

FRANCE WELCOMES ALFONSO OF SPAIN

Youthful King is Given a Royal Greeting Upon His Arrival in Republic.

RAILROAD STATION IS DECORATED IN VELVET

Paris a Mass of Flowers and Bunting—Monarch Met by President Loubet.

(Journal Special Service.) Paris, May 30.—The youthful Spanish King, now traveling for the first time outside his own domain, received a royal welcome from republican France today. From the moment when the train bearing the Spanish sovereign stopped at the railway station here until the nation's distinguished guest was safely conducted to his apartments in the Champs Elysees, Paris resounded with acclamations of welcome, the booming of guns and the playing of the national anthems of Spain and France. It was a welcome well calculated to bind the two nations closer together, both politically and commercially. The official welcome to King Alfonso began at Cherbouze upon the arrival of the Spanish squadron there. The notable ceremonies, however, were deferred until the arrival in Paris. During the morning the capital completed its preparations to welcome the young ruler. The final touches were placed on the decorations along the route over which the royal visitor was to drive, and crowds assembled near the station, upon the sidewalks of the Avenue de la Bourdonnais and in the Champs de Elysees. The band of the Republican Guard was with the official reception party at the station. The station was magnificently decorated with magnificent draperies, flowers and palms. On the arrival of the royal train, King Alfonso, in the uniform of a general of the Spanish army, descended, his suite following. M. Loubet and the ministers of state cordially greeted the royal visitor, the band playing the Spanish national anthem, and the guard of honor presenting arms. The party then walked to the salon, where M. Loubet presented the dignitaries of state to the monarch. The president and king afterward entered a state carriage, drawn by four horses, with outriders, and escorted by a detachment of troops. The appearance of the young king to the multitude assembled about the station. After a short time spent at the d'Orsay palace, King Alfonso drove to the Elysee to pay his respects to M. Loubet.

MAC WATKINS WILL BE BURIED IN THE EAST

The body of Mac Watkins, the lineman of the Portland General Electric company who was electrocuted yesterday morning on the White House road in the vicinity of the Fulton tannery, will be shipped tonight to Des Moines, Iowa, for burial. Mrs. Watkins will accompany the body.

When the shock came to the lineman he was working on a pole removing dead wires. T. F. Patton, the foreman of the crew, had cautioned him to be careful but a moment before the shock came. The foreman had turned to direct other workmen and on turning saw the man hanging limp from the pole and he sent two men to lower him to the ground.

TO KEEP PORTLAND'S VITAL STATISTICS

Dudley Evans, superintendent of the county board of health, is in receipt of an inquiry from Turner & Kerr, lawyers of Auburn, New York, asking for information concerning Charles Starks, a boatbuilder, who is said by them to have died in or near Portland recently, possessed of wealth. Efforts to secure the information have failed. The collection of vital statistics apparently has not been given much attention in this city and county. Records have not been kept in an ideal condition. However, Superintendent Evans, who is also charged with the duty of gathering county vital statistics, is perfecting a plan which hopes will bring order out of statistical chaos. He proposes to see that all persons observe the law, and that hereafter when any one sends to the county for facts pertaining to people who he died here he will receive them promptly.

RECEPTION TO OFFICERS.

FENCE POSTS BLOSSOM LIKE CULTIVATED TREES

Fence posts on the east side are blossoming like cultivated trees in an orchard. They are on the property of E. U. Morrison, 821 East Ash street, and attract the attention of all who pass that way. Early in the spring Mr. Morrison decided to erect a fence in order to protect his roses, and select the branches of an apple tree for posts. Recently they began to sprout and blossom, and are covered with blooms averaging two inches in length.

DUNN TELLS HOW VICTORY WAS WON

Eye-Witness of Chemulpo Battle Explains Mode of Recent Japanese Attack.

PLAYED WAITING GAME AND TRAPPED FLEET

Russians Again Sprung Deadfall Cunningly Arranged by the Enemy.

Robert L. Dunn, war correspondent and photographer for Collier's Weekly, who has recently spent nine months in the seat of war between Japan and Russia, has been in the vicinity where the recent naval engagement took place between the countries in which the Russians fought the battle of Chemulpo. He is in Portland, in speaking of the naval battle, said: "Judging from the reports of the latest naval engagement Japan seems to have fought this battle similar to the way in which she met her opponents at Chemulpo. Both battles took place in the Straits of Korea and judging from the reports, in about the same locality. The straits are studded with small volcanic islands which rise precipitously to a great height above the sea and it would be an easy matter for the entire Japanese fleet to hide among these islands without the knowledge of the Russians. At the battle of Chemulpo the entire Japanese fleet of 24 vessels lay behind a series of these pinnacles, focused their guns on the opening of the main channel through which the Russians must pass and at the instant the Russians showed the prow of their first vessel through the opening, every Japanese gun belched forth a hail of shot and shell and took the enemy completely by surprise. "The Russians could regain their composure or see what direction the fire was coming from and might then, their ships would be wrecked. The Japanese pounded away at long range with their larger ships attacking the rear of the Russian guns, and then the little torpedo vessels would run beneath the fire and cause immense damage to the Russian fleet. These small ships could never have gotten so close to the Russian ships had not the larger ships first attracted and held the attention of the Russian gunners. The Russian cruiser Varieg at Chemulpo was perforated with holes until it resembled a sponge in 40 minutes. "The Straits of Korea is the only route by which the Russians could pass and in getting through this place they were playing into the hands of the Japanese. The Japanese were evidently prepared for them and had been expecting them. The Japanese have lookouts on each of those pinnacles and they were able to sight the Russians long before they reached the fair, and everything was ready for the enemy when the ships appeared through the channel."

Arrangements have been made by officials of the passenger departments of the Union Pacific, the Oregon Short-Line and the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company to forward bulletins to Portland concerning the progress of two automobiles, Old Scout and Old Steady, the last and a race across the continent to the Lewis and Clark fair. The automobiles are following a line of wagon roads nearest to the Harriman railroad lines on their course westward to Omaha. A prize of $1,000 has been offered for the driver of the winning auto. Colonel James W. Abbott of the good roads bureau of the department of agriculture is directing the race and following it from point to point along the Harriman lines. He expects to arrive in Portland a few hours ahead of the automobiles. When the auto reach Huntington, Oregon will become intense, as they will begin the real work of racing for the prize. The Portland Automobile club will probably send a delegation out to meet racers.

BUILDING TRAILS IN FOREST RESERVES

Government Doing Much Work for Protection of Timber.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) The Dalles, Or., May 30.—M. J. Anderson, assistant supervisor of forest reserves, in an interview stated that the government is doing a great deal of work in order to protect its timber. He says that a system of trails has been made through the Cascade mountains from Hood river to the east side of Mount Jefferson. These trails are at least eight feet wide and have been graded so that wagons can be taken anywhere. At the present time they are working on the trail on the divide east of the east fork of Hood river. They build these trails so that forest-rangers can see over a large territory and if needed they can be brought together quickly. The cost of building these trails is estimated by Mr. Anderson at $10 to $20 a mile where no grading is done. The building of these trails was started three or four years ago and will be continued until the mountains are all worked over. The trails are being built in the future the rangers will have fire under complete control and a very sharp eye will be kept on campers who may leave fires burning. Very little snow is being selling the mature timber in the Mount Hood district at the rate of $1 per 1,000 feet stumpage and states some of the timber brings $5 an acre, and that there is still plenty of it. It is estimated that there is $20 an acre, which means a big gain to the government. It is thought enough timber can be sold to pay the cost of building trails and patrolling the forests. The closing of business houses and the suspension of all kinds of business brought quiet in the strike today. Only 500 policemen are on duty and no disturbances are reported. An extension of the strike in the business houses and 200 teamsters of the east, door and blind manufacturers will probably go out. A further spread in the coal industry is also likely. Everything indicates that both sides to the strike are growing weary, although no definite peace moves have been made.

EXTENSION OF STRIKE IS EXPECTED TOMORROW

(Journal Special Service.) Chicago, May 30.—Business was practically suspended today while the war veterans marched in the annual parade and held services at the graves of fallen comrades. National guards and state troops participated in the exercises, in which the governor and Colonel Walter T. Dugan, commander of the department of the lakes, were conspicuous figures. The closing of business houses and the suspension of all kinds of business brought quiet in the strike today. Only 500 policemen are on duty and no disturbances are reported. An extension of the strike in the business houses and 200 teamsters of the east, door and blind manufacturers will probably go out. A further spread in the coal industry is also likely. MUTCH WAS TOO MUCH FOR CHIEF Kangaroo Judge is Shocked by Unseemly Levity of Culprit.

NINE OFFENDERS ARE FREED BY MR. HUNT

Peddlers, Drunken Men and Suspicious Persons Quickly Sped With a Blessing.

William Mutch is a humorist who seeks enjoyment at the expense of sacred objects. He had the hard luck this morning to poke fun at "Kangaroo Judge" Hunt, presiding magistrate at the police station. The resentment of the venerable court was aroused and he severely rebuked the fractious defendant. "Where did you come from?" inquired the court. "From the north end, judge," solemnly responded Mutch. The title "judge" angered his honor. He glared fiercely at the prisoner. "I mean what city did you come here from?" he demanded, raising his voice. "Or, from Angel's Camp." "From Angel's Camp, where's that?" "Don't you know where Angel's Camp is? I thought everybody knew where Angel's Camp is. Way, it's in Astoria." By this time everybody was aware that kangaroo hitting was in progress. Grins were in evidence on all sides, and a chuckle or two was audible. The venerable chief's face was flushed with work of trails. "Well, what do you want here?" he demanded. "Oh, I don't want much, your honor." "Why don't you want much?" "Mr. Anderson has him with me all the time and would like a change of brand." The chief stamped in rage. His eyes shot fire. He resembled himself marching along a warm street on parade, wearing full uniform. "You get out of here!" he shouted. "Get out of here, I say! Don't you ever appear before me again. You're one of those smart guys. I know how to get you out of here. Go on, now! Get out of here quick! I never want to see your face around here again." Mutch walked out the door with a springy step, humming "It will greet you when the roses bloom again." Barring this exhibition of effrontery before the dignified tribunal, no untoward incident marred this morning's session. Tickets of leave were granted by the venerable magistrate to the following: John A. McDonald, arrested by Patrolman Teevin, at First and Alder streets; drunk; Charles Camp, by Patrolman Galbraith, Sixth and Stark streets; peddling without a license; Will Jackson, by Patrolman Quinton, Fifth and Alder streets; injured by a fall; John Brooks, by Sergeant Taylor, Third and Burnside streets; drunk; H. W. Dolph, by Patrolman Gibson, Park and Washington streets; drunk; William Mutch, by Patrolmen Jones and Courtney, Fourth and Davis streets; drunk; James Gibbons, by Patrolman Jones and Courtney, Fourth and Everett streets; drunk; F. H. Curtis, by Patrolmen Jones and Courtney, Fourth and Everett streets; drunk; E. C. Curtis, by Patrolman Porter, First and Columbia streets; after hours.

An east side dealer was offered pipe and wire weighing 65 pounds by the prisoners. It is said, and while he discussed terms with them had an employe telephone police headquarters.

NAMES ON CHECK NOT FOUND IN BRADSTREET'S

Intercepting City Detective Daniel Weiner as he was passing a saloon at Fifth and Alder streets last Friday, Harry Howland, the day bartender, handed him a piece of paper and excitedly exclaimed that it was an important check for $50, "just passed over the bar." The man was of medium height, dark-complexioned, wore a white straw hat and had a split lip, causing his teeth to appear strangely on one side, declared Howland. "He went down Fifth toward Washington street. Get him and there's money in it." "Danny" laid Chapman Myers' record as a splinter in the shade while searching for the alleged bogus check man. He could not find him, and stopping to take breath, examined the check. It was made payable to "R. L. Insalata" and was for $50. He looked for Joe Day and showed him the check. "Joe," he snapped, "cuss a little for me—you can do it better than I can." "Oh, my?" said Mr. Day.

Cabral is said to have left the city in order to avoid prosecution, and evidently thought the offense had been committed so long ago that it would be safe for him to return.

While driving along the streets she came upon an automobile standing at the curb and the horse threw her to the ground.
