(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Ilwaco, Wash., Oct. 1.—Immense flocks of pigeons, so numerous as to resemble large clouds sweeping over the water, came in from the sea during the week, following closely in the wake of mammoth schools of sardines, which they were intently pursuing. Thousands of the birds became entangled in the mesh of the fishtrap leads at high tide, and the weight of their bodies has become a serious menace to the gearings. At sea the pigeons can generally be found where the sardines exist, but they come to the river every summer.

METHODIST COLLEGE FINANCES IN SHAPE

Willamette University Has a Bright Future-Dearth of Money for Years, But Funds Are Pledged-Million Dollar Endowment.

General Staff Correspondent.)

Eugena, Or., Oct. 1—Never in the history of Oregon Methodism has there been unch optimism among both ministers and aymen concerning Willamette university, the denominational school at Salem that it must be saved to the church, and hat by dint of hard labor by every member in the Oregon conference and by he loyal support of the faith was prought out so clearly during the annual ession here that men of means came orward and shouldered the burden to he extent that a bright future is before the college. sity, the denominational school at Salem. That it must be saved to the church, and member in the Oregon conference and by the loyal support of the faith was brought out so clearly during the annual session here that men of means came forward and shouldered the burden to the extent that a bright future is be-forward and shouldered the burden to the extent that a bright future is before the college.

For nearly two score years the problem of Willamette has been up for solving, and great efforts were necessary to retain the property. It now takes about $3,000 a year for the maintenance of the school. There was a large debt on the property, which, by mighty efforts has been cleared.

Willamette entered upon the present year with every prospect of having the greatest season in its history. The apportionment for the Oregon conference was $4,000, each charge in the four districts being asked for its proportion for this benevolence. Special efforts were to have been made by the pastors to raise their full amount, but when the figures were made public by the treasurer Friday, it was shown that but $1.735 had been raised. Of this Portland district gave $827—far better than either of the other three districts. But even then not more than half of the even then not more than half of the preachers reported their full apportion-

Thus a deficit was created. Taken with other things, this for a time threw with other things, this for a time threw the conference into a spasm of discouragement. But the indomitable spirit of President A. M. Smith, of the board of trustees, and the hearty support of loyal men of money, brought about the change, as published yesterday and now Willamette university is said to be backed with ample capital to insure its great success. Aside from many who pledged to give $100 a year for 10 years, one of the highest officers of the conference stated that he knows of $30,000 than can be had if needed. Eastern philanthropists, also, are taking an in-day on board the Fairbanks special. Breakfast is served at 7 a. m., the senator sitting at the head of the inble and serving the food as a father in a household. Seated about him are the members of his immediate party. The local committee, or any other visitors, are always welcome, but they sit at a different table. Soon after breakfast the rear platform speeches begin and between the stops the senator takes maps. He has 15 or 20 speeches in his mind and on an occasion such as his visit to Portland, during the day he will find time to dictate his address to the newspaper correspondents. than can be had if meeded. Eastern philanthropists, also, are taking an interest in the old school, and are said to be preparing to give some handsome endowments in future.

Among those who have worked unceasingly for the raising of funds for Willamette, is Dr. L. E. Rockwell, presiding elder of Fortland district. At each of the four quarterly conferences, held just prior to the present session of the annual, he urged the pastor to bring up to the limit, the fund for the school. Some did, others did a little more than requested and more did not collect in full. But the finances have at last been arranged, and the matter is settled.

IN GOOD CONDITION.

President A. M. Smith of the board of trustees of the Willamette university is very much grieved over the publicity given the financial affairs of the institution. He states that conditions are not so bad as they have been depicted.

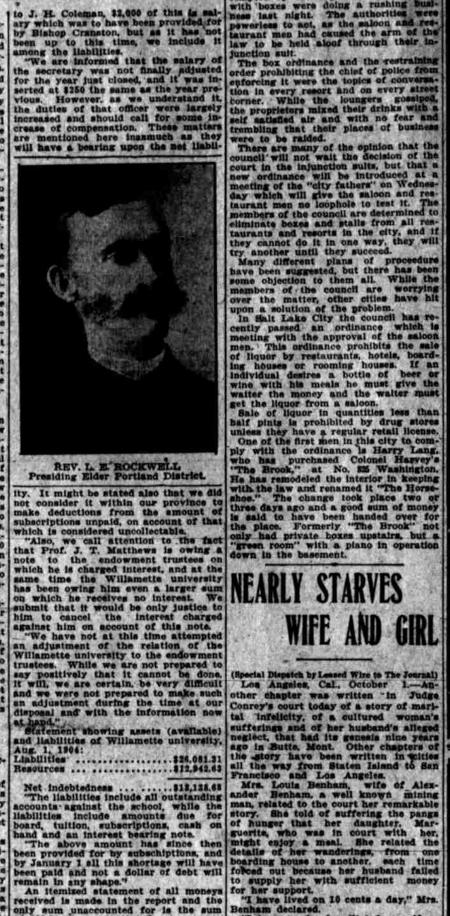

In his report which he contemplates presenting to the trustees of the university at a meeting to be held before the conference closes, he states that the whose work Fortland and the Factite northwest claim a more than ordinary degree of interest, for the reason that a large share of his artistic effort has been devoted to studies of the Klicklitat Indians, the Mokis, and other western tribes. He has just concluded a summer's work among the Klicklitats in southern Washington. Mr. Couse some years ago narried a sister of Mrs. Charles Kamm of Portland, and they have frequently, visited in this city, where they have many friends and where Mr. Couse's work has been much admired. He was a pupil of the Academy of Design, New York; Academie Julian, under Bouguereau and Tony Robert Fleury and Ecole des Beaux Aris, Paris.

SWELLS PUT OUT FIRE WITH SELTZER

Fire broke out at Richards' restaurant, 211 Aider street, early yesterday moreing, and the occasion furnished a chance for a number of Portland's fashionable citizens to appear as firemen.

At I o'clock several men in evening dress were at supper.

Buddenly they were alarmed to see a blass spring up in front of the restaurant. It threw a lurid light throughout the establishment, and incidentally gave some of Portland's citizens a fright.

Mingled with the empty bottles of Sauterns and "extra dry" were numerous siphons that are used to liven up the festive highball. The siphons were on every table and in profusion. When the fire was discovered they were put to use.

Beizing the siphons, the men in Tuxed dos and dress shirts rushed out to take the place of firemen. They got as close to the flames as possible and started the little streams.

At last the fire was extinguished. The restaurant and drank Sauterpe and "extra dry" and talked until morning about their accomplishments as firemen.

No alarm was sounded at the central fire station. The fire caught in the awning that hange in front of the place.

It is supposed to have ignited from a window above.
