G. W. White was convicted Friday on a charge of larceny. Frank Thompson, jointly indicted with White, confessed, pleaded guilty to simple larceny and turned state's evidence. Evidence developed that the two were concerned in robbing rooms in the Belling-Hirsch building December 22, 1984, and that Thompson used the money received from pawning the stolen jewelry in paying the rental of rooms he had leased. Thompson is 18 years old. He was arcested a year ago for burglary, was reseased on account of his youth, and was urned over to the Boys and Girls' Ald colety. The jury in yesterday's trial ecommended White to the mercy of the fourt, having been apparently influenced to view his crime the more lenintly on account of the apparent unruth of young Thompson, who gave trongly conflicting testimony.

With this crude tool they pried a look, purchased for 65 cents, off a door, climbed through a broken skylight and coolly walked down the stairway leading from the police court, directly in front of the station proper and in full view of the officers. The men who escaped are Henry McGloin, sentenced February 21 to serve two months for vagrancy; Ben Darwin, six months from February 7, for vagrancy; "Babe Keith," serving six months from February 17, for vagrancy, and Frank Dmartrahe, three months from February 13, for vagrancy, Darwin escaped two weeks ago but was recaptured a week ago by Patroliming Griff Roberts. Dnartrahe is reputed to be wealthy, but was too miserly to spend any money on an appeal.

McGloin and Keith were again taken into custody at the Vancouver farry at 8 o'clock this morning. Patroliman Circle was sent to the ferry by Captain Balley, who was informed by telephone that the fugitives had been seen in that vicinity. Previous to this it was learned that Dnartrahe had appeared at his lodging house, 67 % Sixth street, and excitedly requested the landlord to make a small bundle of his personal effects. Taking the bundle he left the house and has not been seen since.

That the prisoners had accomplices Detective Hawley desires to correct the impression said to prevail regarding Johnny Reaper, who ran away from his home at Cedan Mills because he failed to pass his examinations at the end of the school year, and who was thought to have been placed on the stage at the Lyric and Baker theatres by Lawrence C. Keating. The lad, Detective Hawley says, was provided with a new suit of clothes and other personal effects by Mr. Keating and promptly turned over to the Boys and Girls' Aid society.

Captain Dickins' home is in San Francisco, and he is returning from a trip to Puget sound, where a couple of the steamers used in making surveys of the Alaskan coast are under repairs.

Early in the spring the captain will make his annual cruise in northern waters. He says it will be years before the surveys of the Alaska coast are completed. Only three boats—the Gedney, MacArthur and Patterson—are engaged in the service. A fleet three times that size could be used to advantage, but congress has been slow about making provisions for securing additional vessels.

Assails With Desperate Courage Fred Spencer, and Attacks Him Again and Again.

Hearing a pattering noise on the side-waik behind him, Fred Spencer turned and saw a queer, small animal running toward him with a simple directness that caused him to fear it was going to bite him. When it came within reach he kicked it, but four times it returned to the attack before he succeeded in dispatching it. During the fight it bit through his shoe and drew blood from his foot.

The strange encounter took place about 12 o'clock last sight at the corner of Elewenth and Sherman streets, as Mr. Spencer was going home. He has charge of the mail of the Southern Pacific company, in the Worcester building. He said:

The Electro Radiator

The Electro Radiator is a contrivance well pictured in the cut presented herewith, and fully described in a pamphles issued, by the inventor, which is sent free to all applicants. It actually forms an electrical bed, in which the patient lies, is bathed, massaged, built up in physical strength and cured of his affliction no matter, almost, what that affliction may be. Its weight is only seven pounds, and may be carried anywhere, even by travelers, and used in any room in which electricity is installed, by merely removing the electric bulb and attaching the socket of the bath. The Good Samaritan Hospital of this city purchased one of the Radiators, and the management information, and that if has accomplished wonders in the cute of he grippe and pneumonia, so prevalent the last few weeks. In cases of rheumatism, castarth, stomach troubles, bronchitts, asthma and all chronic and nervous diseases, no equal to the Radiator has everyet been known. The sick one lies between electrical sheets, is thoroughly surcharged with its health-giving properties, the disease "cooked" out of him and perfect health most speedily restored.
