JOHN KELLY UNVEILS THE LAWSON COCKTAIL

Its color is the crimson of the $30,000 carnation, and its name is the Lawson cocktail.

It had to come. The marvel of it is that it didn't come sooner. How a man could juggle a magazine and the copper market at the top of his voice as long as Lawson has without having a drink or a five-cent cigar named for him is really astonishing. Although hating to "start anything," John E. Kelly couldn't stand it any longer, and so he did it. This is the only authentic his-ing and agreeable. It produces philosophic and other reflections.

After listening to the solid business citizen reflect for a few minutes ponderously and painfully on some problem or other, Anybody flipantly observed, "There's nothing new under the sun," realizing the triteness of the remark but hoping to change the conversation. Here Mike cut in:

"Who's been tellin' you that?" he demanded.

"Solomon," said Anybody, oracularly.

"You mean that crazy pawnbroker down on Second street?" He don't know what it is," said Mike, decisively.

"Solomon's out of the running, any way," put in Kelly. "He cashed in long ago. Now, I think he's off. Let me show you."

And while the Solid Citizen and Anybody and Mike crowded up to the van rail and watched, Kelly took:

A mixing glass with some shaved ice at the bottom.

The usual amount of gin—

"Aw, it's only a Martini," said Mike.

"You wait a bit, son," said Kelly. Then Kelly shook into the glass containing the ice and the gin:

Two dashes of Pechaud's bitters, One dash of orange bitters.

Then Kelly stirred the mixture well, strained it, divided it, deftly filled four glasses, dropped a Maraschino cherry apiece into two and an olive apiece into the other two, twisted a bit of lemon peel into the top of each drink and, raising his glass, said:

"Gentlemen, the Lawson cocktail."

BRAVE CREW SAVES MANY LIVES ON STEAMER

(Journal Special Service.)
Stamford, Conn., Dec. 17.—Seven members of the crew and two passengers perished in the flames that burned the steamer Glen Island, off the coast of Greenwich, Conn., at an early hour this morning.

The dead: Mrs. Rose Schajaki, a passenger; unidentified man, a passenger; W. E. Henderson, first assistant engineer; Frans Busch, fireman; Newman Miller, fireman; John Burke, fireman; Otto Alanson, fireman; Otto Burg, deckhand; R. P. Bernas, deckhand.

The steamer left on her regular run from New York to New Haven last night. Her crew consisted of 21 men and she carried 10 passengers and a heavy freight cargo.

Had it not been for the bravery and discipline that prevailed, many more lives would have been lost. Each man stood at his post and assisted passengers to the boats, making no effort to escape until all were safely away from the burning vessel. The origin of the fire is unknown. It was discovered about midnight and in a short time the boat was ablaze from stem to stern. Fortunately the passenger list was light, although the Glen Island was a favorite with travelers.

WINTER WATERS BASE.
(Special Dispatch to the Journal.)
Vancouver, Wash., Dec. 17.—The three-masted schooner T. W. Watson, in tow of the Harvest Queen, left down the river yesterday, en route for San Francisco. She carries a cargo of 600,000 feet of lumber from the Columbia mills at this place.

Winter Rates to Yaquina Bay.
The Southern Pacific Co. will sell, on Wednesday and Saturdays of each week until March 31, 1905, low rate round trip tickets to Yaquina, limited to 15 days from date of sale. The date of these excursion tickets during the winter months is a new departure in the history of the company's winter excursions. For local applications apply to the local agent or to the general agent at Portland, Ore.
