when the fight was finished his face was a mass of cuts and bruises.

In the fifth round Corbett's seconds saw that Nelson was out-generaling their man, and they kept yelling to Corbett to stay away from Nelson and protect himself. It made no difference whether Corbett stayed away or ran away, the Chicago man was after him like a hungry wolf and kept the fight in his territory all the time, forcing him to the ropes time and time again.

Corbett's backers were confident that their man would manage to get in the wallop that would put a quietus on the Dane, but the wary Nelson did not give the Denverite the slightest opportunity to land, and even when Corbett did send in what seemed to be a good blow it never disturbed Nelson in the least. As the fight progressed the crowd was aware that it was only a question of time before Corbett would be so weakened by his own wild swinging and Nelson's stiff body punches that he would fall, and the cheers began coming in thunderous tones for the Dane.

The ninth round was another had one for Corbett, and although he stood the severe punishment in good style, he was unable to land any of his vicious blows. At the end of the round he wobbled to his corner and his seconds knew that the end was near. The tenth was not very old when the crowd yelled "stop the fight," and at the same time the same went no.

Another right found a resting place on Corbett's mouth. At this stage, Corbett gough to the jaw and a left traight to the face, Nelson kept up the work, finally nearly flooring Corbett with a right swing to the jaw. Nelson had corbett going, forcing him against the ropes, with blood streaming from his mouth and nose and presenting a sorry spectacle. Corbett was weak, and almost fell as he reached his corner. The Dane was fighting Corbett to a stand-still at this part of the fight.

minute Corbett was short with right for the body, and they went to close quarters, Nelson shoving Corbett about the ring with his head on Corbett's shoulders. Nelson swung his left hard to the head, and Corbett was wild with a right counter. It looked as if Corbett invited Nelson's blows in order to clear the way for his right. Corbett crossed twice with his left to the face and in a mix-up Nelson whipped his right to Corbett's jaw. Nelson forced Corbett against the ropes, but the latter uppercut right to the jaw that sent Nelson back. In the center of the ring, Nelson sent straight left to the face, and as the bell sounded repeated the dose. Corbett's nose was bleeding slightly as he took his seat. The honors were slightly in Nelson's favor in this round. Round 6—Corbett planted a right on the body. Both swung with right and left, but none of the blows landed. Nelson continued to force Corbett about the ring and against the ropes, mostly with his head and shoulders. While in this position, Corbett got in some good short-arm blows, a left to the jaw and a right uppercut to the face. Corbett received a straight right on the nose, but Corbett's nose and mouth, landing several terrific left and right short-arm blows. The annual meeting of the Portland Kennel club will be held tomorrow evening in the justice coupt, Ainsworth building, at 8 o'clock, and while the secretary has not notified the members by postal card, as has been done heretofore, it is expected that all members who can will be present, as matters of importance will come up.

The principal business of the meeting will be the election of the board of directors for the ensuing year and there will probably be two lists of candidates up, one in favor of the Western Kennel club rules governing the coming bench show, which is to be held in June under the auspices of the Lewis and Clark fair, and the other favoring joining the national association, the American Kennel club and having their rules govern the show.

Certain members of the present foard of directors who favor the Western should be a great battle, and the Chi-cago lad will have many backers de-spite Britt's popularity and fighting prowess.

After the fight Corbett, for the first time in his career, acknowledged that he was fairly beaten.

they will be in their efforts.

For the past three years there have been two factions in the Portland Kennel club, although the members have always used wisdom and have not divided the club on the question of W. K. L. and A. K. C., but it begins to look as if the A. K. C. members were determined upon at least trying a show under the A. K. C. rules, and probably the coming show will be held under the older body's rules.

The cause of much of the trouble

the coming show will be held under the older body's rules.

The cause of much of the trouble is: Last summer the officers of the Western Kennel league passed a rule that anyone showing a dog under other than W. K. L. rules, west of the 110th degree of longitude, would be disqualified, and this raised a storm of protest principally because the local fanciers often showed at the big spring show in San Francisco, the leading show of the west, and as that show is always held under A. K. C. rules, it meant if they did so again, they would be disqualified and could not show anywhere else on the coast as long as the W. K. L. dominated.

After much protest, however, the W. K. L. reconsidered their action and revoked the troublesome rule, but in the meantime the A. K. C. Pacific advisory board in San Francisco passed a rule that any person who was on the board of directors of a club holding a show under other than A. K. C. rules, west of the 116th degree of longitude, or anyone acting as judge of such a show, would be disqualified, but if they were wise coough not to disqualify an exhibitor and thus while they can keep officers from acting at a W. K. L. show or a

BOTH SIDES WISH

Judge from judging they do not bother the exhibitor, hence the rule does not affect the entry at their show as it would have necessarily done under the W. K. L. rule that was finally revoked.

Among the leading fanciers who are in the local club are, for the Western Kennel league: E. F. Willis, William Goldman, Frank Fleming, Frank Thorn, J. A. Taylor, and several others, while among the A. K. C. element are Dr. E. F. Tucker, Dr. yenney, Dr. James C. Zan, W. B. Fechelmer, Joe Pratt, F. E. Watkins, T. E. Daniels and others who annually bench dogs at the show.

Deficers Will BE

Judge from judging they do not bother the confidence in Captain Heston, who in four years has never played end losing game of football. He would be today at the height of his career in more senses that the height of his career in Michigan students agree to a man that Heston is one of the greatest football-players that has ever graced a gridiron.
