BOOKMAKER QUINN CRAZED BY LOSS

Ill Luck Drives an Old-Timer Crazy and He Creates Excitement.

FIGHTS VICIOUSLY WHEN POLICE COME

Misfortune Came in Battalions After Sysonby-Race King Dead Heat.

(Journal Special Service.)
 New York, May 13.—Crazed because of bad luck, that commenced when Sysonby and Race King ran a dead heat at the new Belmont track last Thursday, James J. Quinn, a bookmaker, who has been known as "Gutenburg" Quinn, became violent in an eighth avenue surface car yesterday, and was arrested only after he had beaten and kicked a score of citizens and policemen. He was taken to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue, screaming:

"They're off! They're off! There'll be no dead heat today!"
 Quinn, who was 43 years old, had been a bookmaker for 19 years. He lived at No. 271 West One Hundred and Ninth, tenth street with his wife, Antoinette, and his two sons, James, Jr., 8 years old, and Horace, 3 years old. His wife knew little of his work at the races, but she noticed that when he returned from the opening of the Belmont track he was gloomy and morose. He refused to answer questions and kicked a score of citizens and policemen. He was taken to the psychopathic ward at Bellevue, screaming:

"They're off! They're off! The ponies are off!"
 His continued talking about "dead heats" and "pickers making a killing" worried her, but yesterday morning he seemed to be in better spirits. He kissed her good-bye and said he expected to have better luck.
 He walked down Eighth avenue to One Hundred and Tenth street, where he boarded a north-bound surface car, and as soon as he entered the car, in which were a dozen persons, he leaped upon a seat and commenced to shout:

"Your bull luck's no good today! You'll make a killing with the bookies, will you?"

He then ran for a man who was standing on the rear platform and threw him off the car. As the others tried to escape Quinn kicked and punched them furiously, yelling:

"No dead heat! No dead heat!"

When the car reached One Hundred and Eighteenth street, Quinn had thrown every one of except three women and the conductor. Policeman Valtenberg of the East 126th street station heard the shouting, and although the car was in the thirty-first precinct, of which the station is on West 125th street, he boarded the car. Before he could lay hands on Quinn the bookmaker kicked him off the car. Valtenberg ran back and grabbed Quinn. The pair rolled off the car to the street and two policemen from West 125th street station came along. Quinn fought all three in such a frenzy he did not seem to feel the locust wood raps.

A patrol wagon from the East 126th street station came in response to calls by citizens who witnessed the struggle. Four policemen in the wagon joined the three who were fighting Quinn. So violent was the man that it was only when he was handcuffed and his feet were tied that they could get him into the wagon. Even then he managed to kick with both feet bound together.

All the way to the station he yelled the jargon of the track and a great crowd followed the wagon. At the station Dr. Dimmick of Harlem hospital pronounced him insane on the slab for this time. At this time his wife arrived and she begged to be allowed to ride with him in the wagon to Bellevue. Quinn became more violent when he saw her, and for fear of having another "tussle" with him the police forbade Mrs. Quinn's accompanying him.

All the way to the hospital Quinn shrieked of dead heats. The physicians there are hoping of restoring his reason.

SPORTING GOSSIP.

As predicted in Friday's Journal, the Portland ball team would surely do better work after reaching the cellar station, and the proof is furnished in the brilliant game that McCredie's men put up against the Tigers yesterday afternoon. It was on the slab for Portland and the lengthy individual had the Fishermen faded at every stage of the contest. Besides Garvin's masterly twirling, his teammates became very busy at bat, and the wily willows used them on Fitzpatrick with marked success.

Nothing could be more gratifying to the local fans than to learn that McCredie and his men were beginning to hit the ball into safe territory. It has been a long and weary wait for Portland to do any kind of batting and any improvement in that line is the cause for congratulation. At some of the better boys well a pitcher may perform, if his teammates do not bat in runs, it is impossible to secure victories, and after all, only victories count.

Atz continues his good work and reports that in the life of the Portland team. His fielding, batting and base running are features of every game.

There is a lot of pleasant rivalry between the two St. Louis tracks, which are now running. On account of the breeders' law an admission must be charged to the races, but it's only nominal and anybody with a voice can get a complimentary badge, ten cents admission is charged. But why not stimulate interest by—Charging 5-pins admission.
 24 buttons and 10 pins to the paddock? Five marbles to the betting ring?
 Four tops and a paper of pins to the club house?
 Give purple trading stamps with each ticket of admission and a hot wicker with every bet?
 The purses might be made 1,000 longer to the first horse, bag of peanuts to the second and two apples to the third.

Street car motormen often make good snappers. At Portland, Ore., when they run against a telegraph pole, also make excellent shortstops. Some ball players also make good shortstops and some just work at it, without making good. A shortstop is a cross between a second baseman and a third sacker. He is supposed to go after everything that the others do not care to handle. The second and third basemen leave all the hard hits for the shortstop to handle, and he gets most of the errors. For this he gets extra pay, and a few hard knocks in the newspapers. To become a shortstop with a clean record it is necessary to buy crawfish for the official score.

President Roosevelt may have killed all those bears himself, but now that we know that the Colorado women have been sending fruit cakes to his camp the country will have its suspicions.

Owing to the grounds at the ball park not being in condition the proposed increase match and ball game scheduled for Sunday afternoon have been postponed.

William Wordsworth Hurley, baseball player by the kindness of David Exit Dugdale, was married to Miss Mabel Cummings of Seattle this week at Little Rock, Arkansas. Reports say that the honeymoon will consist of a swing around the circuit. If William is real saving, now that he lives at Arkansas capital, he will soon be able to build a stone house, with all the rocks that he gathered during his Pacific coast tour last season. ### PORTLAND BLANKS TACOMA TIGERS

Virgil Garvin of Ancient Fame Throws Fading Balls at Fisher's Men.

WHITEWASH BRUSH IS WELL HANDLED

Every Man on Portland Team Hit the Ball, Van Buren Making Three.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Tacoma, May 13.—Portland 6, Tacoma 0.
 Batteries—Garvin and McLean; Fitzpatrick and Graham.
 Virgil Garvin had the Tigers worried yesterday and shut them out without a run for the second time this season, and as on his previous performance, allowed them only four hits. On the other hand the Portland sluggers pounded Fitzpatrick for 17 hits, and only the first fielding of the ex-fireman's support held the victors to six runs. Tacoma pulled off four fast double plays which served to hold the score down. Portland found Fitz for one or more hits in every inning and in the first, fourth, sixth and seventh they bunched enough to send one or more men across the register.

Atz, the first man up, went out. Van Buren bunted safely and scored on singles by Householder and McCredie. Portland bunched three hits in the third but failed to score, as both Atz and Householder were caught at the plate.

In the fourth McLean and Mitchell each hit safe and Kurkie was passed, filling the bases. Garvin singled, scoring McLean. Atz went out and Van Buren's hit scored Mitchell and Kurkie. Portland bunched three hits in the fifth but failed to score, as both Atz and Householder were caught at the plate.

In the seventh Schlafly was safe, when Graham had a passed ball on the third strike and Kurkie and Kurkie sacker scored on a hit by McCredie and Doyle's error.

The holding of Atz and Schlafly for the visitors was the score follows:
