beached at East Cape. The members of all the crews reached shore safely in small boats.
 The Sadie was operated by the Northern Commercial company as a passenger and freight boat. Between Nome, St. Michael and points as far north as Kotzebue sound. There is no cause assigned for her disaster other than the master mistook the depth of the water. The extent of the damage to the Duxbury was not known. The Victoria sailed. She is a wooden vessel and is not believed to be strong enough to weather a storm in her present position. She is owned by Bellingham parties and went north with a cargo for L. H. Gray & Co.
 The Lily L. is said to have gone ashore in a storm.

WILL CARRY GRAIN TO FOREIGN PORTS

After a stay of several months in this port, the German ship Zenille was chartered at 2 o'clock this afternoon to load grain for the United Kingdom. She was chartered by Koss, Gifford & Co., the rate being 37 shillings and expenses. The Zenille arrived in Portland on July 4 with a general cargo. She is in command of Captain Wilms.
 Ten minutes after the Zenille had been chartered the French bark David d'Angiers was taken by Giffin & Eyre to load grain at Tacoma. This cargo will be shipped to the United Kingdom, and the charter rate was $14.
 It is expected that both vessels will begin loading within the next few days. Both received the rates that were made last summer by the shipowners' combine. The Tacoma rate is 35 lower than the rate fixed for Portland.
