FOREIGN EXHIBITS BUILDING ACCEPTED

The Oregon state commission held a brief session last evening at headquarters, mainly for the purpose of receiving from the contractor the completed foreign exhibits building of the Lewis and Clark fair, which they contracted for under the name of festival hall.

The subject of the heavy expenditures contemplated for educational conferences during the fair was referred to the attorney-general.

The plans for the Oregon building were accepted, as drawn by the architect, and the advertising of bids for its construction was ordered.

A special committee, composed of Albert Rastay and George Conner was selected to compile and publish a book setting forth Oregon's advantages in full.

A resolution was passed providing that the commission expend no more money for buildings after the contracts now in existence have been fulfilled.

ANTI-BOX LAW TO BE HELD IN ABEYANCE

Saloons and Restaurants Have Twenty Days to Perfect Appeal to Supreme Court.

WON'T BE INTERFERED WITH IN THAT TIME

Both Sides Will Ask the Upper Court to Advance the Case on Calendar.

Under an agreement between L. A. McNary, city attorney, and J. F. Logan and Pipes & Pitt, representing defendants in the anti-box ordinance suits, 20 days will be granted the restaurant proprietors and saloon men in which to perfect an appeal to the supreme court.

With 20 days in which to get before the supreme court, and the well-established rule of that body to take its own time in setting a case for hearing, the prospect is that several months will elapse before there is any positive attempt at enforcement of the anti-box ordinance.

The stipulation is on file in the circuit court. While based directly on the decision of the lower court in the two suits against Harry Sandys and others, and Theodore Kruse and others, it will apply to the saloon and restaurant suits in general throughout the city.

It is presumed that the restaurant-keepers, seeking the strongest ground, will hold the ground that the anti-box ordinance is an attempt to unduly regulate a lawful business.

Should the supreme court see fit to support this argument with a partial reversal and declare that features of the ordinance void with respect to strictly restaurant business, the question then arising will be as to whether the whole ordinance is nullified.

"I should say that a reversal by the supreme court on this one point would not invalidate the entire ordinance nor modify its effect as against the saloon box," says City Attorney McNary.
