ROOSEVELT TALKS TO GOTHAM IRISHMEN

President Makes a Special Trip to New York for This Purpose—Celebration the World Over.

Doubly significant were the services at St. Patrick's church, Nineteenth and Sawyer streets, at 10 o'clock this morning. St. Patrick is the patron saint of the church, and the services were held in commemoration of the death of the saint. Two hundred members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians marched in a body from the parish hall to the church. Archbishop Christie assisted in the solemn high mass, which was sung by Rev. Father Murphy, pastor, assisted by Father Hughes, of St. Lawrence, deacon, and Father Phelan, of Columbia university, sub-deacon. Fathers Daly and Curly, of St. Mary's church, assisted at the throne of the archbishop. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Hennessey, of Columbia university, who spoke on the "Daring of Irish Race," briefly outlining the struggle of the people for religious and political freedom.

A special musical program was rendered by the choir under the leadership of Mrs. J. E. O'Connell. The choir consisted of Mrs. J. E. O'Connell, Mrs. Rosemary Glose Whitney, Miss Kathleen Lawler, Miss Mae Breslin, Miss Elizabeth A. Harwas and Frank D. Hennessey. Frank Richter will render a number of Irish airs on the piano, and Richter's orchestra will play.

There was a large audience at St. Mary's church hall, on Stanton street, Upper Albina, last night when an special program was rendered in honor of St. Patrick's day. The address of the evening was delivered by John P. Kavanaugh, who spoke on the "Life and Character of St. Patrick." Longshoremen and Sailors Draw Revolvers, and Threaten Trouble.

TROUBLE DUE TO FIGHT BETWEEN THE UNION

Landmen Refused to Work With the Tars, Nor Would They Permit Them to Unload Ship Peaceably.

Under police protection sailors engaged in loading the American steamer T. M. Emigh at the Portland wharf yesterday. This is because of the incident that broke out this morning between sailors and longshoremen, each of whom claimed the right of loading the vessel. Revolvers were drawn, and heading for the counsel of a few of the cooler heads bloodshed would probably have resulted. Declaring that he believed his life was in danger, Charles Beck, a member of the sailors' union, drew his revolver on a crowd composed of about 50 longshoremen. He was arrested by Patrolman Porter a few minutes later on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon. His hearing was set for 10 o'clock this morning, but was continued until tomorrow.

The sailors' union has retained Attorney Chiron to defend Beck, who was released on bail. Warrants will be issued this afternoon for the arrest of J. A. Madson, secretary, Toby Smith, D. Shraeder and several other members of the longshoremen's organization on a charge of assault and battery. In one of two instances it is said the more serious charge of making threats to kill will be made against the men.

The trouble is an outgrowth of the differences between the two waterfront unions. For several weeks feeling between them has been running high. As Beck and two other sailors were going to the American barkentine T. M. Emigh to assist loading, they were intercepted by a crowd of longshoremen who threatened to do them bodily harm if they refused to return to town. Pressing close on the heels of the longshoremen, the sailors were intercepted by a crowd of longshoremen who threatened to do them bodily harm if they refused to return to town. Pressing close on the heels of the longshoremen, the sailors were intercepted by a crowd of longshoremen who threatened to do them bodily harm if they refused to return to town.

"I have telegraphed the vessel's owners at San Francisco concerning the situation, and until I hear from them I will have to get along the best way I can in the work of loading the vessel. I have four sailors who signed articles at San Francisco to make the voyage with me to Shanghai. The longshoremen want to discharge these men. It is impossible for me to do so without some reason, as such action would be against the United States law. I would give the longshoremen the work if they would agree to do it with my crew. But this they refuse, and it being necessary for me to employ sailors from the union hall to do longshore work."

STREAM OF MONEY FLOWS THEIR WAY

Magnates Who Took Advantage of Bull Market Reap Profit of Millions.

New York, March 17.—Out of the turmoil of Wall street there is pouring a steady stream of money into the pockets of those who held on and have taken advantage of the bull market. MRS. TESTARD OUTWITS SIX CITY DETECTIVES

Then She Invites Joe Day Into Small Room and Licks Him for Using Vulgar Language in Her Presence.

Six city detectives were badly fooled by one small woman last night, whose cleverness forced them to return to the police station without the man they sought. All the time they were searching for the alleged criminal he was concealed in a trunk, which the officers frequently handled. During the search Detective Joe Day was deceived upstairs, away from his companions, and soundly thrashed by the woman, who struck him repeatedly in the face after uttering a string of light. Day yelled lustily for help and was rescued by the officers, as the woman was clawing and scratching like a cat.

The failure of the detectives to arrest Testard, wanted at St. Louis, Mo., led to the capture of a heavy engagement ring which was hidden in a trunk. The trunk was found in the Northern Pacific company's office in the Northern Pacific building. The trunk was found in the Northern Pacific company's office in the Northern Pacific building. Kuropatkin Said to Have Taken Train for St. Petersburg.

RUSSIANS TRAPPED BEYOND TIE PASS

Linevitch, and His Men Face a Fresh Dilemma—Russians Lose Seventeen Thousand Men.

London, March 17.—A fierce battle this day is raging to the north of the Lin. The pursuit of the Russians by the Japanese continues with the same vigor that marked the early stages of their retreat, and Oyama is doing his utmost to accomplish the envelopment of the Russian army. In this he has been successful and has succeeded in cutting the railway 40 miles above the Pass.

A report from St. Petersburg to the Post Journal at Paris states that the Russians did not abandon the Ling without a struggle. A heavy engagement continued throughout Wednesday, in which both combatants lost heavily, and the Russians attacked on both flanks and in the center, suffered enormous losses, losing 13,000 killed and wounded, and 80 guns. The battle began at dawn, when Oku's forces attacked the Russian left. Shortly after simultaneous attacks were made upon both center and right, and the Russians driven back from their first positions, after a desperate resistance. Heavy guns shelled the main defenses, and bayonet charges followed the artillery attacks. On all sides the Russians, greatly outnumbered, fought heroically and stubbornly, and the field was piled with the killed and wounded of both armies.

THE PASS CAPTURED

Many prisoners and large quantities of stores were captured at the Pass. The Russians destroyed immense quantities of supplies. The railway station at Tie Ling, a splendid structure, filled with provisions and an immense quantity of fodder piled around the station, was set on fire by the retreating Russians and completely destroyed. Oyama reports the capture of a great number of prisoners on the Japanese right and bayonet charges followed the artillery attacks. On all sides the Russians, greatly outnumbered, fought heroically and stubbornly, and the field was piled with the killed and wounded of both armies.

A dispatch from Mukden states that Field Marshal Oyama and his staff entered Mukden on Wednesday morning, 15 by the south gate. The streets of the city, displaying their tattered battle flags. All public buildings were decorated and 1,000 Japanese flags were hoisted on poles. Oyama was officially welcomed by the Chinese officials and heartily cheered by the thousands of Chinese who congregated in the streets.

Kuropatkin En Route to Capital

Large bodies of Japanese troops, which for the past few days have been camped at Mukden, are being sent north to participate in the pursuit of the shattered Russian army, which is now under the command of General Linevitch, Kuropatkin having left Tie Ling on a special train Wednesday and bound for St. Petersburg, according to dispatches received by the Central News.

Generals Oku and Nogai, who were in charge of the flanking movement, the success of which has been reported by the advance forces are in touch with the retreating Russians north of Tie Pass and that many prisoners are being taken and severe fighting is raging all along the line.

It is reported that the Japanese army under General Kodama, which disappeared during the battle of Mukden, has succeeded in reaching the railroad at a point 40 miles north of Tie Pass and completed the surrounding of the retreating Russians. If this rumor is true it means that Linevitch will be compelled to surrender or else take to the mountains, where scattered forces will sooner or later have to capitulate.

Abandon Supplies

A great portion of the Russian artillery and heavy guns are now in possession of the Japanese. Linevitch finding it impossible to carry them with the retreating army, a shortage of food and supplies is reported among the Russian forces, and the troops are becoming disheartened by their numerous failures.

It is reported that a large Japanese army is moving across Vladivostok, and no surprise would be occasioned if news were soon received that the Japanese have occupied that city.

From information received from Russian prisoners by the Japanese, Kuropatkin's forces at the beginning of the battle of Mukden were estimated at 400,000 men. The Japanese are cremating thousands of corpses found on the battlefield surrounding Mukden, and thousands of bodies are still lying buried on the field.
