No Better Example of the Weakness of Words

Was ever given than in the inadequate and superficial description of the vastness and intensely interesting—from economical and educational standpoints—features embodied in the GRAND EXPOSITION AND EXPLOITATION OF AMERICAN PRODUCTIONS as being demonstrated this week by Olds, Wortman & King. Like a vast network of railroads, the exhibition covers every section of America, and embraces its products. We congratulate our good conferees upon their continuance of the splendid work mapped out by this modern giant among American stores, and their conduct of it along strictly original (?) lines. Stores, like individuals, cannot become imbued with too much of the American spirit. It elevates and broadens, and lifts one out of sordid ruts onto higher planes, where man's humanity to man is best exemplified. American customs call for shorter hours of labor, which same means a higher price for the laborer's product, which must mean a higher wage for the workingman—as supply and demand regulate price. Less goods produced in 8 hours than in 12—goods demand better price—the artisan gets it. Time enough in 10 hours of a day to sell American products. Let's all get the American habit—"BULLY!" Fingers muscular and dexterous, with values for Monday and all week beckon you today.

SUPERB CREATIONS. Handsome Silks, Rare Laces, Magnificent Velvets, Rich Broadcloths—unmatchable productions of the world's most noted designers. Portland women know full well the incomparable style, standing and quality mark of the Olds, Wortman & King creations. Paris, Berlin, Vienna, London and New York have selected, with critical eye, their choicest gems from garment-makers, famous among royalty itself. This house is conceded, from the fashion-molders of New York to the style-wearers of the Pacific Slope, to be far away and alone ahead of all others west of Chicago in exploitation of authoritative styles. We buy and sell more high-class theatre, carriage, auto and evening wraps and gowns—twice over—than ALL other Portland stores combined. So now, starting today, we're going to open the floodgates—for one week—upon the greatest sale of these high-class garments ever held in all the West. 'Twill be mighty costly to us—NOW—but once—and for all, in this matchless, unprecedented feast of rare values, by this unparalleled "COMPARISON SALE," we'll prove to the most skeptical mind the premier leadership, now and always, both in style, showings from authoritative sources, and value-giving, of this—Portland's best and foremost store.

The World Drives to America's Shops to Be Shod

The great shoe manufacturing centers of America supply the denizens of every known land with footwear. Land at an English, South American, Australian, or any other foreign port, and the first sight likely to greet the eye is numerous shoe cases bearing the imprint of a well-known Lynn, Brockton, Haverhill, Wakefield, Marlboro, Worcester, Mass., or Detroit, Mich., maker of good shoes. We know thousands of smart dressers adhere to a certain shoe price because the shoes at that price never fail to wear well and conform to the shape of the foot, as well as to fashion's requirements. Oftentimes that price is $5 or $6. We buy every pair of shoes that comes to this store with a view to its being worn by some particular woman. So one may see—of necessity—it must fulfill every requirement of the $5 or $6 shoe. The

The Flax-Growing Countries

All send their best representatives to secure the trade of American women in Linens for Thanksgiving tables. Ireland, Austria, Belgium, Germany and France all vie for her favor—and the land of Erin wins. From "Tara's Halls" to America's loftiest peaks and peaceful valleys the fame of Richardson's Irish Linens extends. Some there are who for sake of temporary gain seek to exploit other lines that pay more profit, but American women are wise and insist on Richardson's Right. Refuse the "Just as good." We continue this week, with added values, the
