HOGUE EXAMINED IN VAUGHN CASE

Judge Tells How Charge Subornation of Perjury Was Made.

Sitting as a grand jury, District At-torney Manning had Police Judge Hogue before him yesterday afternoon relative to a charge of subornation of perjury, which Mr. Manning asserted had been preferred against the occupant of the municipal bench by Oglesby Young and Thomas G. Green, attorneys for W. T.

The colloquy between Judge Hogue and Mr. Manning became somewhat heated after the nature of the charge had been explained. Judge Hogue was examined by Mr. Manning on the alleged ground that he procured Edmund Giess to make an affidavit against Attorney W. T. Vaughn containing false statements.

W. T. Vaughn containing false statements.

"This man made his statement in open court." said Judge Hogue, "and I became convinced that contempt of court had been committed. The statute requires that an affidavit be prepared when the contempt is committed out of the presence of the court. Therefore I simply had an affidavit prepared embodying the assertions of Gless, and submitted for his signature."

"Well, Hogue, you are too damned hasty," Mr. Manning is said to have retorted.

"I came here because you telephoned for me," fisshed back Judge Hogue, "but I don't have to stay here and listen to such expressions of opinion as that."

Mr. Manning reiterated his statement, whereupon Judge Hogue left the room. Attorney Vaughn stated this morning that the intention of Mr. Manning is to indict Judge Hogue.

The trouble arose out of the contempt proceedings instituted against Attorney Vaughn by Judge Hogue, which were to have been brought to a hearing this morning, but by request of counsel for the accused lawyer were postponed to April 14.

Tit is our purpose to take such patients as we think can be helped, but there have been applications that we could not refuse, although the cases seemed hopeless. For instance, we had one poor boy who came from Montana. another came from Arisons, and a third from another distant state. In them the disease was far advanced, but they begged hard for a chance to try the treatment as a last hope, and we could not deny them the privilege. They were taken, but given to understand that after a short trial, long enough to determine if they could be helped, they would be asked to leave if the case continued hopeless, that others with a chance of recovery might have the room. There have been six of such patients, of whom two have died, two are greatly improved, and two are unimproved.

The sanatorium grounds cost $1,800; $500 was paid for clearing and improving; windmill and water supply cost $500; and the 20 tents, with furniture and equipment, cost $2,000. All of this was a voluntary donation of charitable people of the city who sought to have tested in the salubrious air of Oregon the scientific principle of open air and nourishing food for the cure of tuberculosis. Should Be Supported.

The institution is too young for permanent results to be noted, but no doubt is felt that the Portland institution has commenced the work properly and will achieve splendid success, if the sanatorium is properly supported. A charge of $5 a week is made to such patients as seem unable to pay for the natural cost of their treatment, $10 to those in better circumstances, and $10 to all coming from outside Portland. The sanatorium is running behind about $150 a month, which deficiency is met by contributions of the charitable people supporting the institution. Six or seven prominent men and women of Portland furnish two thirds of the money donated for the sanatorium. It is said by the management that not one of those who criticise the institution has ever contributed a cent to the philonthropic work.

There are more people in Portland at this hour who are thinking of God and eternity than at any time in its history, said the preacher in opening his remarks. There has been remarkable progress towards righteousness in your city, but there is room for more.

Public sentiment needs to be crystallised for a mighty uplifting of your town. In Portland there are enough good people and there is enough of the right kind of public sentiment to do what it pleases, if crystallised. What you need is more of the right kind of men in office, men who have backbones instead of shoestrings in their backs—more men like Tom Word.

SUNK IN SIN.

Dr. Walton Says Josus Would Weep

Dy. R. A. Walton gave a strong sermon at the Taylor street Methodist church on the theme of civic righteousness. He lamented the untiring efforts of the saloon element in obtaining their end in everything they undertook, while the better element stood by and waited for results to work themselves out. In politics the saloon men were always working and made their friends register before election, but at the registration desk and the polis there were few signs of interest on the part of the church members and Christians. the common law.

The brief then goes on to say, that, because the nuisance statute has never before been invoked to apply to pool-rooms in this state, the disuse of the law may be cited as tantamount to practical construction by officials and judicial tribunals that it does not apply. The brief says:

tical construction by officials and judicial tribunals that it does not apply. The brief says:

"Besides, the lapse of the long period of over 40 years, from the enactment of this section of the criminal code, without any attempt on the part of any of the law officers or judicial tribunals of the state to apply its provisions to such cases as the present, notwithstanding their open and continuous infraction in the same manner as here, is entitled to conclusive weight as a practical construction of the meaning and operation of the same. We do not claim that a criminal statute becomes absolute by non-user for a period of 40 years, or for any other period, however extended, but we do claim that such a period of non-user should be held to preclude any doubtful construction of the statute, that would extend its operation and effect inconsistent therewith. "But as the construction here can herdly be regarded as doubtful, we need not invoke the benefit of this principle."

Authorities cited in the brief in support of the argument of non-user are "Bishop, Stat. Or. (2d ed.), sections 164 and 145; Scenlan vs. Childs, 32 Wis. sec. 662; Chestmut vs. Shone, 16 Oble, secs. 599 and 507; Union Ins. Co. vs.

sec. 553; Chestmut vs. Shone, 16 Ohlo,

The brief of the state of Oregon, prepared by A. M. Crawford, attorneygeneral; John Manning, district attorney, and Henry E. McGinn, of counsel for the state, takes ground against this argument of non-user, and protests against accepting the doctrine that because a law has been unenforced, therefore it becomes of no effect.

This information was received by the police from Detective Charles Tennant of Seattle. Tennant states that before coming to Portland Schuman passed the civil service examination for a police officer at Seattle. What is remarkable, he received 99 per cent out of a possible 100.

he received 99 per cent out of a possible 100.

On the day that Schuman was to don a uniform, writes Detective Tennant, he became drunk and did not appear for duty. When he did make his appearance he was told that he was unreliable, and Chief of Police Delaney refused to allow him to go to work.

That Schuman's career of crime did not begin in Portland is shown by the fact that four charges were laid against him in Seattle for forgery, and detectives were endeavoring to locate him at the time he was killed. The warrant for his arrest was enclosed in the letter sent the local police. Schuman was accused of forging the name of his employer, a breweryman, to checks on a Seattle bank.
