COMMON PEOPLE'S SAVIOR IS JESUS

REV. DR. BROUGHER DELIVERS ANOTHER ONE OF HIS SERIES OF SERMONS ON "EVERYDAY TALKS TO EVERYDAY PEOPLE" AT THE WHITE TEMPLE.

Rev. J. Whitcomb Brougier, D. D., pastor of the White Temple, is preaching a series of sermons on "Everyday Talks to Everyday People." The series is attracting widespread attention, and the congregation that overflowed the White Temple last night, listened to his sermon on "The Common People's Savior." Among other things, he said: "Christ himself was a working man. I thank God this is true. He was a carpenter. He worked at the carpenter's bench to earn his own living, and helped to support, as tradition says, his widowed mother. Campbell Morgan says that he did his work as a carpenter so well that he received the commendation of heaven. It is this fact that stamps labor with such dignity and honor. There are some people who look upon the name 'laboring man' as a term of reproach, but Christianity teaches the supreme honor and dignity of work. No calling, which is in itself upright and noble, however humble it may be, can degrade you. Jesus Christ in a carpenter shop, doing an honest day's work, and living an upright life, was doing God's will just as much as when he stood on the mount and was transfigured with glory. His life teaches us that there is no such thing as a common task. All upright work is sacred and can be done to the glory of God.

"Christ chose working men for his chief apostles. Peter, James and John were fishermen. They were not admitted into the 'high society' of their day, and they would not be today. They were just ordinary, rough, coarse fishermen. Nevertheless, Jesus Christ called them to be the founders of his church. The man who has influenced the world most have been men who have come up from the sons of toil. Moses was the son of a poor slave. Gideon was a farmer, David a shepherd. Luther was the son of a poor miner. Carey was a soldier. Livingstone was raised in poverty. Lincoln, Greeley and Childs came up through poverty and adverse circumstances to the place of power and influence which they occupied.

as one who knew about their trials, and was interested in their welfare. He drew his illustrations from their work. Sowing and harvest time, fields and flocks, chickens and birds, fishing and vine-dressing, bread-making and house-building, were all sources from which he drew his illustrations. He took the everyday affairs of life, and gave them a meaning and made them an inspiration to noble living. He was always sincere, 'dead in earnest,' straightforward, profound in thought, simple in language, clear as crystal. For this reason the common people heard him gladly. Jesus was in hearty sympathy with the working classes. He had passed through their experiences. He was ready to help them. Another has well said: 'Every condition of society, every station of life was open to Jesus Christ. He might have come as a scholar or a philosopher, and dazzled the world with the splendor of his attainments. He might have come as a prince with a royal retinue following him. He might have come with a crown on his head, and untold wealth at his command, but he did not. He came as a working man, into a workman's home, and a working man's life. He indeed is 'The Common People's Savior.'

OVERLY SEVERE.

Rev. George E. Van Waters So Characterizes Divorce Canon.

Rev. George E. Van Waters, rector of St. David's Episcopal church, in his sermon yesterday alluded to the canon that was passed at the recent general convention at Boston relating to the remarriage of divorced persons. He opposed the adoption of the canon when it was introduced.

"A church that is more requiring than Christ himself is a church that is more than straight, and leans backward. Enlightened people feel that the so-called higher standard, though seeming to be, is not in the interest of purity and the protection of the home.

BEAUTIFUL PORTLAND.

Mr. Randall Says There is Much to Plead the Cause.

That much depends on our view point was the keynote of the sermon entitled "If Christ Should Come to Portland," delivered by the Rev. William E. Randall of the Central Baptist church, on the east side, last night.

tend to the uplifting and advancement of mankind."

Reviewing the meteoric career of W. T. Stead in Chicago, Mr. Randall asserted that when immediately previous to the Columbian exposition the "reformer" offered to establish a paper which would expose the moral filth and corruption of the Windy City, if given suitable assistance, his offer was rejected with scorn. So with Portland, he added. If all a person was hunting for were wickedness he could find it by confining himself to a narrow district, and more particularly to the north end. Nor would the divorce and criminal courts furnish edifying spectacles. In this respect, however, the minister believed Portland to be no worse than a majority of cities of the same size and vastly better than many of them.

After designating a number of beautiful structures, useful institutions and short suburban trips in which nature and man have combined to furnish sights pleasing to the eye, the preacher referred to the Prohibition election to be held tomorrow. He stated that while he is a hearty proponent of local option he does not approve of the lines on which the election is to be held and believes the Prohibition leaders have made a grave error.

"PLAIN HONESTY."

Attorney Fligel Chooses That for His Subject at Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

A. F. Fligel, the well known attorney and member of the city council, made an address before the members of the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon on "Plain Honesty." The speaker stated that he was not at all in sympathy with the business man who tells lies and deliberately misrepresents the value of his goods in order to make sales.

He related an instance where a man had lied and cheated so much during his life that it became a fixed habit with him, and that he lied and cheated in preference to being honest. He said that when that man came to die the people pointed to him as one who had followed out the policy of lying and cheating in order to make money.

"Lies have blinding effects on your character," said Mr. Fligel. "Your reputation is what people think of you. Your character is what you are and what you make yourself."

Mr. Fligel then pointed out to his hearers that it was right that all honorable men as well as those who are not honorable should take an interest in politics and attempt to put honest men into office. He urged every voter to go to the polls and vote tomorrow.

General Secretary H. W. Stone, spoke for a few minutes on local option, urging his hearers to vote against the saloon. Excellent music was furnished by the Wilder harp orchestra and W. H. Boyer.

EVERYBODY ACTIVE AT FAIR GROUNDS

WORKERS AND SAW MEN WITH SHOVEL AND SPADING MACHINERY—MANY ARE FINISHED—OTHERS WILL BE SOON—BRIDGE NOW UNDER WAY.

Since the Lewis and Clark exposition was projected there has not been more activity upon the extensive grounds than there was yesterday, with more than 500 hammers, saws and shovels in action. The progress made on the work of construction during the past week is remarkable. Four or five new buildings have been started and the finishing details have been applied to the skeletons of buildings started months ago, with remarkable rapidity, and fine effect.

The ceiling of the Oregon state building is being whitewashed. The process is one of the most interesting sights on the grounds. Men work 300 feet above the floor, on rafters and scaffolds, pouring on whitewash, pumped through lines of hose by an engine on the ground floor. It would be impossible to whitewash this building by hand.

In this same building the skylights and the dome are being fitted with a substance known as translucent fabric, a combination of oil and varnishes which serves the purpose of glass. Before the work has been finished there will be 12 boxes of this material used, and each box contains 32 sheets, each of which measures eight feet square.

In the east end of the grounds the newly commenced work is going on. The floor is laid for the machinery building and half the walls are up for festival hall. Lumber is scattered over the place for acres and the workmen are going at their labor as though their very lives depended upon it.

The forestry building, with its great walls of native logs, some of them six or eight feet in diameter, is attracting a great deal of attention. It now resembles a mammoth log cabin, with a massive, completed appearance, and according to the guides on the grounds, there is no building that attracts the attention that does this one.

The exterior of the Liberal Arts building is so beautifully decorated that it is one of the most imposing sights on the grounds. Arrangements have been made for the illumination of this structure—in fact, the wires are all connected, and only the incandescent globes remain to be put into their sockets.

During the past week, in addition to all the other improvements, a pump house with a capacity of 1,500 gallons a minute, has been installed on St. Helen's road, near the main entrance to "The Trail." It is intended to provide water only for fire and irrigation. George Gollings is in charge of the new station. The principal pump house is so situated that it will be used to keep the lake-filled. Its capacity is 12,000 gallons a minute, but it is of no more importance than the fire pump just installed.

Work on the main archway over a bridge to "The Trail," 150 feet wide, has been started. A bank of sod has been fixed for seats in front of the main band stand and innumerable gardens are in bloom. File drivers are puffing and steaming on both sides of the lake, construction work on the board walk and roadway from the mainland having commenced. Some time this week ground will be broken for the main government building to be erected on the island.

There is a building just inside the main entrance that attracts considerable attention because it has no name. The guide will tell you it is a "general utility" building. It is to be used for any purpose that occasion may require and is expected to contain a prison and police station. Advertisers live on the fair grounds, and the courtesy with which they answer questions is a great benefit to the gigantic enterprise. They say that on a clear Sunday the visitor number not less than 4,000, and this fact is causing Director of Works Huber to rush the work of cleaning the grounds. Gardens are being planted by the score around buildings that have not even left the hands of the contractors and the exposition, as it exists at present, should be seen by every Portlander and every visitor.
