

BUSY WEEK AT PORTLAND LIBRARY

Art Department Will Be Moved and Many Needed Alterations Will Be Made.

MORE SPACE TO BE GIVEN IN SOME DEPARTMENTS

Librarian Asks Indulgence of the Public While the Work is Going On.

This will be a busy week at the Portland library with the moving of the art department to another building of the city and the changes in the library incident on this removal. This morning preparations began in the east room, though the actual moving will not commence for three or four days, because the men called in this work are busy at the site grounds. Today the last details in calculating are being considered at the new art museum on Fifth street, which is a very important matter in the hands of the directors and plaster fitters and the placing of statuary and reliefs.

The building will be opened about April 20 with the amateur photographic session, which comes here from San Francisco, after having been seen in a number of the leading cities in the east, starting with New York and going in the order of cities numbering the most place winners. Portland is near the beginning of the list.

The changes in the library will be made as fast as the art department will permit. During the work the library will not be closed, though there will be much confusion, and the librarian asks for the forbearance of the public. The second floor will be fitted for students' work. The present east room will have modern furniture and will be used as a reference room. The reference collection will be moved upstairs, and the Wilson library will also be placed in this room for the use of the public under certain restrictions.

The present lecture room at the west end of the hall will become the reading room, to which the magazines from the periodical room and the newspapers from the basement will all be transferred. Miss Phillips' room will contain the art reference library, which is a very good collection, and is growing rapidly through her generosity. The cataloging will be done in the remaining room upstairs, which has been the directors' room. This absolute quiet for work and study will be had, and all the work requiring motion will be included downstairs.

The circulating room will remain unchanged except for the additional space given by the removal of the reference collection. The cataloging room will be used by the children and this will give about twice the former space, which is very much needed. The magazine room will be open to classes wishing to do work at the library at any time, to clubs, and for the general use of a small lecture hall. All collecting and packing for the supplementary library stations will be done in the basement hereafter, thus removing much of the disagreeable work which has been done in the librarian's office for lack of room. The work will not be completed for several weeks.

LEAD AND STEAL TOO MUCH FOR TOZZO

Italians Quarrel Over Pool Game and One Is Shot and Stabbed.

DOCTORS SAY THERE IS SMALL HOPE OF RECOVERY

Assassin Flees, Is Followed, Arrested and May Be Charged With Murder.

Pietro Tozzo who was shot yesterday afternoon by James Candello as the result of a quarrel following a game of billiards, will probably die from his wounds at Good Samaritan hospital.

His assailant was arrested on Marquam hill, where he endeavored to hide after the commission of the deed, and is in the city prison. This morning a charge of assault with a deadly weapon was placed against him by Detective Frank Snow. In case of Tozzo's death, the charges will be changed to murder.

Candello thinks himself an expert at pool, but he was defeated by Tozzo in a saloon at Second and Salmon streets yesterday morning, and a fight ensued. Tozzo knocked him down two or three times and finally laid his scalp open with a billiard cue and cut him slightly on the arm with a pocket knife. Candello swore to be revenged and went after a revolver.

As Tozzo was walking along Third street, near Lincoln, with a companion, Candello, with drawn revolver, approached from the rear. Tozzo heard him, turned, and received a bullet in the right breast. He grappled with his murderous assailant and they wrestled up Lincoln street to Fourth. There Candello cut him several times on the head with a stiletto. Tozzo finally fell to the pavement unconscious.

Candello went to his room at 257 Sheridan street and hid his revolver and knife. Then he fled to Marquam hill, followed by a crowd of boys and a few men who kept at a safe distance. Police Balliff Goltz and Detectives Snow and Weiner went after him. He was found by Goltz as he went into the residence of an Italian on the brow of the hill. He admitted that he had been fighting with Tozzo, but asserted surprised when told that his victim would probably die. Tozzo has a bad reputation. He was arrested and held in the city jail for attempting to kill one of his countrymen about six months ago, and is thought to have fired three shots through the window of a room occupied by Carmine Perello.

SOULS SAVED IN ANSWER TO PRAYER

WOMAN SENDS WEDDING RING TO HELP REVIVAL

Evangelists Have Great Jollification Gathering at Which All Are Eulogized.

Bather, a startling demonstration of the effect of the evangelistic campaign which closes tonight developed at the good cheer meeting in the Marquam Grand this forenoon. Dr. Henry Ostrom, who conducted the meeting, was calling on the local pastors for their usual reports when Dr. House of the First Congregational church arose and, holding up a gold band ring said it had been sent to him by a woman living in the city. The pastor, who accompanied by a letter in which she said that it was her wedding ring and one of the few things she had in the world, but she wanted to contribute it to be used in some way for the benefit of the gospel mission. The pastor addressed the ring to her husband's full consent. No signature was given.

Cheers from the body of the house, which was filled to overflowing, greeted the announcement and were repeated when it was announced a moment later that Dr. Chapman had purchased the ring for $26. The leader of the evangelists explained that he had taken the ring with the letter to tell the story wherever he might preach.

Dr. Ostrom asked the people to testify to specific examples of the answer of prayer this morning, and scores of cases were cited. The first person to take the floor was a white-haired man, who thanked God for the conversion of his grandchildren. Another old man said his prayer for the conversion of his son had been answered. Two women in quick succession said their sons had been saved. A man said he had prayed for eight months for the conversion of his sons, and both had joined the church in the revival. A pastor said he had prayed for one man at Intel, all through the campaign, and that he had come into the church last night.

Another report was that of a man and his wife coming back after several years' absence from the church. A woman made a similar report. Several other Sunday school classes had been converted by the evangelists. The next woman had seen five converts in one house of which she had prayed. Another had prayed for and witnessed the conversion of a confirmed drunkard.

"I thank God I've been saved by these meetings!" announced a voice in the top gallery.

A demonstrative old man sitting near him made a fiery speech telling what the revival had done for his family.

Joy for the Aged.

"My old woman," he concluded, "is so happy that she says if she gets any happier in heaven she'll die!"

"The big demonstration of the day occurred, however, when a tender of the Chinese mission announced that 41 Christians since the beginning of the revival.

For the next few minutes the meeting became an eulogy of the various evangelists. Dr. Brougher spoke of the unity of the churches. Others spoke of the revival.

Old soldiers were especially invited to attend the noon meeting at the Marquam and between 30 and 40 veterans were given seats on the stage. Others stood in the front of the lobby, but there was not room for another person in the building until Dr. Chapman pleaded with good Christians present who had heard the previous service to pass out the side entrance and allow for new comers to enter. There are at least 300 men in the lobby," said he. "Won't about 300 of you who are here go home?"

Probably 150 gave up their seats.

Dr. Biederwolf spoke impressively from the text "For God so loved the World That He Gave His Only Begotten Son."

Musical features of the two meetings were solo by Frank Dickson and John P. Hillis and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Maxwell.

RUBBER PLANTATIONS PROVE HUGE SWINDLES

(Journal Special Service.)

Boston, April 10.—The investigation by the stockholders' committee goes deep into the affairs of the various Ubero Mexican plantation concerns, operating from Boston headquarters and conditions are worse than first feared. It is now estimated that the total amount of money taken in by fake concerns will reach $2,000,000 for two concerns alone.

This sum applies to the affairs of the Ubero Plantation company, the first company organized here, and the Consolidated Ubero Plantations, the second company. It is believed that when the books have been gone over by experts the loss to investors will be found to reach $2,000,000.

OREGON INDUSTRY IN FINE CONDITION

Oregon State Board of Horticulture Hears Excellent Reports From Districts.

NEW SPRAYING FLUID PRESERVES APPLE TREES

County Inspector Will Do Much Toward Helping the Careful Orchardist.

At a semi-annual meeting of the Oregon state board of horticulture today President E. L. Smith denounced shiftless orchardists, and pointed out the menace they constantly offer to the careful commercial orchardist, and the importance of a rigid enforcement of the recently enacted Oregon law providing for county inspection of fruits and orchards.

"It is an unjust to vigilant Oregon fruit growers that such trash is shown on Front street in Portland as was seen there during the early winter," he said. "We have too many indifferent growers, willing to take half price for wormy, scabby fruit, rather than go to the trouble of spraying and receiving double the money they get for their apples. There are too many unskillful orchardists, and too much artificial fruit. This class of growers will not welcome the new county fruit inspector."

He urged the immediate appointment of county inspectors, and a fair trial of the new law, and cited the inspection law of Washington, Idaho and California, which had put the fruit industry in those states on a high plane. The new law takes effect May 15, and after that date every county may have an inspector appointed, and the inspection law of Washington, Idaho and California, which had put the fruit industry in those states on a high plane. Capital Spraying Methods.

A comparatively new spraying mixture, known as arsenate of lead, was strongly recommended by President Smith for protection of apple orchards against the codling moth. He gave a lengthy report of its results in other states, and read recommendations by Professor Steadman, state entomologist of Missouri. The arsenate has a great advantage over Paris green—adhesiveness. When applied in good quality it sometimes resisted a month of rainy weather. It is mixed as follows:

Arsenate of soda, 4 ounces; acetate of lead, 12 ounces; water, 50 gallons. Dissolve the lead and soda separately, each in half a bucket of water, then pour together and mix thoroughly, and let stand over night. A chemical change takes place, producing arsenic lead. The result is a white, fluorescent liquid, that will remain in suspension 240 minutes after it is stirred, while all other mixtures for similar purposes will settle in short periods, ranging down to five minutes. Paris green, which is used in the bottom of the spraying tank in 17 minutes and must be constantly stirred while spraying. It is said apple trees sprayed with arsenate of lead immediately after the fall, saved in a week or 10 days, and once more about the middle of July will be completely protected from codling moth without further spraying, and that its use will economize fully 50 per cent of the work and expense now involved in the spraying of Oregon apple orchards.

Care of Peach Trees.

Prof. Steadman of Missouri, reporting on his experiments, stated that care should be used in spraying peach trees with this or any other mixture, and recommended the peach trees be not sprayed with anything excepting under very unusual circumstances. Experiments showed that from four to five pounds of the arsenate of lead mixture should be used to 50 gallons of water, for apples. President Smith recommended 2 1/2 pounds to 50 gallons of water, and Prof. Steadman said he saw no advantage in using more than 2 pounds to 50 gallons of water. The object was to endanger the vitality of the tree.

President Smith congratulated the orchardists of Oregon, where, with their mild climate, the fruit has come through the present practically unharmed, while in the states east of the Rocky mountains vast damage had resulted from the frosts.

W. K. Newell of Washington county, member of the board for the first district, reported that there had been two or three severe frosts in March, but that little if any serious damage had been done to fruit. A few early cherries and plums were nipped, but an ample crop remained. Prunes had had fine weather, and there was a prospect of not only a large crop, but improved market conditions and higher prices. Apples were planted to plant more walnuts, stating that there was a steady increase in the planting of pears, apples and cherries in the first district.

Southern Oregon Happp.

The report of A. H. Carson, member for the third district, stated that there had been an immense increase in horticultural interest in southern Oregon. The profits from apple culture had caused the planting during the last winter of more than 3,000 acres of new orchards in Jackson county. Of this acreage, 75 per cent was apples, and 25 per cent pears. The weather had been favorable, and there would be large crops. The new apple orchards are mainly Newtons, Spitzenbergs and Jonathans. Climatic conditions in the Rogue River valley were unsurpassed for apples and all sorts of Oregon fruits. The coldest winter of the last winter was 28 degrees above zero.

R. H. Weber of the fourth district, reported weather conditions favorable, that fruit had blossomed early, and that there was but little danger from frost, although some alarm had been felt by fruit growers during the last month. There had been an immense increase in the acreage of apples in that district since last winter, and large numbers of cherry, apricot, almond and prune trees also had been planted. The apricot was receiving much attention, owing to the strong demand and high prices for this fruit, which is said to thrive along the Columbia river.

Judd Geer of Cove, member of the fifth district, said the fruit crop in that district was practically unharmed, with the exception of a few peaches and cherries in the coldest parts. The prospects were good for large crops, and more new orchards than ever before had been planted in the fifth district.

The governor of Guam reports that the natives of that island are very dirty and highly religious. More soap and less tithes.
