THE OREGON DAILY JOURNAL
PORTLAND, OREGON.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE JOURNAL

TUESDAY, JUNE 6, 1886.

SOME BACK AND FORWARD GLANCES AT THE ELECTION.

I

It was a hard-fought battle, and a great victory for the friends of the candidates, and a victory which, in its results, was of great importance to the country and to the Republican party. The campaign was conducted in the usual manner, both in the North and in the South, and the result was not unexpected. The victory was gained by the friends of the candidates, and it was a victory which was well deserved. The election was conducted in a spirit of fairness and good feeling, and the result was a condemnation of all those who opposed the candidates.

The vote of the people has been most truly expressed in the newspapers, and the result was a condemnation of all those who opposed the candidates. The victory was gained by the friends of the candidates, and it was a victory which was well deserved. The election was conducted in a spirit of fairness and good feeling, and the result was a condemnation of all those who opposed the candidates.

THE PLAY.

When a few people can use it, though no means and methods of the folks who know that electricity is the word and that a new idea is the thing, there are no words or methods which can prevent them from using it. The play is a new idea, and it is the thing to do. The play is the word, and it is the thing to use.