1. MRS. SNOOKS (angrily)—John Snooks! What does this mean? You are not satisfied with having a statuette blend typewriter about you at the office all day, but you must carry her picture around in your coat pocket!

2. MR. SNOOKS—Why, my dear—why—Oh, by Jove, how forgetful I am, to be sure! You found it in my coat pocket, didn't you, dearie? (Aside) By ginger! I'm up against it this time, sure.

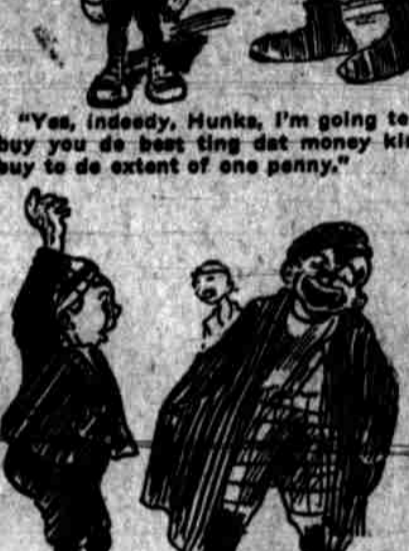

3. MR. SNOOKS (Ah! Now I have it)—You see, dearie, the typewriter's cousin is a photographer, and she asked me to bring this photo home and see if you didn't wish to have some like it taken of yourself. I forgot to show it to you. But, pooh, pooh, dearie! I wouldn't let you see any more pictures taken of your sweet face.

4. MR. SNOOKS—Yes, dearie, I'll tell her you don't wish any such common pictures. (Aside) P-h-e-w! But that was a close shave.

MRS. CROWBAR—I am one of the happiest women! Mr. Crowbar denies me nothing! He gratifies my every wish!

MRS. HAMMER—He denies me nothing! I could never love a man who would deny me anything!
