ALL HANDS MUST WEAR NEW GLOVES

Latest Order of Chief of Police Hunt Highly Distasteful to Patrolmen.

HE HAS THE GOODS AND THEY MUST BE BOUGHT

Reasons Given for Additional Expense on Officers Who Say They Can't Afford It.

Chief of Police Hunt has issued another ukase: Every patrolman on the force must buy gloves of a certain brand, and out of boxes provided by the head of the department himself.

chief simply put down his foot, and it landed on the hand of every member of the department who patrols a beat.

"We have the gloves here, and they must be bought and paid for at once," said Chief Hunt. "We get them at cost. If all the money is paid in without loss of time. These are the very best gloves to be obtained, and the price is only a few cents more than a dollar. The main advantage of these winter gloves is that they dry out soft."

By order, one of the desk men brought a box of the gloves, and a pair was taken out and passed along the line by the chief. He accompanied the exhibition by a running fire of comment on their merits.

The faces of the members of both squads looked as blue as their uniforms on being informed that the order to buy the gloves was mandatory.

"Say, chief, aren't these gloves good enough?" asked one patrolman, holding up a pair of serviceable gloves, still in good condition.

"Suppose they are; what difference does it make?" was the reply. "Do you suppose we can afford to have every one of you fellows going around with a different kind of glove on? You might just as well have a uniform different from that worn by the others."

During his talk to the men the chief stated that the order to invest in the gloves had come from the "committee." General Beebe and Big Sichel, members of the committee, are looked on by the men who have to dig into their pockets as the originators of the latest scheme for causing them to part with a fraction of their salaries.

"I am the it," said Chief Hunt, when questioned as to the identity of those meant by the use of the word "committee."

MAN HOLE ON FIRST STREET IS MEAN TRAP

"You'll fall into the manholes at First and Morrison streets, if you don't watch out!"

This is the warning given by G. B. Monroe, who has been keeping a sharp eye on the covering of the manhole at the above named corner during the past few days. Mr. Monroe states that every time a heavy truck or wagon rolls by this hole in the street, the covering flies off as if worked by some secret spring. He says that he has had to replace the covering several times during the past few days.

"I called a policeman's attention to the hole last Friday," said Mr. Monroe, "but Saturday afternoon I noticed that nothing had been done toward covering it. Some day a child will toddle up and fall in. Then there will be a great stir over the affair."

"Not trusting to the policeman's memory, I told the street sweeper of the danger, but he, too, seems to have forgotten the matter entirely."

"But this fly-trap manhole is not the only thing on First street that needs fixing. The pavement on the street north of Madison, which was laid down about 14 months ago, is bad; in fact, it is worse than it was before the new pavement was put down."

DIGS MINED GOLD OUT OF THIRD STREET

With a pick, such as is used by miners in digging minerals from mother earth, J. H. Parkinson dug $10 worth of gold out of Third street this morning. A large crowd gathered to witness the mining.

Parkinson stood at the corner of Third and Alder streets, waiting for an "S" car to pass, and just before the car reached him a $10 gold coin slipped from his hand and rolled under the wheels of the forward truck of the car. As the wheels passed over the coin it was crushed into the slot of the track, and so fast was it imbedded that it was necessary to use a pick before it could be removed.

Although crushed out of all resemblance to an eagle, the golden mass was worth almost as much as it was before being run over by the car.

VISITORS TO FAIR TO HAVE CHEAP ROOMS

Exposition Accommodation Bureau Has Been Organized to Prevent Crowding.

The Exposition Accommodation bureau has filed articles of incorporation and has established general offices at 230 Goodnough building, Fifth and Yamhill streets, with James Steel president, John C. McLennan vice-president, and Eugene D. White secretary and general manager. Its purpose is to obtain control of a large number of rooms situated convenient to street car lines to rent to visitors to the Lewis and Clark fair at reasonable rates, and it has the indorsement of the Lewis and Clark fair management.

This organization will solve the problem of proper accommodations for the visitors. Rooms will be engaged in advance, and as soon as they are vacated new visitors will be installed. No authority has yet been granted by the fair management to anyone to solicit accommodations in its name. The representatives will show proper certificates when they call on house owners. It is said the accommodation bureau has an application for rooms from a party of 150 people from Illinois.

that could be found in that famous district. Other specimens that were not included in today's shipment will be sent March 1 from the Bohemia district.

In addition to the shipments that have already been made samples of ore will be sent from at least 40 different mines in the Galilee district. Ore will also be brought from the Blue mountain, Gold hill, Bumpier and all the other mining districts of the state. From the Gold hill district there will be a special exhibit consisting of slate and three different kinds of granite.

The latest wedding near Corvallis was not designated in the local report as pretty, or lovely, or quiet, but as very nice. The change of phrase is a slight relief, anyway.

NOTABLE MEETING OF OREGON LAWYERS

The gathering of lawyers in this city tomorrow will in some respects be the most notable in the history of the state. The annual meeting of the Oregon Bar association will be held at 10 o'clock in circuit court room No. 1. Judge George H. Burnett of Salem will preside. Portland lawyers say that action will probably be taken for holding a great meeting in this city during the Lewis and Clark fair, when leading lawyers of all the surrounding states will be brought together and an interstate convention held.

At tomorrow's meeting Judge M. C. George will give an address upon "Recollections of the Bench and Bar." O. M. Paxton will speak upon "History of the Codes of Oregon," and officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

Nearly 100 lawyers, from all parts of the state, are expected to gather tomorrow evening at the Commercial club to attend the banquet given to the bar of the state. Judge Lionel K. Webster

WOMAN THE MOTHER OF FOUR SMALL CHILDREN

Urgel Omet Tells Sad Story of Deceit on Part of Wealthy Lumberman.

John B. Yoon, a wealthy lumberman of Cathlamet, Wash., has been sued in the state circuit court for $100,000 for alienating the affections of Della Omet from her husband, Urgel, who brings the suit.

The defendant is charged with deliberately and maliciously working for over five years to induce Della to leave her home. It is alleged that he used his great wealth to dazzle the eyes of the woman; that he purchased her many beautiful presents of necklaces and dresses, and that he prevailed upon her to elope by assurances that her husband was unfaithful.

From 1914 to 1924 the husband was employed by the defendant in a logging camp, and he alleges that Yoon kept him at work that he might make love to the woman. In July, 1924, the husband says he discovered the designs of the lumber man, and quit his employ, but that immediately the wife left her home and has since refused to return.

The couple were married in 1886, and have four children. They formerly lived in Carson City, Nev., but moved to Cathlamet, Wash., in 1922.

The complaint filed this morning alleges that Yoon immediately began paying attentions to Mrs. Omet, and through the agency of presents, gifts of money, endearing love terms, and malicious misrepresentations regarding Omet's false nature, induced the woman to leave her home and four children to live with him.
