Of the Hand of Mayor Williams by Van Cortland.

There is a hand that suggests a great deal of strength of character, said the palmitist.

There is great determination and force with marked vitality, interests of a somewhat varied character, and also the ability to develop them to a marked degree.

But the interest is more in the beginning of an undertaking than in its conclusion.

Some Familiar Traits. It is a hand whose life began early, who through some marked change or event swept into the current of individual action and was affected and influenced by contending conditions.

The line of success verifies the inclination so strongly marked in the fate line. This hand averts the consequences of danger.

There is a close family and home and all the sweet associations that make up the personal life.
