IF YOUR PICTURE, OR THAT OF A FRIEND, IS HERE IT'S WORTH MONEY!

Rules of the Snapshot Contest

THE JOURNAL photographers, in their quest for snap shots during the past week, found some excellent subjects. The interest in the contest is unabated. One man says his daughter follows the same route to school every day in the hope The Journal camera fiend will catch her. If she gets into the right light and focus and the photographer is around he will get her picture.

Everywhere The Journal is being complimented on its enterprise. That the snap shots are studied is evident, for one man when he came to get his prize said that before he was out of bed a friend telephoned him that his portrait was in The Journal snapshot gallery. He got the paper and there was his picture.

The persons, whose pictures appear on this page were unaware they were being photographed for The Journal. They are certainly absolute strangers to The Journal's photographers. They just happened to be in the right light and in the right focus when the picture man pressed the button. Snap went the shutter and here is the picture.

Each of these pictures is worth $1 to the person whose portrait appears on this page, when the claimant proves his or her identity. If your picture is not here, maybe the picture of a friend is. Do that friend a good turn and let him know his portrait is in The Journal, for it is worth $1 to him.

All that is necessary for the claimants to do is to come to The Journal office and establish their identity to the satisfaction of the Snap-Shot Contest Editor. If claimants live outside of the city they should write at once to the Snap-Shot Contest Editor and send their own portrait to be compared with the picture published on this page.

No claim will be paid twice for the same picture and no claim will be considered unless it shall have been made within one week of the date of The Sunday Journal in which the picture appears. The Snap-Shot Contest Editor will enter into no correspondence on any subject except as regards an actual claim, and his decision on all questions arising out of these rules or on any claim that may be made, shall be final and binding. The Journal will not be responsible for any loss or delay in the transmission or delivery of any claim from outside of the city. All claimants within Portland will be paid their claims at The Journal office as soon as they establish their identity.

Next week The Journal photographers will be out again. Their cameras will snap and snap and next Sunday the pictures will be published. Look for your portrait and that of your friends.
