GAME WOULD BE AN INTERESTING EVENT

Trite Points in Football That Are Often Overlooked

If all goes well, the University of Oragon and the Multnomah club football elevens will meet again on Christmas afternoon to definitely settle the question of superiority. Such a contest would be gladly welcomed by the football enthusiasts of this city, and there is a doubt regarding the Multnomah club's ability to accommodate the crowd that would wish to witness the struggla.

that would wish to witness the struggla.

Since Thursday's game there has been much said both in praise and censure of the Multnomah team, the latter criticism, however, seeming to have more of a swing than the charitable trait. Football games are all subject to just criticism, but critics should understand football before an attempt is made to censure the playing of 23 men.

Football is often treated as if it were ping-pong or marbles by some of those who pose as being able to talk and write understandingly about the great college game instead of a sport that requires gvit, strength, speed and brains embodied in 22 personalities. It is amusing to listen to the remarks of the extra-special wise class—those who would penalize a feam 15 yards for fumbling, and who would throp dead if they saw a man fall in the sawdust. In the eastern cities and in most places a man would not dare to express himself in private or in public ou the merits of a game unless he were a player who had followed football, and not one who simply has seen a few vagrant games during his lifetime.

Not flattering the great army of young ne few vagrant games during his lifetime.

Not flattering the great army of young men who play football every year soledly for the sake of the good of the game, it is no game for the lean and hungry man whose opinions run in parrow channels and who could be blown over by a summer zephyr; no match for the fallegged man who floats through life on the buoyancy of his own egotism; no pastime for the ignorant man who has spent years at a big educational institution, was not even influenced by the charm of his environments nor willing to learn were double advantages offered him. It is essentially a game for the land, and no others need apply. It is a game where 11 men think as one man, and where each position is as responsible as the other. A man may schieve just as much glory playing guard or center, if he is composed of the right stuff, as if he were a halfback or any other player. Heffelfinger of Yale and Hare of Pennsylvania were guards, and they shone brighter than all their co-workers. DeWitt, last year's captain of Princeton, was a guard, and who is own game, the breakest of his career, against Yale, by his wonderful work. Captain Hogan of Yale this year was a guard, and what a splendid, dashing, daring player he was: If it the good limemen that allow the hilfbacks and fullback to shine, and it is the linemen who stop the enemy's advances. Every position on a football seleven may be made one of honor. Some players insist upon playing back of the line in preference to a line position, thinking that by doing so is the only, way in which to get recognition for his work. This would be all right for the man who goes into the game for selfish purposes and who would have his work. This would be all right for the man who goes into the game for selfish purposes and who would have his work triticised by incompetent critics. But where honest criticism prevails the player who runs entirely across the field in front of the grandstand for a gain of a foot, or oftener for a loss of five or the content of the content of the c er who runs entirely across the field in front of the grandstand for a gain of a foot, or oftener for a loss of five or ten yards, will be severely dealt with in the reporting of the game. Instead of this player getting undeserved credit, the honors will go to the consistent performers who play the game for all it is worth, all 'he time helping their teammates, and not caring for the applause of the spectators.

Such is the real football, and the kind of the spectators.

Such is the real football, and the kind that always wins out. A man may flash for a play or two, but if he doesn't receive the support of his team he will soon be making nothing at all. Of course, some men's work will shine in any company, but it always shines to advantage when it is given for the benefit of team work, and not individual performances.

Oregon's work was admired on Thursday last for the splendid manner in which the men played together. Multnomah's was criticised by those in position to know for lacking co-operation and team work. The secret of the whole game lies in the fact that it is not a one man's game, but a contest for 11 men. Should Multnomah meet Oregon on Christmas day, the clubmen will have to make a big improvement in team work and rely on straight football to win rather than grandstand stunts and fake plays.

PACIFIC STUDENTS LIKE BASKETBALL

(Journal Special Service.)

Forest Grove, Or. Nov. 26.—The students of the university, male and female, are taking a great interest in basketball. The young ladies are very enthusiastic and have been practicing regularly. They want games arranged for them with other schools, but there has been some opposition on the part of the faculty to intercollegiate games for the young ladies. The ladies think if it is proper for other schools they should be allowed to compete with their sisters in other institutions.

The boys are trying hard to develop their skill so that they can get out at good atrong team that will be able to cope with the teams of other institutions of the state. Pacific has never taken much interest in this sport till this year. Therefore this is the first year it has tried to put out a team. If enthusiasm keeps up P. U. will have a good heavy team in the field.

"I will continue to sign a new paper, which he expects to receive from the club officials some time next menth.

"I will continue to play for Griffith and Farrell as long as they want me to play with them," says Keeler.

Keeler is without doubt one of the wealthiest baliplayers in the profession. Ever since he began to play ball he has saved his money, until at the present day he has enough ready casn at hand to keep nim when he quits the game. He owns severil houses in east New York, from which he collects rent each month. The little player could easily sell these houses at a big profit should he care to dispose of them.

Keeler says he intends to play ball a few more years and then enter the real estate business.

Judge William McCreedie, who will become the sole owner of the Portland baseball club tomorrow, paid a visit to the Journal office yesterday attenton and confirmed the Journal's story of the terms of the sale. Judge McCreedie is well versed in the national game, and when asked about his plans for next year said: "I have always been a lover of baseball and have keenly regretted that Portland had such poor nines for the past three years. I expect to close up the deal tomorrow and Manager Mec. Creedie will assume immediate charge, so that no time will be lost in getting a first-class club together. The directors of the club and stockholders have requested me to reisian Mr. Ely in the association in order to get the benefit of his experience in handling the financial end of affairs, which I have heard he did splendidly and capably. I shall do all I can for Mr. Ely, because I have found him a good, square business man. On Monday there will be a meeting of the stockholders, so that everything will be properly ratified. It is our intention to give Portland will co-operate. Portland is a great ball town, and with a good team, the club should do well."

Walter McCreedie, the Browns' new manager, is one of the widest known and cleverest ball tossers in a minor league today. The "Judge," as he is familiary styled, owing to the fact that she is a law student, has been playing professional ball for nine years, and has held position on many of the best teams in the country. When asked regarding his plans for his new club, McCreedie stated, "I do not intend to start out with promises of a pennant, etc. Not at all. I shall be very well satisfied to secure a team that will maintain an average of .500 or so; but, of course, if we can win first, second or third position, I shall be highly satisfied.

"I thoroughly understand the difficulties attendant in the matter of securing players, and can only state that I will endeavor to get the best that money can buy. I am in correspondence with several crack players with whom I am personally acquainted and expect to secure several of them. Of course, I shall make use of the privilege to draft players—you know we can draft from the southern and western leagues—and shall immediately secure a couple of choice men that I have in view from the southern league, whom I think will be capable of pleasing the local fans.

"I will try to secure Louis Castro to play second base, for I am positive that he can deliver the goods, and that under proper handling he will play the game as I saw him play it in Baltimore.

"Of the present team I shall hold all the men except those who belong to some other league. Iberg sind Thielman will certainly be seen with me next season. As to the others, I have not determined as to what disposition I will make.

The Tacoma Tigers Carry Off Honors by Winning Both Pennants.

The final games of the 1904 season will be played this afternoon. Yesterday's victory of the Tigers over Portland cinched the pennant honors for Tacoma, as it is now impossible for Los Angeles to overhaul them, even should Plood's men win both games today and the Tigers lose to Portland. The season has been a successful one, except from a local standpoint, for the Portland nine has been a disappointment to the fans. Los Angeles and Oakland have been strong contenders for the honors, but both teams slumped badly in the final games, and the Tigers having the advantage of playing the weak-
