MAYOR TOMORROW

12 - X - H. R. ALBEE

MAYOR WILLIAMS has come out of his shell and attempted to explain some things connected with his administration. He says, in effect, that he is fully satisfied with what has been done, and with things as they now are, and that if elected he will continue them in the same state. "Chief Hunt is an honest man and if I'd remove a man whom I know is honestly performing his duty" (excerpt from Mayor Williams' speech on Wednesday night). This speech of the mayor makes the situation much clearer. No change is intended by him. He is satisfied with things as they have been. The nauseous odors that are arising make no impression upon him, nor cause him to think of betterments. He does not see the public money going in steady streams into the coffers of unprincipled contractors, and others who are shrewd enough to devise ways and means to graft it without making an adequate return. The pestilential smells that emanate from the notorious Tanner Creek Sewer do not disturb his senses. The terrific charges for extras on the Morrison Street Bridge do not disturb his poise. He cares not for the facts that have come to light about the Front Street Bridge.

He does not seem to care about the charges that have been made in connection with the defeat of the telephone franchise.

He cannot see any wrong in the indictments that have been found in the criminal prosecutions pending, nor does he observe anything sinister in the causes that impelled the circuit court to call a grand jury.

The saloons that almost choke the entrance to the exposition do not concern him. He is satisfied and can see no reason why the people of Portland are not perfectly content. Removals from office, indictments for malfeasance and the constant mutterings of the patient citizens are not taken as any indication that anything is amiss.

Complaints for large and unjust assessments are not heard.

"THE LID SEEMS THE ONLY ISSUE IN THE PRIMARY ELECTION"

This is more than passing true. It is a fight for law and order. Our foes are organized vice, and all the powers of the under world. The liquor dealers' organization has voted to support Williams for mayor and are concentrating their forces to work for his success. A very large sum of money has been raised by them for use Saturday afternoon about the polls. The foes of civic decency and cleanliness are alarmed over the widespread awakening of the moral element, and fearing for the loss of their long continued prestige the forces of vice are making a desperate struggle. All these interests are content with what is abhorred by every decent man.

Mayor Williams has stated that the stories of graft were manufactured for political purposes. Does he consider the indictments returned by the last grand jury to have been manufactured? Does he consider they were returned for political purposes?

More has gone on in grafting money from the city's treasury than has ever been published; and that published has been enough to turn an honest man sick at heart.

The mayor was careful to limit his defiance to members of boards only. He did not reach out or include the ones who did the grafting nor did he speak in certain tones.

Will Mayor Williams say the Tanner Creek Sewer scandal was manufactured solely for political purposes? Will he say that the cloud of indictments that hovers like a black nightmare over the city were manufactured for political purposes?
