

IRISH BAND CAN'T PLAY IN AMERICA

British War Office Refuses to Permit the Players to Leave Canadian Territory.

LIVELY TIMES OCCUR IN ENGLISH ROYAL NURSERY

Princess of Wales Will Be Seen But Little on Account of Interesting Event.

(By Paul Lambeth.)
Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.
London, May 6.—There is much discontent among the men of the Irish guards band who are going to Toronto for the exhibition this summer. The war office authorities have refused to allow the men to leave Canadian territory. Several splendid engagements in New York, Chicago and other great cities.

The refusal has been made on political grounds, as it was feared that the absence of the Irish band would be made the pretext for Irish agitation. The Grenadier guards band visited the St. Louis exposition and this fact makes the bandmen the more sore.

The men, however, can refrain from seeing the funny side of it, for although the general public are not aware of the fact, the percentage of Irishmen in the band and the regiment is ridiculously small.

There are a very large number of Scotchmen and an equally large number of pure-bred Cockneys in the Irish regiment, and none of them take the faintest interest in politics.

Mrs. Adair's Eyes Bad.
Mrs. Adair made a brave struggle to begin the season, but had to give up the idea of remaining in London. Her eyes have now become so affected that she cannot see at all.

This was particularly noticeable at the last farewell party she gave, when Prince Arthur of Connaught was the guest of the evening. This was a very small and quiet affair, and Mrs. Adair gave a good example to other American hostesses by having no lavish display of plate or flowers, nor did she wear any jewels.

A great oculist in the north of England told her she must have a complete rest, or she may lose her eyesight, so she has taken a small house between Ascot and Windsor.

Mrs. Mackay who is already making plans for a collation, does not suffer as other hostesses do from the lack of men at her parties. Her hunting friends down at Melton Mowbray always rally round her in great numbers, and they bring her among them some of the best dancers in the country.

Scene in Royal Nursery.
There was a lively scene in the nursery at Marlborough House just before the Prince and Princess of Wales left with their children for Frogmore, where they spent the Easter holidays.

Prince David, or "Prince Eddie," as the people insist on calling him, has developed a perfect passion for London, and dislikes the country round about as intensely. He has repeatedly refused to make preparations to leave, and as his tutor could do nothing with him, the prince was sent for. What happened behind the closed doors no one knows, but David, looking tearful, went to get dressed like a lamb.

The young prince's idea of bliss is to walk past one after another of the big guardrooms who adorn the precincts of Marlborough House, and to see the soldiers become fatigued or he himself is relieved. His tastes are all for the army, although he is destined for the navy.

The Princess of Wales will be seen very little more in public this season, as an interesting event is expected at the beginning of July.

Both the prince and princess are like children over the prospects of their trip to India, and an enormous correspondence still goes on between Marlborough House and the commander of the battleship Benbow, which is being made as comfortable as possible.

Mrs. Bigelow's Welcome.
Mrs. Poulitney Bigelow and her daughter, Mrs. Evelyn Bigelow, received a warm welcome from their friends in London on their arrival from New York, where Miss Bigelow has been one of the belles of the season.

A few small dinners have been given by the Bigelows at their house in South Kensington and Mrs. Bigelow has regaled her guests with the latest stories from the other side of the water. She has spent her time for good and take up their quarters for the season at the Bazaar, the smart little hotel managed by Mrs. Mercer Pell, of New York.

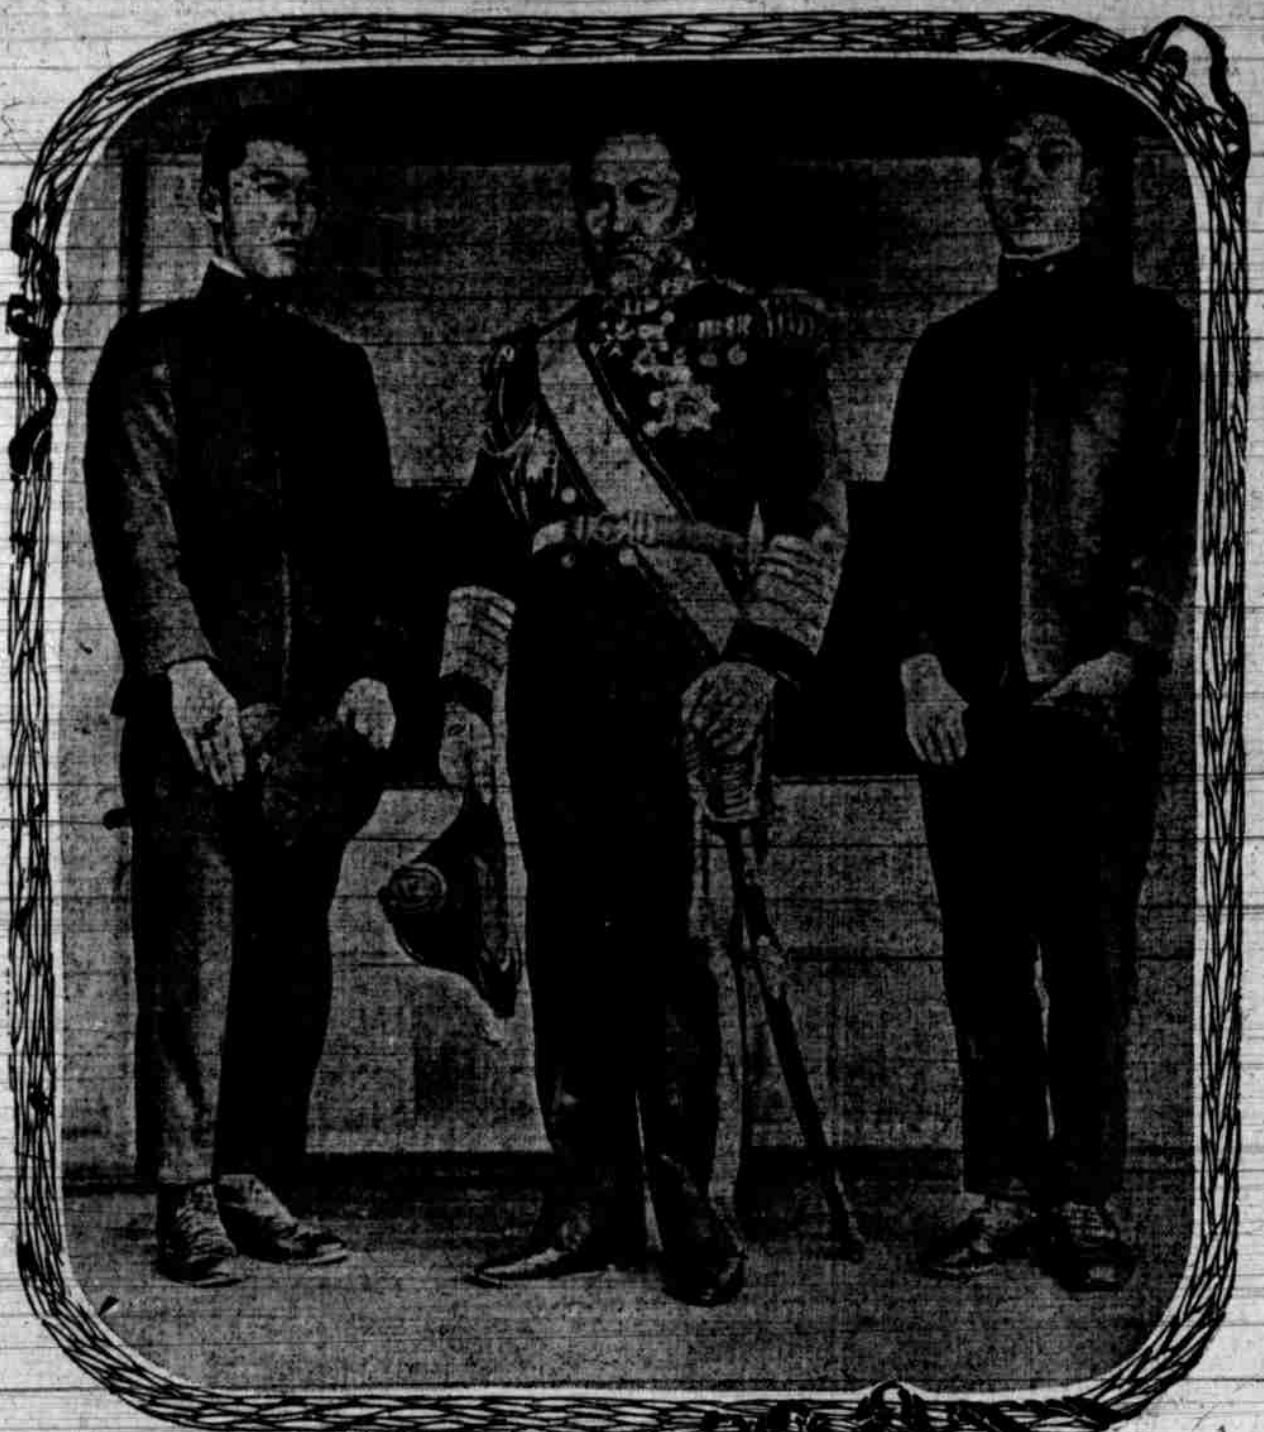

Mrs. Evelyn Bigelow has such a good time in both places that her only idea is to spend her winter in New York and her summer in England for the future. Her mother does not disguise the fact that she would rather remain on one side or the other, but she has consented to spend her winter again in New York, where her daughter Mildred is staying with her relatives, the Jarveys.

Henry Janin Returns.
Mr. Henry Janin, who was a very familiar figure in New York some years ago and whose beautiful wife divorced him and married again, intends to spend the summer months in England, where he has many friends. He has just arrived in London from Berlin in a very delicate state of health, but although he looks even older than his 67 years, Mr. Janin actually sings at small musicals.

At one time a great musician, he rarely misses a big concert, whether in Berlin, Paris or London and despite his feeble health he tells his friends that he intends to be present at every musical event of the London season.

Baron Hayashi Popular.
The man who is most in request for London "dinner parties" today is Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese minister, who has suddenly taken to going out to parties where he is usually surrounded by pretty women who try every possible method known to the feminine mind to "pump" news from him about the war in the far east which may not get into the newspapers.

Mr. Hayashi is one of the most silent of men but he does not wear the usual oriental "mask" and twiddles all over when he is addressed. At a big evening function given by the Duchess of Somerset, the other night, at Grosvenor Square, the unfortunate Japanese minister was escorted to the refreshment room by no fewer than five ladies, none of whom he had been introduced to and who bombarded him with questions. He bowed upon one and all with his usual native politeness but declined even to discuss the war.

Admiral Togo, Commanding the Japanese Fleet, Now Trying to Strike the Russian Squadron Before It Can Reach Vladivostok. The Admiral's Two Sons Are Also Shown. Reproduced by Special Permission of H. C. White & Co.

CROWN PRINCE IS UNWILLING GROOM

No Love Exists Between the Young Hohenzollern and Duchess Cecelia.

JAPANESE PEOPLE LONG FOR AN END TO THE WAR

Troops That Are Sent to Front Are no Longer Cheered on Departure.

(By Malcolm Clarke.)
Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.

Berlin, May 6.—Exactly a month from today, on June 6, the wedding of the German crown prince to Duchess Cecelia of Mecklenburg is to take place with great ceremony, but the only rumors of the groom's unwillingness to become a benedict are as strong as ever.

Many of these rumors are undoubtedly by malicious inventions of the socialist press, but that the marriage is a result of real love between the young people no one really believes, and that in spite of the many anecdotes allowed to leak out from the imperial family circles and that are intended to show no engaged couple were ever more in love than the future emperor and empress.

It may be safely said, however, that the crown prince is now resigned to his fate, and like a genuine Hohenzollern and typical German will make a model husband in spite of his many former infatuations.

In a few days the young prince is to be promoted to the rank of major in the front rank of foot guards, but will soon be transferred to the garde du corps, the sweetest regiment in the German army. Shortly after his marriage he will be made a colonel.

Versatility of Prince.
The crown prince is a great admirer of his father and bids fair to surpass him in versatility. During the past month he has invented several card games, has exhibited a number of water colors, composed a hymn, and is now writing a number of martial songs for the German soldiers to sing while marching. His bride, who is one of the prettiest and sweetest of German princesses, is very popular with all who know her. Of talent she has none, but the poor of the little state from which she comes say she has a heart of gold and an her future husband has all the talents necessary, the match should turn out well. The young duchess is as happy as a child over her betrothal, which she says surpasses her fondest dreams, and which is indeed marvelous. Forty guests have come from a famous French firm and seventeen evening dresses are in the hands of skillful Vienna seamstresses, while 15,000 marks have been spent on lingerie.

An Amusing Anecdote.
It was during the other night at the house of one of the Prussian ministers. Gentlemen whose coats lapels were covered with stars and crosses crowded the salons. Among these was a painter, who, in spite of his rather insignificant talent, wore several orders. Meeting a gentleman who wore no decorations at all, he asked him in his most surprised tone:

"I suppose you are no German?"
"No, sir."
"What are you then doing in Berlin?"
"Oh, I have a position."
"Permanent?"
"I hope so, at least."
"Now, it seems strange to me that you, a foreigner, should hold a position in Berlin. Is your salary good?"
"Yes, I cannot complain."
"Well, what is it then?"
"I am Lacaille, ambassador of Great Britain to Germany."

The painter beat a hurried retreat and was seen no more.

Japanese Are Quarreling.
A German officer, formerly teacher of military tactics at the military academy

NOTED ACTOR DIES IN MIDST OF SONG

Charles Arnold, Famous Actor-Manager, Drops Dead While Singing Popular Air.

THEATRICAL CIRCLES OF BOTH WORLDS KNEW HIM

Supported Adelaine Neilson, Edwin Booth, Minnie Palmer and Charles Wyndham.

(Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
London, May 6.—A tragic incident occurred at the famous Saturday night dinner of the Savage club tonight. Charles Arnold, the noted actor-manager, well known in New York and London, died suddenly while standing beside a piano singing a song of his own composition, entitled, "We Take Off Our Hats to the King."

It was while he was singing the second verse, telling how Americans doffed their hats to the king that Arnold staggered and sank beside the piano. He was dead before he could be carried to the hall outside. The dinner was in honor of the international press congress now in session here.

Arnold was noted in theatrical circles of both continents. He last appeared in London in "What Happened to Jones," afterward taking the play to Australia. He was born in Switzerland and raised in New York. When a youth in New York he was a clerk in Dorman & Easton's office and succeeded in securing a subpoena on Jim Fisk after all others had failed.

Arnold returned here from New York recently. Many Americans were guests at the dinner and recalled the similar death of Secretary Windom at a dinner at Delmonico's.

Charles Arnold was one of the most versatile actors on the English speaking stage. He began his career under the direction of F. B. Conway in the old Brooklyn theatre, afterwards appearing in variety amusement and made a tour of the world at least three times. He was seen at different times in support of Edwin Booth, Adelaine Neilson and T. C. King, Minnie Palmer and Charles Wyndham. He was as well known in London and as popular in Australia and New Zealand as in the former cities which he called his home towns. He sang in light opera and played Shakespeare, sustained heavy leads in romantic drama and earned continuous applause for his faculty as a light comedian.

His wife was a former Australian girl, known to the stage as Dot Fredericks. They had one daughter, Edna, who is already famous in England as a child actress.

INVITATION TO WEDDING REJECTED BY EDWARD

(By Malcolm Clarke.)
Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.

Berlin, May 6.—The Kaiser once more considers himself slighted by his uncle, King Edward VII of England, whom he has not forgiven for spilling the effect of his visit to the Kaiser's court. This time the supposed slight is not of a political but rather of a personal nature.

While King Edward had sent his regrets, it is said that he would be impossible for him to be present at the wedding of his nephew, the crown prince on June 6, he has at the same time accepted an invitation to be present at the wedding of Duke Karl Edward of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha to Princess Victoria Adelaide of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glueksburg in September. The Duke, a young man in whom King Edward has always taken great interest, becomes of age on July 18.

The Kaiser, who believes that King Edward seeks to avoid a meeting with him, has now noticed the duke that he will honor his wedding with his presence, so King Edward will either have to meet him or stay away from the wedding.

SUCCESSFUL DINNERS DUE TO SPANISH CASH

(Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
London, May 6.—The little dinners given by Major Beacon, the military attaché in the American embassy, in his flat in Curzon street, May Fair, are becoming celebrated. The secret of their success lies in the art of his Franco-Spanish cook-housekeeper, a woman of marvelous resource, whom the major brought home from the Philippines. This "treasure" looks after Major Beacon in the most faithful manner, besides inventing new dishes for his guests. The plates and stripes adorn the vestibule and there are many trophies from the Philippines, where Major Beacon saw a good deal of active service.

PRINCESS ROYAL PLAYS DETECTIVE

Valdemar of Denmark Catches French Postal Authorities in Clever Trap.

RICH GOLD FIELDS IN ISLE OF MADAGASCAR

Duke of Orleans Starts on Good Ship Belgica to Discover the North Pole.

(By Paul Willers.)
Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.

Paris, May 6.—It is not very often that a princess of the blood royal plays detective, but that is just what Princess Valdemar, of Denmark, nee Marie Orleans, has done, and what is more, she has proved the French postal authorities guilty of opening sealed personal letters, reading them and resealing them.

For some time there have been rumors that the French authorities, like Russia, have maintained a "cabinet noir," that is to say, a secret department where letters suspected of containing political secrets are opened and read before they are allowed to reach the person to whom they are addressed.

Princess Valdemar, who was the confidante of the late Czar, Alexander III, and who has a reputation of dabbling in grand politics, had a suspicion that her letters to her mother, the Duchess of Chartres, were opened and read. To make sure she laid a trap for the French authorities.

Duchess Lays a Trap.
At the bottom of a letter to her mother she added the following postscript:

"Dear Mother: I send you the first Danish violet of the season; keep them and think of me every time you look at them," and intentionally she then forgot to enclose the violets.

Some days afterward she received a letter from the Duchess of Chartres, in which she thanked her daughter for the little Danish flowers. The trap had worked to perfection.

It is easy to guess what happened. One of the officials of the "cabinet noir" opened the letter and read it and when he did not see any violets he thought he must have dropped them, and replaced them with French violets.

Whether the princess will make a

STUDENTS AND FACULTY IN A BITTER STRUGGLE

(By Malcolm Clarke.)
Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.

Berlin, May 6.—In Charlottenberg the struggle between students and professors is growing more bitter every day. Last night in a mass meeting of students, the president of the college, Professor Meithe, was violently denounced by many speakers, who demanded his removal from office. The trial of student Seck for refusing to obey the new rules laid down by the president of the college began before Professor Meithe and a number of other professors sitting as judges. More than 1,000 students had gathered outside the building where the trial was held and cheered Seck at the top of their voices as he appeared, and while the trial was going on the tones of a chorus of a thousand students singing "Ferrat Tristitia" made it almost impossible for the professors inside the building to hear their own voices.

Muslin Underwear

THE KIND THAT'S MADE UNDER HEALTHFUL SURROUNDINGS

The Eagle Brand

ONLY HANDLED BY US

No sweat-shop labor (which is liable to contract contagious disease) is used in the making of these garments. Styles are correct and materials flawless

Corset Covers Night Gowns Underskirts and Drawers

Especially low priced during this month—and sold on Easy Terms if desired.

WE ARE ALSO SOLE AGENTS FOR

The Celebrated P. N. Corset

AND SHOW A GREAT MANY NEW STYLES THIS SEASON

The Only Corset on the Market That Is Fitted With Newman's Cork Steel Protectors

Very Close Prices—From $1.50 Up

Eastern Outfitting Co.

390 Washington Street The Store Where Your Credit Is Good

AMERICANS STARTLE PARIS BY PRODIGALITY

(Copyright, Hearst News Service, by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Paris, May 6.—Mr. and Mrs. Peter Martin, of San Francisco, are startling the good Parisians by their lavish display.

Mrs. Martin, who was Miss Oelrichs, of Newport, Rhode Island, while shopping in the Bon-Marche the other day was followed about by a wondering crowd. Like a queen choosing flowers in a garden she sauntered through the shops pointing to the objects which took her fancy, saying: "I'll take that and that—and that"—and so on, till in the space of 10 minutes she had purchased many thousands of francs' worth of goods.

The Peter Martins drive in the Bois de Boulogne every day behind a pair of high-stepping steeds in a swaggar turnout.

URUGUAYAN LEGATION BUNKOED BY SWINDLER

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal.)
Washington, May 6.—The Uruguayan legation, and, it is said, some other South American legations, have been victimized by a South American sharpshooter, whose name the police get as Michel Echerovay. His fiction was that he was a stranded student. He applied to the Uruguayan minister for $25 to go to Cincinnati, where he said he was to get money, and this the minister advanced. Echerovay, it is said, never left Washington, but called later at the legation with a check for $300, which he said was obtained in Cincinnati to get home with. The check was cashed at the legation and proved to be worthless.

The police are looking for him, not only at the request of the Uruguayan minister, but of other legations which are alleged to have been victimized.

Fair Visitors are arriving!

YOUR ROOMS RENTED?

No? Then Use a Journal "Want Ad"

Some days afterward she received a letter from the Duchess of Chartres, in which she thanked her daughter for the little Danish flowers. The trap had worked to perfection.

It is easy to guess what happened. One of the officials of the "cabinet noir" opened the letter and read it and when he did not see any violets he thought he must have dropped them, and replaced them with French violets.

Whether the princess will make a