BRITT IS TRAINING AT THE SEAL ROCKS

James Edward Moves His Traps to the Ocean's Side for Fight Preparation.

CALIFORNIAN MAY BE HOT FAVORITE

Says He Would Rather Be Sport and Get Credit Should He Win.

(Journal Special Service.) San Francisco, Dec. 8.—Jimmy Britt packed up his traps yesterday morning and moved out to the Seal Rock house, where he will be located the next two weeks. He has trained at Croll's in Alameda for the most of his fights, but Jimmy Croffroth, who has an interest in the resort out by the ocean, prevailed upon him to abandon his old training grounds. Britt will bring patronage to the Seal Rock house, and the proprietor can't have too much of this.

Britt has been working quietly at the Olympic club for several days doing light boxing in the gymnasium and taking tramps on the road. As Jimmy has two weeks to train at the Seal Rock house, he will not want for time. He will have his same old corps of trainers. Frank Rafael will act as chief sparring partner, and "Tiv" Kreling will teach him some new points in wrestling. Sam Berger and Frank McConnell will drop out occasionally and give Britt some heavy work, which he will need.

"What do the people you meet think of the champion this morning before he left for the ocean beach. The majority pick you to win," responded one of his associates.

"If that is the case I will be on the short end of the betting," said Britt, who seemed rather surprised.

"Yes, you will probably be a 10 to 8 or a 10 to 7 favorite."

"I am sorry to hear you say that," continued Jimmy, for I don't like to be on the long end, and I will tell you why. When you are the favorite the public expect too much of you. They look for you to knock your opponent out in three or four rounds, and if you don't, they say you are no good. Even if you get the decision, they don't give you the credit coming to you. When the other fellow is the favorite, and you beat him, then the public give you your just deserts. When I fought Corbett I was more at ease with myself than in any other fight, and he was the favorite. Everybody thought he would win, and a little was expected of me. If I escaped a knockout they said I would be lucky. I was cool and calm, and the fact that my defeat was predicted on all sides did not worry me at all. Some might think that I want to be on the short end for betting purposes, but there is nothing in that. I don't bet enough myself to have the odds make much difference. My friends bet a great deal more money than I do."

FIGHTER'S LIFE IS FULL OF VARIETY

Young Corbett Tells About His Experiences in Dear Old London.

The life of the well known pugilist is full of variety. In the course of his travel around the country he comes in contact with all sorts of persons, and some of the incidents that befall him are interesting, says the Denver Post.

Once in while these incidents find their way into print. The other night, after his defeat by Nelson, Young Corbett told a few good stories anent his recent trip abroad.

The Denver boxer stopped at the Hotel Cecil in London. A couple of days after his arrival Young Corbett, entering the cafe, invited all those in the room to join him in a drink, as is the custom in this country.

In the place at the time were six men and five of them accepted the pugilist's invitation. The other refused, and much to Corbett's chagrin bought a drink for himself after the fighter's order had been served.

Without showing any signs of being disturbed, although he said he felt the slight keenly enough, Corbett approached the individual, who proved to be a much prejudiced Englishman, and asked: "My dear fellow, how is it that you would not drink with me after I invited you? Yet you were apparently thirsty, for I see you bought one for yourself and drank it. Do you know that in my country, America, such a proceeding is considered a gross insult?"

The Englishman looked at Corbett in a contemptuous way, and, after hesitating for a moment, replied: "I do not know what it is in America, nor do I care, but I do know that in England it is an insult to invite strangers to join in a drink in a public bar. I did not wish to offend you, but if there is any apology coming you are the person to offer it."

And saying this the Englishman walked away.

On another occasion Corbett, after buying a drink in London, tipped his hat to the barmaid who served him. This was observed by an Englishman, who quickly called him to task.

"What do you mean by tipping your hat to that woman in my presence?" he demanded sharply.

Corbett taken aback by the question, inquired whether the woman in his wife and whether he had offended her. The Englishman grew red in the face and his manner betokened anger.

"No, no," he shouted, "she isn't my wife, thank God. She's simply a hireling, and when you tip your hat to her in my presence you insult me. We don't tip our hats to help in this country. It may be etiquette in America, where you come from, judging from your talk, but in England it does not go. Good day, sir; good day."

HART'S CHALLENGE PLEASES JOHNSON

(Journal Special Service.) San Francisco, Dec. 8.—Martin Hart's sweeping challenge was joyous news to Jack Johnson, the colored heavy-weight champion, who has been pinning his hopes on the favorite to beat him.

When Hart said he would box all corners the sports had a sneaking notion that "Mr. Johnson" would not be tardy in coming to the fore with an acceptance. They were not off their trolics. Zeke Abrams, his backer, called on the sporting editor of the Bulletin and left a crisp $1,000 dollar bill.

"This is for Mr. Hart," said Zeke, "and it can go any way he desires. I want to see you fight, and I will allow it to go as a side bet or as a forfeit to blind a match. It doesn't matter a cent to us. We are ready to fight any heavy-weight living—Hart, Jeffries, or anybody. Jack is fast climbing into Jeffries' class as far as weight goes. He was on the scales the other day and tipped them at 213. In condition I should say that he would fight at 190 or 195 pounds. I don't want the public to think that we are looking for a cheap advertising Johnson was never more serious in his life, and our money speaks for itself."

Club managers looking for attractive cards could do worse than match Hart and Johnson. Though Hart is a stranger to Californians, his record is familiar to all lovers of boxing. He is a hurricane scrapper who has a right hand that brings sleep whenever it lands.

GOLD LEAF BOWLERS OUTPIN ALL STARS

The Gold Leaf team of the Portland Bowling association defeated the Stars in a practice match last evening on the Portland alleys. The first game was a tie; an extra frame was rolled to decide it, the Gold Leaf winning by 17 pins. The second game was a decided victory for the same team, they winning it by 169 pins, giving them the match.

FOOTBALL FUMBLES

Portlanders will be disappointed if "Chancy" Bishop does not play with the Willamette eleven on Saturday. "Chancy" thinks that it looks much better if his eleven plays without the assistance of the coach, although there is nothing to prevent his playing.

TOOK A CHANCE

An amusing thing happened during a 19 to 1 game in Boston. In the seventh inning a Pittsburg runner started for second and Catcher Moran's throw arrived in Fred Raymer's hands a second too late.

GOOD BOUT TONIGHT

(Journal Special Service.) Pottsville, Pa., Dec. 8.—Jack Bonner of Summitt Hill and the Callahan of Philadelphia, will meet in a 16-round bout before the Twentieth Century club tonight. The two old-timers are regarded as well matched and the contest promises to be one of the fastest seen hereabouts this season.

BULL BOYS FROM CAMP AT CLIFTON

Oregon Lumbermen Acquiver with Excitement Over One Day's Cut of Timber.

BEST RECORD OF YEARS BY THOUSANDS OF FEET

Contest that Has Aroused the Interest of Every Logger in the State.

Among the Oregon logging camps there has been one race run, and others are prospect. These contests are attracting the attention of every logging camp along the Pacific coast, and when the next one takes place there is likely to be some money change hands, for loggers are willing to wager on their favorite crew as a miner is willing to lay out a whole year's earnings on a game of draw poker.

The contest is the result of the remarkable performance of the logging crew of "Johnny" Yeon a few weeks ago. When a logging crew gets out from 50,000 to 60,000 feet of timber in a day of 10 hours it is considered a good day's work. This standard with a few bursts of speed now and then has contented "Johnny" Yeon, until a few weeks ago, when he decided to establish a world's record.

Taking a Willamette engine, 10 by 15, and picking up crew, with A. Chisholm as engineer, "Johnny" Yeon started operations one bright morning. When the day's work was completed it was found the crew had got out 187 logs, aggregating 142,000 feet. The haul was from 400 to 1,000 feet.

This established a world's record, and "Johnny" Yeon and his whole crew have since been going around smoking good cigars and feeling perfectly contented with themselves. They felt they had "made good," and every logging camp was ready to acknowledge them the "best ever," except a crew of the Oregon Timber & Lumber company, at Clifton. J. W. Carlson is engineer of the "Jack" McCoy. "Yeon" started operations one bright morning. When the day's work was completed it was found the crew had got out 187 logs, aggregating 142,000 feet. The haul was from 400 to 1,000 feet.

DIAMOND GLISTENINGS
