BEST JOB IN OREGON

(Continued from Page One.) However, these calendars were carefully arranged so as to be set in four columns, thus doubling the price of composition. Not only did this arrangement double the price of composition, but it very materially added to the amount of "white space" in the work, and which is measured as if solid type. The matter in the calendars is added to day by day, but the state printer receives pay for all matter contained therein each day. In this way the state pays for the same composition as often as 40 times. It is not hard to figure the net profit on this one job, as it was done exclusively by the night force at the state printing office. This night force consisted of from four to seven printers working 13 hours each night, one pressman and one press-feeder going the pressroom in a few hours in the early morning. These compositors were paid at the rate of price and one half, that being the union night scale. Their earnings came to just $7 each a night, or $48 for all of the printing. The pressman and feeder's work brought the amount up to about $84 a day. As the paper and binding is paid for by the state, the net profit on this work is the difference of $36 for less the cost of the entire seven men were not employed) and the amount received by Mr. Whitney. At double rates for composition (set in four columns) and the allowance of 85 cents a token for presswork this year, the net profit on a page for every page of the house and senate calendars. These vary from four pages each at the beginning to 108 pages each at the end of the session, or 448 for all of the printing. Thus, Mr. Whitney received a daily average amount from the state of $980 a day on this one job, of which over $950 was clear profit.

The sale of the property of Fred Bickel at the southeast corner of Second and Stark streets to Thomas Scott Brooke and Dr. A. J. Giesy, for $50,000, will be followed by improvements by the new owners. The ground, 100 by 100 feet, is covered by a number of one-story frame buildings. An architect is at work on plans for remodeling the building on the corner, and it will also be repaired. The smaller building, fronting on Second street, will be remodeled and new fronts put in, or they will be torn away at once and a one-story brick building erected for office.

Next Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning delegates will pour into this city from every portion of Oregon to attend the second annual convention of the Oregon Development League. A reduced railroad rate has been made. From some of the nearby points special cars have been arranged for. At 9 o'clock Wednesday morning a reception committee will be at the Marquam Grand theatre to welcome visitors. This committee will be composed of men named by the Portland Commercial club, and a committee of Portland women under the chairmanship of Misses E. J. Quinn and A. H. Dreyfus.

ONE OF MANY

This is only one of many of the ways that the state printer is made to pay big profits. Perhaps the easiest way to arrive at the approximate earnings of this office is to deduct the amounts of its expenses from the amounts of money paid in for the work done. The appropriation for state printing during the two years from January 1, 1902 to December 31, 1904, was $50,000. Of this amount the state printer was paid directly $27,717.75, and to the printer there was a deficit in the appropriation of $22,282.25, which $5,324.94 has already been paid, leaving about $16,957.31 due him still.

"We regard this property as an excellent investment, in view of the changing conditions in this part of the city," said Mr. Brooke. "Our intention is not to build any very large or expensive structure on the ground at this time, but to fill up such buildings as will insure a revenue sufficient to carry the property. In a few years there will be a demand for large buildings here. The street railroad company is waiting to lay and operate its tracks on Second street as soon as the property is cleared. The question of materials with which this street is to be paved, and there is also a strong prospect that the Oregon Traction company will soon build a line on Stark street, and the property. All these things will help this section of the city."

Plans have been made for the entertainment of women who accompany the delegates, and they will have a prominent part in the reception given the league Wednesday evening. Delegates on arriving at the theatre will register and receive badges.

AN INVESTIGATION

At the last session a committee was appointed to look into the workings of the state printing office. The committee did not report until the last night of the session, and its report was that it had checked up the measurements of the state printer and found them to be correct. The appointment of this committee, however, had some visible result, for one member of it, promptly on his return to Portland, purchased an interest in a linotype plant there.

Building permits involving large and expensive structures have not been numerous during the last week. The Coleman flats, to be built on Davis street, at a cost of $19,000, was the most notable. N. Wolf is building a dwelling, to cost $25,000 on Kearney, between Twenty-first and Twentieth streets. The Zeller-Burns company will build an undertaking establishment on Williams avenue, near Russell street.

The Willamette valley agricultural section will be under the supervision of Colonel E. Hofer and Walter Lyon, president and secretary of the Willamette Valley Development league, at the Marquam Grand theatre.

NOT ALL PROFITS

Nor is this all that the state printer makes. Out of the printing appropriation and the deficiency which appropriation there was paid for paper and binding during 1902 and 1904, $17,594.40. The state constitution originally required that this work be given out by the secretary of state, but this was later amended (H. B. 270, p. 305 U. L. 1903) so as to place this also in the hands of the state printer.

J. D. Coleman will remodel a residence on Davis near Nineteenth street. W. H. Wallace will erect a one-story brick building on Sixth near Davis. Plans are drawn for a handsome dwelling for David Ogden, of the United States engineers corps, on Flinders street, near the Cornell road.

Three sections will be held at the Commercial club. The dairy section will hold its session in the ladies' dining-room, with J. W. Bailey, state dairy and food commissioner, as chairman. In the tower room Judge John H. Scott will preside over the good roads section in connection with this section. A resolution was received from Colonel R. W. Richardson, secretary of the National Good Roads association, in which he stated that he would arrive in Portland April 22, and would address the convention. The mining section will be held in the black room.

PRIEST QUELLS RIOT OF STRIKING WORKINGMEN

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.) New York, April 22.—Holding a crucifix high above his head, Father Antonio Scialoja, of the Church of St. Phillip of Nerri, issued through a crowd of rioting workmen near the Jerome reservoir today, imploring them to remember the day and not to desecrate Holy Saturday by staining their hands with blood. Later, when he calmed them, he knelt in the street while the great crowd followed his example and listened with rapt attention to the words of the priest asking for divine aid in controlling the passionate temper of the men until the last day of holy week has passed.

BIGAMOUS ROMANCE OF GIRL ENDS IN SUICIDE

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.) New York, April 22.—The tragedy that ended the bigamous romance of pretty Sadie McCartin, confidential secretary for Wertheimer & Co., who planned her own death in the event her husband became known, and carried out her plan when exposed, resulted today in a second suicide in Johnstown, N. Y., where she died. Charles Hollenbeck, an employee of George Wertheimer, who made Mrs. McCartin his bride a week ago, drank carbolic acid in a Johnstown drugstore after discussing the suicide of the young woman with some friends. He was a devoted friend of Liebenstein, but was not acquainted with his bride. Developments today showed that Mrs. Liebenstein had prepared for death in the event of discovery and that her suicide in the Cuyahoga hotel when confronted, carried out a deliberately planned act. When she fled from her husband's home she took with her the vital poison. It was her companion on her brief honeymoon, a constant reminder that the strange happiness she felt in being with the man she loved was destined to end in tragedy.

U. S. SUPREME COURT VERSUS LABOR UNIONS

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.) Washington, April 22.—United labor was right in its contention that the Baker case of New York had a right to determine what should be a week's work and what should be a day's work in those establishments. The American Federation of Labor, speaking through Frank Morrison, its general secretary, said today that the various state decisions, and notably the Utah state decision, the local legal authorities being in close touch with the local conditions, had been in favor of the labor organizations, and that the aggregate showed that the consensus of legal opinion was in favor of a labor union as against the United States supreme court. A further test will be made by the American Federation of Labor.
