Oregon Stockraisers Ship Their Stock to the Chicago Market.

PRICES THERE A DOLLAR LESS THAN THAT HERE

In Consequence Pacific Coast Packers Go East of Missouri for Pork.

Pacific coast meatpackers are bringing in hogs from the east to fill the demand for the packed product in this territory.

For practically a month packers of hogs on the coast have purchased nearly all of their supplies in Chicago, Kansas City and Omaha.

Hogs of the very best quality are quoted at $12 in the Portland livestock market and at this figure the packers are able to secure hardly a portion of the stocks needed.

Of the matter an official of the Portland union stockyards says: "I don't understand why stockmen will ship their hogs to Kansas City, Omaha and even Chicago instead of sending them to this market."

GOING TO THE JURY

but this defendant—first myself, then Tanner, then Robertson, and I do not know who else has not been tried before you—having disposed of them, after we are all acquitted, I think that we should return to the trial of Senator Mitchell.

It is admitted that the firm received Kribbe's money, that it went into the fund for dividends at the end of the month, and it is admitted that Senator Mitchell got his share.

What is his moral conscience then? said the attorney. "Could he read that letter without knowing that Tanner was taking $1,500 for this work, which the senator must perform and he represented that he was doing it for Oregon clients, because it was a suspicious circumstance that Benson had come from California—a land speculator like Benson—to employ a firm of which Tanner was a member and a United States senator from Oregon was a member, instead of having the influence of the California senators. It will not do to argue to you that Mitchell did not know. They tried to prove that he was incompetent during those years. Look at that mass of business which he did in which he received money. Incompetent! Incompetent from the standpoint of the trustee of the interests of the people of the state of Oregon, who ought to have been protected by one whom they had chosen, but who was willing to perform work for these speculators when there was a better way of doing it."

"Did not know what kind of a man Benson was? The United States senator of yours was not assisting and assisting to take advantage of the private citizens of the state of Oregon, whom he represented and for whom he was being paid a salary to assist and protect? That is where his moral turpitude comes in. They talk about no moral turpitude. What a United States senator, paid to protect and defend the people of the whole United States, taking a fee and thinking nothing of the honor of his position which you have entrusted him with, to enable a land speculator outside of your state to steal from the outside of the United States this magnificent domain, which belongs to you and your children. No moral turpitude, is it? We will come to that presently."

A New Kind of Beaver. Judge Bennett's reference to the habit of the beaver in gnawing off its leg to escape a trap, as Judge Tanner was being discussed, was turned by the prosecuting attorney, in slightly altered form, against Senator Mitchell. He was charged with trying to gnaw the leg of the United States senate, in which he had no business, and he was charged with trying to gnaw the leg of his own leg. This was brought out by the care with which the attorney said Mitchell had covered up all of his acts and forced friends into the breach to protect himself.

Professor James Bryce's summary of the United States senate, in which he concluded that many unworthy politicians forced themselves into this exalted chamber through sharp practices, was read, with the purpose of offsetting the inferences Senator Thurston drew as to the high honor attaching to any man who had sat for a long time in that body.

Lord Bacon's trial for an offense, which, the district attorney said, had strong resemblance to this, was referred to freely. As history shows, Lord Bacon was present from a litigant before him, and before the case was decided in favor of that litigant. There was a law in England forbidding a judge to receive such a present, and when Lord Bacon was accused he argued that, while he had received a present, he had decided the case according to his best judgment and conscience, and was not influenced by the present. Mr. Hickey, who had the resemblance was striking, as the defendant having received the money in this case, but holds that he was not influenced to do anything before the land departments that he would not do in the absence of the present. In behalf of the defendant it was also argued that Lord Bacon had served his country in eminent manner, and his offense involved no moral turpitude. All of these arguments, the district attorney thought, were far more eminently applicable to Lord Bacon than to the defendant in this case, and the fact that an Englishman who had, despite all, convicted the aged jurist, who is immortal in history, was cited as a reason why an American jury should also enforce a law strictly and without any feeling of sympathy for one high in office.

From this instance, Mr. Hickey made the argument that punishment is not for the victim, but to prevent repetition of crime, an example. "You are to do your duty in this case, and your duty is not to the unfortunate person, whose fall is already complete, because the world knows his guilt from the evidence in this case. We are not to consider him. We are to consider our fellow-countrymen and the future of this country."

B. Spiegel, 1204 N. Virginia St., Evansville, Ind., writes: "For over five years I was troubled with kidney and bladder affections which caused me much pain and worry. I lost flesh and was all run down, and a year ago had to abandon work entirely. I had three of the best physicians who did me no good and I was practically given up to die. Foley's Kidney Cure gave me great relief, and after taking the second bottle I was entirely cured."

Flags at Half Mast. President Issues Proclamation to Foreign Representatives. (Journal Special Service.)

Washington, D. C., July 2.—President Roosevelt today promulgated the following proclamation to all ambassadors in foreign countries: "The secretary of state of the United States, died on July 1. His death, a crushing sorrow to his friends, is to the people of the country a national bereavement, and in addition it is a serious loss to our country, for to him it was given to stand as a leader in the effort to better world conditions by striving to advance the cause of international peace and justice."

He entered the public service as a trusted and intimate confidant of Abraham Lincoln, and for well-nigh 40 years he served his country with loyal devotion and high ability in many positions of honor and trust; and finally as a leader in the great struggle for peace in the future and such loyalty to lofty ideas as to confer lasting benefits, not only upon our own country, but upon all the nations of the world.

"As a suitable expression of national mourning, I direct that the diplomatic representatives of the United States in all foreign countries display the flag over their embassies and legations at half mast for ten days; that for a like period the flag of the United States be displayed at half mast at all naval stations and at all vessels of the United States."

"I further order that on the day of the establishment of these exhibitions the city of Washington be closed, and that on all public buildings throughout the United States the national flag be displayed at half mast."

MUTINY AT KRONSTADT. (Continued from Page One.) less and awaits all official news with the greatest impatience. Personally he is most anxious for peace. He is sick to death of hearing of one blunder after another, and very desirous of putting an end to the useless bloodshed. Grand Duke Vladimir, who has not once shown himself in public since the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius, still continues to be the czar's evil spirit and it is solely due to his influence and that of the czar, who is strongly opposed to the idea of granting a constitution to the Russian people, that M. Witte has not been at the head of the government.

But a change is near. Only a few days ago Czar Nicholas exclaimed that M. Witte is the only man in Russia who cannot be bought and the only one who has never been implicated in any intrigue. Six months from now, at the very latest, M. Witte will be the most powerful man in Russia if he has not been assassinated by the reactionary party before then.

Of Interest to the Musical Public. Mr. Courtney, formerly of San Francisco, recently made a tour along the coast with the intention of establishing a music house in the north-west. As a result Portland was his selection, and he is located at 89 Fifth street. Mr. Courtney announces his store to distinguish itself in its sphere, as Mr. Courtney's stock is to afford a complete and well-selected line of everything pertaining to music. His first move was to buy out the entire bankrupt stock of Wright's music store, which he is selling to the public at nominal prices, as a means of introduction. This sale of at least one third off was also rendered necessary to unload the stock quickly and make room for the new stock. Mr. Courtney has purchased from the east and which is on the road here now. Mr. Courtney invites the public, especially musicians, to call and take advantage of the introductory prices he is offering.
