An interesting diversion in exposition matters came to light this morning when the havy department began the erection of a piece of wreckage in Guild's lake for use in the life-saving exhibitions. There is no objection to this act in itself, but a row is on between the department of concession and Lieutenant McClellan of the life wreck. It has been the rule at other expositions, and it was expected here, that the daily exhibitions would take place immediately in front of the life-saving station, which is on the western shore of the government peninsula. Perhaps it is only natural for the readers of newspapers to expect the management of such a celebrity as is Tsaye to let loose a fine flood of alliterative adjectives as often as the papers will print them, but surely no such suspicion can attach itself to Philip Hale, the noted Boston critic, who wrote of Ysaye's appearance there this fall.

But the listener is as absorbed as is Ysaye, the two listen to the music, nor is the spell broken when the music ceases. Those who come to scoff may not remain to pray, but they go away with a puzzied look on their faces, wondering mightily. Perhaps you see rather peculiar methods used by the madame in telling a fortune, but, when she commences to talk and piles up fast after fact, which you know to be true, even to the smallest detail, your laugh dies away, and you gaze in amazement akin to awe at the mysterious woman before you, as though she were some uncanny being fresh from another world. You sit chained to the chair with fascination while your past and future are laid bare before you. After answering the final question you are perplexed and abstractedly draw forth your purse, throwing an inquiring glance at Mme. You Heck. She smiles and asks you if you are satisfied, saying that she never accepts payment until assured that a person is perfectly satisfied and that they believe they have received a fair return for their money.

Most assurely, the madam differs from other clairvoyants. You laugh, etil, rather confusedly, and like every one cise, declare, that you are glad to pay the small compensation asked. Many affirm no money value can be fixed upon the good which they have received.

Abused Wife Shows She Was Divorced in Sacramento Over Two Years Ago.

It is stated by Mrs. Frances McGinty, whose husband was held to the grand jury on a charge of assault and battery, that he is in line for the whipping-post, notwithstanding the statements made by his friends that she was not divorced from her first husband when she married him.

In view of the attack made on her, it is probable that if McGinty is convicted and sentenced to the lash, she will take advantage of Sheriff Word's offer and ply the whip herself.

The injured wife wa formerly married to Albert W. Rogers. She has shown the authorities a clipping from a paper published at Sacramento, California, which says that Superior Judge Hart granted her a divorce.

"These attacks are instigated by malice," said Mrs. McGinty. "I was divorced at Sacramento October 8, 1862, and was not married to McGinty until last July on the 25th. I have borne with many things, but I am tired of being beaten and otherwise abused, and intend seeing that my husband is punished for what he has done."
