

COQUILLE'S CREW IN DESPERATE STRAIT

Schooner Almost Wrecked and Men Were Without Food for Two Weeks.

VESSEL WAS DISABLED BY A TERRIFIC STORM

Seamen Are Saved from Starvation by Timely Appearance of Steamer Whittier.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Astoria, Or., Dec. 2.—Out of provisions and with a good portion of her rigging gone the schooner Coquille was spoken off the Oregon coast yesterday by the steamer Whittier, which arrived this morning from San Francisco. The officers and crew had been practically out of provisions for a fortnight, and they were in a starving condition. The Whittier gave them a supply of flour, bacon and potatoes sufficient to last a week. Forty-two days ago the schooner sailed from San Francisco for Coquille, and by making an ordinary passage she should have reached her destination in 10 days. Her captain reported that she was struck by a terrific gale shortly after leaving the Bay city and the vessel was so badly damaged that it was almost impossible to make any headway. Drifting with the wind the schooner was carried out to sea, far from the path frequented by the coasters. When the storm subsided the schooner managed to beat her way back toward the coast, but not until all the supplies on board had been practically exhausted. Two weeks ago several steamers were sighted by the half-starved crew, whose signals of distress failed to attract any attention. Some of the supplies had been washed overboard, and for a time the men were forced to live on half decayed potatoes. Discouraged and almost famished, it is reported that the sailors were getting in a despondent frame of mind. As there is now no storm off the coast to speak of it is believed that the vessel will be able to reach port without experiencing further difficulty. The Coquille is of but 105 tons gross register, and she carries a crew of five. She was built at Coos Bay in 1882.

HELP WANTED FOR AN UNFORTUNATE FAMILY

Ernest Kuhn, who is in charge of the First-street Salvation Army headquarters, has discovered a sad case of destitution in a Portland lodging house. A laborer, his wife and two small children came from the east. They started with little more than railroad fare, and upon arriving here the husband was unable to find work. He was seized with a serious illness and for two weeks has been helpless. The Army wants help for these unfortunate, either money, clothing or provisions, and urges that contributions be sent in. The address of headquarters is 264 First street, the telephone number Main 4495.

MORE CARE MUST BE EXERCISED AT PRISON

City jailers were instructed by Police Captain Bailey this morning that before one relieves another a trip must be made around the prison to see that everything is in satisfactory condition. The object of the order was to learn if newspapers, tobacco and other articles had been sent in, and in case of anything being wrong to provide that the fault shall be laid on the proper shift. Patrol drivers were also instructed to make a tour of the stable prior to going off duty to see that the harness was in proper order. In case of accidents, through harness breaking, the fault could under such conditions be placed where it belongs.

ROBBED IN SALOON WHILE SLUMBERING

Frank Gardner, a sailor, reported to the police last night that he had been robbed of $8 in the notorious saloons of "Liverpool Lix" at Second and Davis streets. He said he spent several dollars in the place, and finally went to sleep in a chair. The money, he said, was stolen from his pocket while he was wrapped in slumber. An investigation is being made. The alleged victim of the theft is one of the shipwrecked sailors who were sighted by the steamer George W. Elder near Tillamook and rescued by a tug sent out to them from Astoria.

CHIEF HUNT PROVES A WELCOME GUEST

Received with Distinguished Consideration in the District of Red Lights and Awnings.

HIS VISIT CAUSES MANY HEARTS TO TREMBLE

Aged Chieftain Gallantly Assures His Friends He is Not Warring on Women.

Chief of Police Hunt made a visit to four disorderly houses in the heart of the city last night, with Detective Weiner as his companion. "Do you think I had better wear a uniform or go in plain clothes?" inquired the head of the department. "I think you had better wear a uniform," replied the detective, "but I don't think you should wear a uniform if you are going to be in the district of red lights and awnings." "You know, we are not looking for notoriety, chief," he suggested. "By no means, by no means," was the hasty answer of the big chieftain. Properly attired for the visit, the two set out. First they went to the house of Frankie Campbell on Park street near Alder, where a social chat lasting 8 or 10 minutes Miss Campbell thought the time ripe to learn the object of the attention shown her by the chief and his right-hand man. "Is any trouble going to be made for us, chief?" she anxiously inquired. "The police chief immediately disclaimed any intention of causing trouble. With native gallantry he vouchsafed the information that he was not 'making war on women.' "Are they thinking of moving us?" was the next question. "The chief declared that the police were not thinking of doing anything of the kind. Detective Weiner added that the only trouble to be feared on that score was from the grand jury. "However," he remarked cheerfully, "I think a good deal of this grand jury talk is 'hot air'; I don't believe it will make much trouble for you. Gamblers are the only people they are really after." Chief Hunt nodded his assent. Then they rose to take their departure. It had been a short, but enjoyable visit. Miss Campbell felt visibly relieved on learning that the police did not intend making trouble for her. So far as shown by the conversation the visit was made for the purpose of "officially" relieving the woman's mind of a fear that she was to be moved to another quarter of the city. Next the house of Carmen Clark, diagonally across the street, was visited. Miss Clark is the little woman whose charms caused a jury to find her guiltless of the charge of conducting a slot machine, though the evidence was complete. Then the chief and his companion proceeded to the house of Nina Sichel. The proprietress was visibly perturbed by their appearance, but was guilty of no breaches of etiquette in playing the role of hostess. The last place on the visiting list was the Harem, at Sixth and Stark streets. This place was formerly conducted by the Steele sisters. When Chief Hunt came in, a squad of patrolmen, lined up at the station, to report to him all places where nickel-in-the-slot machines were running, one of his men stepped out of line and informed him that one was in operation at the Harem. "Never mind that place, I'll attend to that," said the big potentate, with a comprehensive sweep of his hand. Whether he attended to the machine is not known. The records in the office of the police clerk do not show that the Steele sisters ever paid a fine for conducting a slot machine. At the Harem a spirit of disquietude prevailed on the arrival of the head of the police department. However, his venerable appearance and coriolar air soon dispelled the stage of fright. Owing to the lateness of the hour no other houses were visited. It is understood that the rounds will be completed later on.

SAILORS IN COURT

Nestor Ettonan was arrested last night on the charge of assaulting John Codesman aboard the steamer Annie Larson, lying at the dock of Inman, Poulson & Co.'s mill. In the police court this morning Codesman claimed to be unable to remember any of the circumstances of the case. The trouble is said to have been of racial origin. Judge Hoger continued the case in order that the police may make a further investigation.
