

CZAR SAID TO HAVE RECEIVED A REPORT FROM ROJESTVENSKY

Great Britain's Representatives Impatiently Await Reply.

FLEET IS NOW AT VIGO

Will Not Be Allowed to Enter the Harbor Save to Secure Food and Then Only One Ship at a Time.

(Journal Special Service.)
Vigo, Oct. 24.—(Bulletin.)—The Baltic fleet arrived off the port today, and cipher dispatches awaiting Admiral Rojestvensky were immediately delivered. It is believed they call for an explanation of the North sea incident. Local authorities have been ordered to permit only the perivoyaging of the Russian ships within this port, and on the condition that only one ship at a time comes in. Cies Island, in the Bay of Vigo, will be the rendezvous of the fleet in consequence of this order.

London, Oct. 24.—(Bulletin.)—The Paris correspondent of Dallal's agency wires that it is stated on the highest authority here that Russia has made an unqualified apology to England for the North sea tragedy.

(Journal Special Service.)
St. Petersburg, Oct. 24.—It is this afternoon reported on high authority that the czar this forenoon received Admiral Rojestvensky's report covering the firing upon the Hull fishing fleet in the North sea.

If this is the case no official as yet is willing to admit that the story is officially told has been received in the capital. In case it has it seems improbable that it will be issued until late this evening as the courtesy of the czar would necessitate its being passed upon by Vice-Admiral Avellan, who is out of the city and will not return until tonight. The admiral went to Casarico last night as he was called there, and at that time it was not believed that there would be a report from the Baltic fleet until some time this morning.

The admiral at noon asserted that no word of explanation had been received from Rojestvensky through that office, but admitted it possible that in a case of emergency the czar might have the news. The admiral's official said that the message had been sent to Rojestvensky at all the various points where it was expected he would touch and that as soon as his reply had been received it will be acted upon and an answer made to Great Britain as well as a public issuance of the admiral's account of the affair. It is quite plain that the admiral's officials believe the firing on the fishermen has been a plain case of blundering, the cause for which will be hard to explain. The officials insist that it will be impossible to take definite action until the admiral's report is in hand.

Britishers Are Impatient.
Great Britain undoubtedly intends to press the matter to an issue in accordance with this determination Captain Calthorpe, the British naval attaché, accompanied by a chasseur, both in full uniform, repaired to the admiral's offices this morning and requested information as to the probable time of the admiral's report.

SEES DOUBLE AFTER BLOW ON EYE-BALL

(Journal Special Service.)
Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 24.—C. H. Lithgow, a millionaire of Spokane, Wash., left Syracuse for New York City, today to continue his search for Mrs. Austin, in whom he wishes to give $275,000. He has hunted through Syracuse and several other up-state cities. If not successful before November 1, Mrs. Austin will not get the money.
An interest in a mining property, located near Butte, Mont., was given Mrs. Austin many years ago. It was considered worthless then, but a strike was made in it about a year ago and a syndicate has offered a large amount for the mine. The deal could be closed without the co-operation of Mrs. Austin, but Lithgow desires he wants her to get fair play, and is searching for her so she can learn of her good luck and claim a portion of the purchase money. Mrs. Austin lived here eight years ago, but moved to New York.
Lithgow, with tireless energy, not only tramped her here, but through his agents found where she had resided at the time of her departure for New York. Because of the shortness of the time allowed for her participation in the sale, he will see the newspapers of the latter city to discover her address, offering liberal rewards for information.

New York, Oct. 24.—William O'Connor, a rich young real estate broker, was yesterday shot and seriously wounded by Wolf Phillips, an aged directory publisher, because of the attentions of O'Connor to Mrs. Phillips.
At Saratoga amazes was caused some time ago at the sight of Mrs. Phillips, who is 62 years of age, and who dressed like a debutante, entering the dining room on the arm of O'Connor, an athletic man of 26 years of age. Phillips, a little, old man dressed in black, and looking every day of his 70 years, came trotting along in the rear.
It was not unusual for Mrs. Phillips to appear at breakfast in a low-cut gown, her neck covered with coral beads and a light scarf thrown about her shoulders. O'Connor is at Bellevue hospital in a serious condition from the effects of a shot in his neck, which he received in the hallway of the Phillips home.
Phillips says O'Connor and not he fired the first shot, which the old man says glanced off a bunch of keys which was in his trousers pocket. He asserts that he then fired upon the younger man in self defense. His indignantly denies that his wife was the cause of the trouble.

Bangor, Me., Oct. 24.—The most remarkable adventure of the season in the Maine woods is that which, according to his story, befell Abbott Nelson of Skowhegan Saturday near the forks of the Kennebec river. Nelson says he was carried three miles through the woods on the horns of an infuriated bull moose, was nearly drowned in a lake which the animal's horns while it did battle with another moose. Nelson, strange as his story is, survived his experience unscathed. He had climbed a tree, he says, to escape the animal, but the limb broke, and he alighted on the moose's horns, his clothing becoming caught. He asserts he was rendered unconscious by the fall, but was revived when the moose swam the lake. When the other bull appeared a fight began with Nelson still fastened to the animal's horns, and he was banged about until he was nearly killed. Finally his clothing gave way and he was tossed aside. The two moose fought to a finish and the survivor was so weak that Nelson was able to cut its throat.
Nelson is the same man who last season told of having been chased for half a mile by a mammoth trout which he had hooked and which in revenge took to the land and attempted to bite him. Maine is still a prohibition state.

KASHING DAMAGED

The British Merchantman Strikes a Floating Mine at Sea.

TWO OF CREW KILLED

Oker Reports Position of Armes Unchanged and That Russian Cavalry Drives Back Extreme Left Outposts.

(Journal Special Service.)
Wei Hai Wei, Oct. 25.—The British steamer Kashing has been damaged by striking a floating mine near Aloose Island. The bow of the vessel was smashed, two of the crew killed, and four injured.
This incident brings to mind the discussion that was waged relative to the danger that menaced shipping, at the time it became known that many of the mines in the vicinity of Port Arthur harbor, were either broken from their fastenings or deliberately turned adrift. The mine that was struck by the Kashing is believed to be one of those that has drifted into the Japanese current and eventually floated across the channel to the spot in the direct course of the vessel.
It is believed by many shipping men that the ultimate outcome of the accident to the Kashing will be the abandonment of the route that is thought to be endangered by floating mines. It is understood that some captains of vessels that have been plying over this course have refused to take further risks, but insist on a change of route, where their course will be entirely clear of the currents that they consider are at this time fraught with more than ordinary danger.

TIES UP MUCH LAND

Checks for Property Bought by "Mrs. Seal" Came Back Dishonored—Several Creditors Tell Stories of Their Confidence.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Seattle, Oct. 24.—Mrs. Ellen Marr Prochodvsky, alleged direct descendant of ex-Queen Lilluokalan of Hawaii, and related to the royal blood of the island group in a dozen different ways, was the name she gave when she arrived in Seattle and interviewed bankers and real estate men. Then she met Tom Page, a local attorney, and he induced her to accompany him to the superior court, where he loaned her the $4 necessary to change her awful name to Mrs. Seal until her millions of wealth arrived from San Francisco and Los Angeles banks. Now woman, name and all are missing, and Page is not the only mourner.
Tied up in the Scandinavian-American bank are several deeds to property, all made out in the name of Mrs. Seal, to be delivered when the money was returned for the California checks. The checks have come back dishonored and Mrs. Seal has deserted her apartments in a local hotel for some more favored spot.
A furniture dealer at Odessa is now in the city looking for the Hawaiian princess, who he trusted with $400 worth of furniture, which she sold.
One of the first places Mrs. Prochodvsky, or Seal, visited after coming to Seattle three weeks ago, was the office of Daniel Jones & Co., real estate agents. There she negotiated for a purchase of Revanna Park and gave her checks for a $10,000 mortgage which had to be lifted.
In several other parts of the city she made real estate deals, and on the strength of her coming line of credit at the Scandinavian-American bank she borrowed a few dollars.
But it is all over, and as soon as the deeds are destroyed the property involved will again be put upon the market.

TO ASK FOR TRANSPORT

'FRISCO AFTER BUSINESS

Nineteenth Infantry To Be Sent From Vancouver to Philippines—Portlanders Are Anxious to Secure Business End of Deal.

Strong efforts will be made by Portland's chamber of commerce and Oregon's congressional delegation to have the government send to this port the transport that is to convey the Nineteenth infantry from Vancouver barracks to the Philippines. It can be done by prompt action and those most deeply interested are already at work.
Letters were mailed today to each of Oregon's senators and representatives soliciting their support and they will undoubtedly take the matter up with the quartermaster general at Washington immediately.
"The bringing of this transport to Portland would mean a great deal to the business interests of the city," said Alfred Tucker, chairman of the committee on navigation, this morning. "The ship would take on a valuable cargo for the Philippines. This cargo would probably consist of grain, hay, food supplies and lumber. Portland can furnish all this just as cheaply as San Francisco. And the embarking of the troops here would be a great convenience to the officers and men, as the trip to San Francisco would necessarily entail considerable expense. Portland is entitled to this transport. We have all the harbor facilities, and as the troops are stationed at Vancouver, we believe that they should not be taken to San Francisco to be put on the ship."
It is understood that San Francisco has already made a bid for the business and the chamber of commerce believes that this can be headed off if the right kind of influence is brought to bear. Portland is more convenient to Vancouver in every way than San Francisco. The troops could pack camp in Vancouver, have the goods put on the river tug and loaded on the transport in the harbor. They would be at no expense. If San Francisco is chosen the regiment will be compelled to either go into camp again in that city while waiting to be loaded or go to the hotels, either case involving unnecessary expense. Every item of the cargo would be right at hand in Portland, which would not be the case in San Francisco. As a general thing these transports take immense quantities of lumber for the Philippines.
The Eleventh regiment, now stationed in the Philippines, will be brought home some time in March and the Nineteenth from Vancouver will be taken over in the harbor. It is the chamber of commerce to have the transport bringing the men from the Philippines to come to Portland, where the troops could be unloaded at Vancouver barracks and the Nineteenth regiment taken on without any extra expense to either the men or the government. Although the transfer will not take place until March, the navigation committee says that now is the time to take the matter up with the authorities at Washington, D. C., in order to prevent San Francisco from getting the business.
