Celebrated Rookwood Pottery

Pottery-making was never more perfect in shape or color blending than the Rookwood. Under the direction of masters of this art, it stands alone as a world production. In the Rookwood and its glass vases we are displaying most beautiful conceptions, and to intending purchasers of anniversary or wedding gifts they are worthy of thought.

HIGHWAYMEN PLUNDER AT WILL, BUT TWO ARE CAUGHT

Five Persons Robbed Last Night and a Score Within a Month.

A night of crime in Portland, and the results:
Five men held up and robbed.
Total amount of plunder—Cash, $2.98; two gold watches; part of plug of tobacco.
Detectives Kerrigan and Snow work all night.
John Sullivan and Herman Smith are arrested at 1:30 this morning, identified as the highwaymen by three of their victims at 10 o'clock and charged with highway robbery in the municipal court at 11.

John Sullivan and Herman Smith occupy cells in the city jail, being charged with highway robbery, as the result of what was perhaps the hardest night of work Detectives Kerrigan and Snow ever performed. Five hold-ups were perpetrated. The situation was desperate. Captain Moore called for the two officers. They left their beds hurriedly, came over the river from their homes and remained out on the cases all night. At 10 o'clock they had landed two men behind the bars. At 10 o'clock identification was made by victims and at 11 o'clock Deputy District Attorney Hanes filed the informations in the municipal court.

Ah Bing, a Chinese cook at the Golden West hotel, and Valentines Fehrenbach, rooming at the Park hotel, identified the prisoners as the men who held them up during the night and robbed them. A partly consumed plug of tobacco, taken from Fehrenbach, was found on Sullivan when searched at police headquarters, and this served to strengthen the case against the pair. Other evidence, it is said, will be secured by Kerrigan and Snow as soon as they rest after their hard night's work.

Sullivan and Smith say they are from Seattle, and there is a suspicion that they may know something of the recent holdup of Dave Conway's saloon on Maynard avenue in that city, when one man was shot dead and two others seriously wounded. Only one arrest has been made by the Seattle police in connection with the case. It is probable an officer from there will come here to "hook over" the prisoners.

Detectives Kerrigan and Snow, it is believed, were able to effect the capture because they did not wait until daylight to begin their work. It is thought that had they done that the men would have taken a train out of the city and escaped.

From Ah Bing, who was held up at Seventh and Davis streets about midnight, the robbers got $2 cents. They took some tobacco he had, but returned it to him. He said the men wore no masks and that the big man pointed a revolver at him while the other searched him. This story is corroborated by Fehrenbach, who was held up at Ninth and Gilliam streets, and who lost a gold watch, 5 cents and part of a plug of tobacco. G. Kato, a Japanese, was held up at Couch and Davis, and also identifies the prisoners as the men who robbed him of 35 cents. They took from him a package of cigarette papers which was found by one of the men.

John Sellinder, a laborer, who resides at 428 Davis street, and Wallace Humfrey, a deckhand on the steamer Cascade, were also victims of the hold-up, but have not identified the men under arrest as those who robbed them. From Sellinder they took a watch and 50 cents and from Humfrey they got $3.98.

By far the most sensational street car hold-up of the three was that which occurred the night of September 3, when Policeman Nelson was shot down. Charles W. Walton, a young man well known here, is charged with the crime. The officer chanced to be on the car and went bravely in to capture the highwayman. He received two bullets from the bandit's revolver, one of which nearly cost him his life. He is still in the Good Samaritan hospital. But for the presence of the officer on the car at the time of the attempted robbery there is no reason to believe Walton would not be behind prison bars.

The first hold-up of the series was perpetrated August 2, when a Portland Heights car was attacked and the employes robbed of about $30. Two men did the job. Probably the same pair committed the second car hold-up, August 6. The robbers in that instance secured $25 from the employes. Both hold-ups were promptly reported to the police, but no arrests have ever been made.

Auto Party Held Up.
Even citizens wishing to take automobile rides have not been immune from highwaymen. It was on the night of August 16 that a party in a "car" was stopped by two men on the Base-Line road and, at revolver points, made to hand over what cash they possessed. A rope was stretched across the road, which brought the vehicle to a very sudden stop. Had it been running at a high rate of speed there might have been fatalities.

Dr. Lee Sing Nom, a Chinese physician, was struck down a week ago in the darkness at Fourth and Pine streets. The police were called to the scene immediately. Detectives have been working on the case ever since. It is asserted around headquarters that the man who assaulted the inoffensive Chinaman is practically safe from arrest.

No Effort Made Here.
E. C. Morse, a well known business man, was lured from the Irvington race track August 2, and it since developed that he was "doped" and robbed by some of the numerous thugs there, who coaxed him to drink. In this case Chief Hunt did not even detail a patrolman, and the department took no interest whatever in the case. August 21 Morse was found in a neighboring town, dazed and helpless. He was brought home and by careful nursing is now able to be out.

On August 3, Mike Harrigan and Tim Rodgers were held up at Eleventh and Couch streets and relieved of $5. Ferdinand Nelson was held up and robbed of $3 and a check on August 4. John Lance was held up on the steel bridge and robbed of $15 on August 6, and George Balliet was held up and robbed of his watch on September 11.

Heroes and heroines have become known to the public because of the numerous burglaries perpetrated since August 1. In many instances men and women, becoming aware that criminals were prowling about their residences, braved the danger of being ruthlessly shot down in order to drive them out. Several citizens' citizens first at still truder. One man threw a burglar out of his house by main strength, and one woman put a man to flight by beating him with a hair brush.

Children the Victims.
Perhaps the most shameful instance in the long list of burglaries was where three children—two young girls and their brother—were frightened so badly by the efforts of a man to gain an entrance to their home that they fled in

SENATOR TURNER'S SURE OF ELECTION

THINKS THAT WASHINGTON WILL GO DEMOCRATIC AND THAT HE WILL BE NEXT GOVERNOR OF STATE—FALLS TO APPROVE A RAILWAY COMMISSION ISSUE.

Senator George Turner, and the speakers accompanying him in his campaign of southern Washington, including George Mendenhall, candidate for state treasurer, held a largely attended Democratic rally at Vancouver last night, and returned by way of Portland.

Senator Turner, although slightly indisposed the last three days, is in good health and voice, and is making a strong and effective campaign, which has thus far covered the eastern portion of the state. He speaks at Tacoma on the 15th, Puyallup on the 16th, and Seattle on the 17th. "The prospect for the Democratic state ticket is most flattering," he said, replying to questions concerning the progress of the campaign.

"If the election were to be held tomorrow I feel satisfied that the Democrats would carry it—and we have no reason to expect any change of sentiment to the contrary between now and election day. The Republicans two years ago, promising to enact a law for a railway commission, carried the state by a considerable majority, the Democrats making no contest. The change of feeling among the people today is caused by the Republican failure to carry out their pledged promise for a railway commission. The people are disappointed, and disgusted at the extent to which the Republican machine is dominated by the railway corporations."

The senator's address was slow and deliberate, but it was evident that he shared the people's warmth of feeling upon the subject, for at this point he arose from an easy chair in which his large figure had been enjoying a grateful rest, and paced the floor.

"The Republican defense of the charges made have so far consisted chiefly of abuse of myself. A few days ago Mr. Meade, the Republican candidate, admitted in a speech that they had betrayed their trust two years ago in failing to enact their railway commission plank into law, and said in effect that this year they omitted the plank to support them," he replied, "I would like to be betrayed by the people again. We have been having some magnificent meetings—larger than any held since 1896."

Today was devoted largely to the reception of the visitors and the completion of the program for the regular sessions.

PORTLAND NEEDS MORE FACTORIES

GENERAL IMMIGRATION AGENT MOTT OF NORTHERN PACIFIC SAYS SO—IN PARTIAL TO THEM GET AND STATE OF OREGON—NEEDAVOR TO GET PEOPLE HERE

C. W. Mott, general immigration agent of the Northern Pacific railway, is in the city.

"What does Portland most need?" he was asked.

"Factories, payrolls and rural population to support them," he replied. "I like Oregon," he went on, "the state has a good reputation; but it must have more rural population before any considerable advance can be made. The Lewis and Clark year is going to help a great deal toward that end. We have been surprised to find the sincere good will that exists in all neighboring cities and states toward the Portland exposition."

Mr. Mott has 7,000 established immigration agents in his department, distributed throughout the various states as far east as Pennsylvania. They scatter a vast amount of advertising for the fair. Through the influence of A. D. Charlton of Portland much extra advertising work has been done by this bureau. On Mr. Mott's staff are three men who do nothing but go from schoolhouse to schoolhouse, with stereopticon outfits, entertaining with views and lectures on the Pacific northwest and the states which the Northern Pacific railway traverses.

"You can catch a man in two ways—through his eyes and his stomach," says Mr. Mott. "Show him the views of the country, and the fruits it produces. That is why the fair will be a great success. When the visitor and homeseeker has looked at all of it, he can then go out and investigate any particular line in which he is interested."

Mr. Mott makes periodical trips—about three each year—all over the lines of the Northern Pacific, and keeps his large force of men at work on new ideas for exploiting the territory in a way to induce immigration. He expects large results next year.

VERNON LA CURE IS NAMED BY SENATOR

Joseph Simon has many times stood on the floor of the United States senate and has engineered many a political coup, but he appeared yesterday in a new and most interesting role. In honor of naming a baby girl, he spent the afternoon searching furniture stores for the best and most beautiful carriage in Portland. He found it.

Some time ago Senator Simon put upon the market a large tract of land on the east side and named it "Vernon." Among the purchasers was David La Cure, a mail-carrier, and when a little baby came to his home several days ago Senator Simon asked permission to name the little one. The father was willing and the baby became "Vernon" La Cure.

To show his appreciation of being permitted to name the first-born, Senator Simon spent the afternoon in search of the baby carriage. Little Vernon was given a swell equipage.
