MISS PORTLAND, PLEASE STAND UP

ughty and Uncommunicative to Strangers.

THAT YOUR CONDUCTORS ARE VERY DISOBLIGING

Badly Treated-What Have You to Say?

Mrs. Ivy Hayes, a wealthy Spokane real estate woman, has registered a vigoreus criticism of Portland women for alleged lack of cordiality to visiting sight-seers. She also charges that street car conductors on the Portland Consolidates railway lines are derelict in the duty of furnishing ordinary information to pilissengers, and she says it is an injustice to require that strangers in the city shall make application for a transfer at the time of paying fare, as they are invariably ignorant of this rule and are obliged to pay double.

Addressing a woman on a south Portland car yesterday, she asked for information as to the possibility of returning by some other route from a sight-seeing trip to Fulton and Riverview cemetery. She received a courteous reply. She then said:

"You are the first woman in Portland who has been pleasant to me in the 10 days that I have spent riding over the street car lines of this city. I have traveled extensively and in no other city have I received the rebuffs that I have met in Portland in my efforts to see the city and familiarize myself with its environs."

She, proceeded to describe some of the Mrs. Ivy Hayes, a wealthy Spokane

She, proceeded to describe some of the unpleasant incidents that has attended her trips on the street cars.

'On first making inquiry as to the most interesting trips I was told at the notel to see the city from Portland heights. After having ascended on the car I asked a very nice looking lady in the car if there were another route by which I might return, and so get a different view. She elevated her chin namewhat and replied, very coldiy: 'I know nothing about it. You should ask the conductor.'

the conductor.

"It was quite a shock to me. In Spokane, where I have, we have many women who make it a special duty, not only to give information to visitors, but to take the initiative by addressing scople in the street cars whom they have reason to believe are strangers. Our women are glad to profier information concerning anything visitors might wish to know about the interesting features of the city. Every woman in Spokane considers it a pleasure to answer queries of this kind from any stranger who is civil."

This time I was determined to see Portland," she said. "I am ready to say that I do not believe your people know what you have here or that you do not appreciate it.

This is the most beautiful city in America. I have been charmed by its natural beautife. By only moments of disappointment have been those in which I have received unpleasant replied from women and canductors to whom I applied for information."

MAYOR WANTS NO DUST BLOWING NEXT SUMMER

Mayor Williams desires to have the city look as presentable as possible next summer. Determined to keep down the dust, he has asked the Portland Consoldate Rallway company for an additional sprinkling car. In the communication he states that he is of the opinion that another sprinkling car would cation he states that he is of the opin-ion that another sprinkling car would be an advantage to the road.

"In addition to the benefits to your business." he concludes, "the city will expet to pay you a reasonable com-pensation for the services."

MAN UNDER THE BED

While he was disrobing last night at the St. Charles hotel, H. M. Reed heard a noise under his bed. A hand, armed with a seasofver, protruded; it was followed by whead and a body. Then the intruder ordered Reed to give up his money, which he did—the sum of $70. Still pointing the revolver at Reed's head, the burglar backed out of the door, ran hastily down the stairs and disappeared. Reed reported his loss and the police are working on the case. He is from Elko, Nev., and is en routs to Los Angeles, Cal.

"I wish to express my interest in the projected exposition to commemorate the exploration of the Oregon country and to dender my small services in any and every way that may offer to secure you the widespread publicity you need.

"The last of March I expect personally to head a unique overland publicity expedition that will start from Portland. Me., in the old-fashioned canvas-topped prairie-schoonars, with Portland, Or., as the destination. Our plan originally was to make the trip across the continent from Maine to California, but the educational value of auch an expedition following the route of Lewis and Clark from St. Louis at this most opportune time has led us to consider the advisability of changing destination to 'Oregon or bust.' One of the features of the trip will be free lectures, illustrated with Oregon and California views, wherever practicable. The journey will cover 5,000 miles, and we will traverse 17 states. It will cover a period of almost seven months, bringing the expedition to Portland just before the October closing of the exposition. Will correspond in detail later.

the street cars whom they have reason to believe are strangers. Our women are glad to profer information concerning anything visitors might wish to know about the interesting features of the city. Every woman in Spokane considers it a pleasure to answer queries of this kind from any stranger who is civil."

She said that, although discouraged by her initial experience in Portland, she pursisted in asking for information, and had been uniformly treated discourteously. She keverely criticised one feature of the street car transfer system.

"It is almost impossible for a stranger to be certain of the line to which she wishes a transfer, on starting to see any section of the city," ahe said. "And even if she knew she would never thing it necessary to ask for the transfer at it members of the cound accustom myself to obeying this rule. I have found Portland street car conductors very rejuctant to give information and most of the company for them to talk to passengers.

She said that upon starting on trips between Spokane and San Francisco she had often suggested to friends that she was inclined to stop off and see Portland, but had always been discouraged by the remark: "Oh, don't waste time in that slow old town."

"This time I was determined to see Portland, "she said." I am ready to say tion to fight for the repeal of the Lewis and Clark exposition law."

SELLWOOD'S LIBRARY TO BE OPENED FRIDAY

The new reading rooms and library of Sellwood are almost ready for public use and will be opened next Friday svening with fitting ceremony. A good program, including music and addresses by prominent speakers interested in the movement, has been arranged. The temporary quarters of the institution are in a hall on Umatilla avenue, but it is hoped that by the end of the year's lease a permanent home will have been secured for it. The hall, furniture and funds for incidental expenses are all provided for by personal subscriptions among the interested citizens. Books for the circulating library are furnished by the Portland library, selected by Miss Isom, head librarian, and Miss Hassler, children's librarian, and Miss Hassler, children's librarian, some of the periodicals are gifts, others are subscribed for from the library funds.

DON QUIXOTE JOUSTS

AT A BARKEEPER

A. F. Wing went into A. Wier's saloon in Albina to change his clothes. He was going to a masquerade ball and wanted to represent Don Quixote.

"No, this is not the place to change your clothing," said the barkeeper. "If you want to be a Quixote or anything cles you must find another place. Besides, some one has been stealing goods from that private office where you want to make yourself a Quixote."

The would-be Quixote smashed the bartender a few times, just to show him that he could, as he explained it in court. The bertender appeared in court bound up it court-plaster bandages.

Wing pleaded guilty to the charge of fighting. Bentence was suspended.

It is probable that F. C. Hageman will succeed the late Arthur Wilson as Swed-ish and Norwegian consul at this port. Many of the prominent Swedes and sh and Norwegian consul at this port. Many of the preminent Swedes and Norwegians in Portland are signing a petition asking for his appointment to the position. The petition will be forwarded to General Consul Christian Lund of San Francisco. He, in turn, will send it to Minister Grip, the Swedish and Norwegian representative at Washington, D. C., through whom the appointment will be made. Whoever Lund recommends for the office will be the successful candidate, and the is said that he is favorable to Mr. Hageman. Several large delegations visited Mr. Hageman yesterday and asked if he would accept the position should it be tendered him.

Mr. Hageman was born and reared in Norway, but came to Portland 21 years ago. He has resided here continuously since that time. He is general manager for and member of the Charles F. Bebee company, the largest ship supply house in the city. For some time he followed the sea and was captain of a sailing vessel.

Aside from speaking the Ewedish, Norwegian and English languages fluently, he understands German and Danish. Relative to Mr. Hageman's candidacy for the office. Judge W. Seton, one of the prominent Swedish residents of Portland, said:

"He is well qualified for the position. Mr. Hageman has an excellent standing in the community, and is a substantial citizen. He is a man of mature years and capable of carrying the honor with dignity."

Louise Brandt and Baume.

Clyde Fitch's "Lovers' Lone" will be the initial attraction of the new Brandt-Baume company at the Empire theatre beginning with next Sunday matinee. This delightful play by the famous author is a prongunced success, and its phenomenal run of a year in New York testifies to its merits. In the cast of characters will be found 22 people; besides these there are some 20 school children and townspeople, and the atmosphere of the play is very refreshing. Edgar Baume will play the fine part of the young minister, and those who have seen his work know how well he can handle the role of Dr. Singleton Perhaps one of the most interesting stage creations of recent years is that of "Simplicity Johnson," to be played by Miss Brandt, and that this clever actress will make her biggest nit to date is a certainty. is a certainty.

"Sweet Lavender."

The story of "Sweet Lavender," one of the dearest little girls, is being told this week by the Columbia stock company. Though clustering around the events in the life of this charming girl, the lights and shadows, the comedy and the company of the lights and shadows, the comedy and the lights and species of the lights. the lights and shadows, the comedy and tragedy of a score of other lives are brought out. William Dills is the old-banker with a skeleton in the past rising to confront him in the waning days of his life; Howard Gould, irrespressibly funny yet at the same time impelling deep sympathy; Miss Counties, the light-heartes, merry Minnie Gilfillian; and least # not last of all, the dainty Fay Wallace as Sweet Lavender. The whole company are spiendidly cast and "Sweet Lavender" is a play sure to please everyone.

Vaudeville at the Grand.

The people are delighted that the Grand is again open to vaudeville, and that, too, with such a bill. Each of the ten numbers is an act that in any other ten numbers is an act that in any other house would be featured. Danny Mann, with Loia Haines in support, gave a very pretty presentation of "Mandy Hawkins." The Lucifers offer a distinct novelty in acrobatic comedy. Francis Davis and company, in "My Wife," appear in a fance that gave much delight. As black-face, rapid-qre talkers and singers, Deely and Shean are without a superior in the country. Clark and Temple sing and dance attractively. Carroll Carlysie and company produce "The Littlest Girl," and the balance of the bill is on a par with these features.

"Quo Vadis."

Next week a magnificent production of "Que Vadis" is to be presented at the Columbia. Preparations have been under way for several weeks and the entire picture, with the cast and accessories, will exceed anything ever attempted on the Columbia stage.
