The turkey sings, "Oh, joyous day, my trouble's at an end,
Tomorrow I'll afford a feast for some dear Christian friend;
While Horace G. McKinley will the whole day long repose.
On the anxious seat, and Miss Marie will not enjoy her clothes.
And Mrs. Watson weepingly will come to Puter's side.
And say, "I wish to goodness like the turkey I had died."
And sinners all over the land will cry.

And I, perchance, upon the plate of Port-land's fearless mayor,

there will lie,
And I'll be praised along with Uncle
Blossom's pumpkin pie."

The demurrer interposed by John Gearin, attorney for M. G. Nease, indicted for conducting a public nuisance, will be argued before Judge George Saturday morning. The grounds of the demurrer are that pool selling is not included in the statute regarding public nuisances, and that Nease could not be indicted under that clause. Nease is owner of the Warwick pool room and was indicted by the grand jury for maintaining a public nuisance, inducing lewd and dissolute people to frequent his house and bet on horse races.

Miss Martha McGee, Itinerant preacher residing on Cable street, below Portland Heights, has appealed to the county court for protection from her enemies, whom she accuses of persecuting her by making complaint to the authorities that she is insane. Judge Webster has taken her case under advisement, and will give it careful investigation. She complains that the neighbors throw rocks at her, and otherwise annoy her in her chosen work of spreading the gospel of Christianity.

The reason given for resigning by Mr. Gantenbein is that he is going to leave the city.

PLENTY OF WATER ON BAR.

According to Major W. C. Langfitt the Columbia river bar has a depth of 24 feet at the low water stage, three feet higher than it was at the time government soundings were taken in June. The jetty and the dredge Chinook are given credit for securing the increased depth. The engineers have been making a survey of the bar at odd intervals for the past two months. As yet the work has not been completed, and an official report of the matter will probably not be made until the end of another week. But the major declares that he has enough material at hand to convince him that the jetty and dredge have brought about some very desirable results. The extension of the jetty, however, is looked upon as being the great solution to the bar problem.

With a depth of 24 feet at the low water mark in the channel it is declared by the shippers that vessels of 32 feet draught can easily enter the river during a flood tide. When the jetty is extended to the point desired the engineers believe that the bar will not give any further trouble. F. A. Kilburn Makes Her First

They are the Asiatic company a month ago to load at Portland for the Orient, it is probable that the steamship Elleric may go to from San Francisco and bringing genthat the steamship Elleric may go to San Francisco and bringing seneral cargoes.

It is the first time that the Kilburn has ever been at this port. She is being operated by the Russell & Rogers company of San Francisco, and will continue to the run permanently, making alternate trips with the steamer Aurelia, owned by the same firm. Although the Kilburn is generally regarded as being the fastest steamer on the coast, she made rather a slow passage. She left the Bay City Saturday evening, and did not reach here until 8 o'clock last night. But it is explained by the officers that the weather was very stormy during the entire voyage, and no attempt was made to maintain a good rate of speed.

It was the intention to stop at Marshfield, but upon her arrival at Coos Bay the bar was so rough that it was concluded not to make any attempt to put into port. She was advertised to call, there on her up trip, and the local shippers say that the company made a mistake in not doing so. The assertion is made that the merchants of the Coos bay towns undoubtedly had completed a strangements for making shipments on her to Portland, and the disappointment will cause them to change their minds about giving the line the patronage promised.

The Decanic dock, where CARS MUST NOT BLOCK STREET CROSSINGS

Motormen on the various street car lines have recently incurred the displeasure of the police by stopping their cars in the center of crossings and interrupting traffic. It is said that this practice is followed extensively at Fifth and Washington streets and at East Burnside street and Grand avenue, and East Burnside street and Union avenue. Captain Gritzmacher handed Chief of Folice Hunt a report on the matter this morning. In which he suggested that some action should be taken. Chief Hunt says that several days ago he sent a communication to the street car people, asking that they notify their motormen to discontinue the practice. If nothing By arriving from The Dalles yester-day afternoon ahead of their usual time the steamers Charles R. Spencer and Balley Gatzert surprised the waterfront frequenters. It was learned that the quick passage resulted from a race that the steamers engaged in while coming down the river. In their eagerness to win the contest some of the landings were cut out. The Spencer reached her dock at 2:35, just 20 minutes in advance of the Gatzert. Usually they have not been communication to the street car people, asking that they notify their motormen to discontinue the practice. If nothing is done he will take the matter up again. The Spencer reached her dock at 2:35, just 20 minutes in advance of the Gatzert. Usually they have not been showing up at Portland until after 4 to clock, and frequently they failed to get here at 6.

Rivalry is again becoming keen between the management of the two lines, and from this time forward it is said that racing will be a daily occurrence. The other boats of the Regulator line are also making better time than they did a while back, and it is claimed that the new schedule will be maintained. There is no direct talk of a rate war, but if competition remains at fever heat it is thought to be very probable that the freight and passenger tariffs will be materially reduced before the season is much farther advanced. At the present time there is not much travel on the boats, but they are handling an enormous amount of freight.

Passengers coming down on the steamers report that a general store belonging to Captain Belcher of Collins, was burned at that place night before last. The loss is placed at $3,000. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed to have been due to a defective five.

A. King Wilson Tells of Contest for National Irrigation Congress Convention.

BROKEN ELEVATOR WAS OF INESTIMABLE AID

Big Delegation Promised from All Over the Country for the Fair.

"Portland got the 1905 convention of the National Irrigation congress because our delegation reached El Paso a day ahead of the others and secured a room at the head of the main staff-way on the second floor of the leading hotel." said A. King Wilson, who returned from Texas this morning.

"The second day the hotel elevator broke down, and everybody had to walk up stairs, and practically through our apartments. And we didn't do a thing," smiled Mr. Wilson.

The Portlanders went at their El Paso task with the determination to get what they wanted, and they did not neglect due preparation. "Of all the paraphernalia we took along, the 2,000 Lewis and Clark fair buttons did the most good, said Mr. Wilson. "We got them on everybody. We also distributed 2,000 hadges of 'Oregon.' Immediately upon arrival we secured the headquarters at the lending hotel, and hung up banners and Portland pictures, put out our China pheasants, and set up our keg of Bull Run water. We opened up some boxes of Oregon apples, and sent-out cards of invitation through the business districts asking everyone to call. Thy 10 big salmon we distributed among the hotels and newspapers, and they won many friends."

The Hotel Orendorf printeu on its bill of fare, "Boiled Portland Salmon, a la Devers, 1905." At the headquarters E. L. Smith did yeomas service in receiving visitors and expatiating on the science of apple culture. He also interjected a few remarks about salmon, explaining that the delegation had brought only a few small ones that are ordinarily used for bait in Oregon.

"In the convention Portland's only competitor was Boise," says Mr. Wilson. "and when the contest was over and we had beaten them by a vote of 203½ to 115½, Governor Morrison arose and moved that they make it unanimous which was carried with the utmost good feeling all around. Boise men say that they will come to Portland next year with a delegation larger than Portland had at El Paso, and will capture the next convention.

"All our delegation worked like beavers in the int

"All our delegation worked like beavers in the interest of their home city and received marked recognition. Will R. Wilson of Ontario was a member of R. Wilson of Ontario was a member of the committee on resolutions; A. H. Devers was appointed to the credentials committee; A. B. Wood of Cottage Grove was a member of the committee on organization.

Grove was a member of the committee on organization.

"Judge Stephen A. Lowell of Pendieton, in presenting the name of Portland for the next convention, made a speech that was one of the choicest gems of the entire session. He spoxe 17 minutes and was accorded the closest attention. His kindly reference to Boise was particularly appreciated by everyons. The Californians stayed with Oregon from start to finish."

E. L. Smith was elected vice president of the association: Tom Richardson, secretary, and A. King Wilson a member of the executive committes.

The whole Oregon delegation, consisting of the following named men, returned home today: E. L. Smith, Hood River, Or.; Stephen A. Lowell, Pendieton, Or.; Thomas G. Halley, Pendieton, Or.; H. C.
