PARCELING PRAISE FOR GETTING MONEY

Congressional Action on Canal Appropriation Largely Due to Coast Legislative Action.

BUT EVERY MAN DID HIS DUTY, AS WAS EXPECTED

Chairman Burton in Personal Letter, Gives Same Good Advice for Future Effort.

"My advice has been in all these cases to educate public sentiment so that it may sustain larger appropriations for rivers and harbors," writes T. E. Burton, chairman of the rivers and harbors appropriations committee, in a letter to the Portland Commercial club. "We are spending something over $20,000,000 a year for river and harbor improvements. If all those which are pressed were appropriated for, $100,000,000 would be required."

Chairman Burton's letter, which was somewhat personal, was in reply to a letter and clippings from The Journal sent him by the Commercial club. The Journal articles maintained that Chairman Burton was a friend of the Columbia river and would do the best that could be done toward bettering its condition, and referred to the fact that President H. M. Calkins, of the Commercial club, was a former college student under Burton's tutelage. It is a general opinion among business men that no appropriation for the canal would have been secured but for the persistent and combined efforts of the elements engaged in the struggle for the appropriation.

"Perhaps the bulk of the real influence brought to bear upon the appropriations committee came from the united action of legislatures of the states of Oregon, Washington and Idaho," said a prominent member of the Commercial club. "The heavy pressure upon Washington came when these bodies got up and declared that the federal government, in refusing to proceed with construction of the Cello canal, would commit a positive breach of faith with the state of Oregon as well as ignore the needs and united demands of three great states. If credit is to be parcelled around, like taffy at a candy-pull, I presume the three legislatures should have some, and our delegation at Washington is entitled to a portion. The remainder we ought to divide around among local workers and the press. Every man did his duty, and every effort put forth had its effect in making up the force of the combined assault that won the victory."

SHAW FORMALLY TOLD OF HIS NOMINATION

Mrs. Woodcock, Female Warwick, Announces Choice for the Presidency.

Back to the woodpile with presidential-timber, Mrs. M. L. Woodcock announces that she is in favor of Leslie M. Shaw of Iowa for the next president of the United States.

Mrs. Woodcock has a banner which she calls the "Rosenfelt flag," and speaks admiringly of the part it played in electing Mr. Roosevelt. Just to show the whole nation that she is really in earnest, the owner of the "Rosenfelt flag" has written the following letter to Speaker Cannon of the house of representatives:

"Portland, Or., Jan. 25, 1906.—Speaker of the House, Congress, Washington, D. C.—Sir, I am going to be at the Lewis and Clark fair with the Roosevelt flag, and have Secretary Shaw in view for the presidency in the 1908 election. All of the people I have spoken to in regard to him are in favor of him being the next president, and I suppose this matter will be brought up before the senate. I would be very glad to hear from you on this subject. I want to work on this political question at the Lewis and Clark fair, and I suppose that Mr. Shaw's consent will have to be secured before I can get to work on it. I should be pleased to confer with you on the subject whenever anything important comes up.

"I understand that the district attorney of the United States for the district of Oregon will lend me the oil painting of President Roosevelt for use at the Lewis and Clark fair.

"I wish that you would put forth your best efforts in connection with this matter, and would like to have my letter read before the house so that they will thoroughly understand my attitude in regard to Mr. Shaw. Yours respectfully, MRS. M. L. WOODCOCK."

ONE OF THE GREATEST OF ALL WORLD'S FAIRS

Full-page advertisements for the Lewis and Clark fair have been ordered by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, to be run in the February issues of the Review of Reviews, the Atlantic Monthly and Scribner's magazine. Henry A. Rowe, Portland agent of the road, has received the proof sheets. The announcement describes the exposition as "one of the greatest of all world's fairs."

"Our company is doing some unusual advertising work for the Lewis and Clark fair," said Mr. Rowe. "The magazine advertising will be continued, and a special folder will be issued. I have sent a number of engravings and am now forwarding new photographs of all the exposition buildings, to be used in the magazine and folder advertising."

SAFE BLOWN OPEN IN RAILROAD STATION

Cracksmen Make Haul in the Southern Pacific Company's Jefferson Street Office.

RAID PLAGE ALMOST IN HEARING OF WATCHMAN

Criminals Are Supposed to Be Graduates of Judge Hunt's Kangaroo Court.

Cracksmen looted the safe of the Southern Pacific's Jefferson street station shortly after 12 o'clock last night, securing $80 and several checks for small sums. Detectives believe the robbers are three recently arrived criminals who were released from the "kangaroo court" by Judge Hunt.

The crime was the work of experts. The knob that controls the combination on the door was pounded off and a heavy charge of black powder was placed in the crevice. The explosion caused the complete wreck of the safe, hurled the iron door from its hinges and across the room. The contents of the safe were scattered vice.

In an unlocked drawer were two $20 gold pieces and $4 in silver that had been left by workmen for safe keeping. This money was overlooked.

At 11:40 o'clock Night Watchman Frank Merrill made his rounds, and the conductor of an outgoing train went into the station to make his report—the same conductor who was working in the place of Conductor Keizer, who had a pistol duel with a highwayman on the Madison street bridge Wednesday night. It is believed the bandits concealed behind a long train when the conductor and night watchman went into the station, watched the railroad men, and began work as soon as they left.

At 11:20 Night Watchman Merrill in again making his rounds went into the station. The room was filled with smoke and everything was in confusion. He notified police headquarters and Ticket Agent O. A. Blinks.

The charge of powder was so arranged that little noise was made by the explosion. The rumbling of the train as it started from the station is also believed to have prevented those who were near from hearing the report.

Detectives have discovered a clue to the identity of the cracksmen.

MICHIGAN SOCIETY WANTS STATE EXHIBIT

Members of the Michigan society of Oregon are making a hard fight for a Michigan exhibit at the Lewis and Clark exposition. At a meeting of the society last night it was announced that scores of letters had been written to prominent men of Michigan asking them to use their influence with the legislature to make an appropriation for a fair exhibit.

A committee to have charge of all entertainments to be given by the society was named as follows: W. R. McGarry, Mrs. Lottie Wade, Mrs. A. L. Petrie, Mrs. Arthur Langguth, Mrs. J. P. Gerdy, Mrs. O. R. Baker and Mrs. H. A. Stark.

The following members were added to the roll: Mrs. T. H. Hohenshelt, Mrs. J. E. Gillis, G. E. Lawrence, W. H. Bronson, William R. McGarry, Mrs. Ben Cooper, B. G. Cooper, Francis Schatz, Mrs. Eva B. Pillsbury, Mrs. D. Taylor, Mrs. C. S. Hosmer, M. S. Collins, J. Transhall, Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Simmons, Elgin Simmons, S. W. Lawrence, E. H. Dimon.

GIRLS' GYMNASTIC CLASS

The girls' gymnastic class conducted by Miss Schloth, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. will give an entertainment Friday, January 27, at 8 o'clock, in the hall on East Yamhill, between Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth streets. Miss Katherine Erenbach of Detroit, Mich., will give selected readings from "Mr. Dorley," and will render a vocal solo. There will be drills and fancy marching by the class. Miss Francis will be the accompanist of the evening.

About Ads On The Classified Page

It's a common occurrence for The Journal to secure positions for persons who are seeking employment through its classified columns. You should remember, too, they're inserted on a time free—and no questions asked.

Horse broke out of stable and wandered away. See under "Lost and Found"; gives description. Liberal reward offered for the return of same to owner.

Did you ever stop to consider what a saving of steps you could make when you are looking for furnished rooms, by glancing over the ads on the classified page and picking out just what you are looking for in location and advantages offered? No use going on a "wild goose chase" for something you can easily lay your hands on.

Would you like a pet for the children, or even yourself? Pomeranian Spitz puppies for sale at Ranier's boarding kennels, Peninsular station. To get there take St. Johns car.

"Come and see choice roses, trees, etc., at Oakley Green nursery, Union 1221. Take U car." See the ad in The Journal's classified directory, under heading "Nurseries."

You'll find an ad worth your while to read under "Real Estate For Sale" this evening. It's about "modern 7-room house that owner must sell at once; in Sunnyside." Has every convenience one could desire, at the right price, too. Can find owner by telephoning Scott 3352.

This sounds tempting: "Three unfurnished housekeeping rooms, newly tinted, new shades, gas, bath and furnace on lower floor, at 7 East Twelfth street. Hadn't you better look at them?"

Things will disappear, be misplaced, carelessly you are and 4's time some one surely picks them up. The way to reach the finder is through The Journal classified columns, which enter three-fourths of Portland's homes every evening and Sunday morning. Could you find an easier way?
