The Grandest View in America

The grand panorama surrounding the city of Portland will never be seen to better advantage than at the present time. The atmosphere is now so clear following the recent heavy rains that the great view peaks of the Cascade range appear as though at stone's throw. Mount Rainier, the highest of them all, is now to be seen, and it looks to be as near as the other peaks half the distance. Just think that although this great mountain is 103 miles distant, still its crevices and other details can be seen through the powerful glasses installed upon the Lewis and Clark Observatory. No one should miss this sight, which is very rare even for residents of this city. This great scenery is now in full view, and no stranger should think of leaving before going to the Observatory. BY SOME RECTORS

Rabbi Hirsch interestingly Talks on Conditions in Windy City's Public Schools.

WORKED FOR JUDGE DUNNE AND HELPED ELECT HIM

Federation of Instructors Has Been Behind Teamsters in the Great Strike.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, the noted Jewish rabbi spending a few days in Portland, gives a graphic picture of some curious phases of the great strike which has paralyzed the industries of Chicago for a considerable period.

"The people of Portland would probably be interested in the conditions that prevail in the Chicago schools," said Dr. Hirsch.

"The teachers there are in a federation which is allied with the federation of labor and have been a considerable power in the city's affairs. For years many of the large corporations had escaped their share of taxation, and the school fund, in common with other funds, suffered heavily. The teachers' union commenced an agitation which brought about a change, and forced the corporations to bear their share of taxes, with the result that the school fund was greatly increased."

"Then came trouble over the organization of the schools. The old school board believed in the one-man power, vesting great authority in the superintendent of schools. The same superintendent had been in office for five years. Many of his acts excited the opposition of the teachers, but he was upheld by the school board. Finally the board went to the legislature to secure the passage of a bill legalizing some of their acts and the teachers' federation undertook to defeat the bill. They succeeded."

"An unusual cause of trouble between the teachers and the board was the system of promotions among the teachers. Formerly promotion depended simply on length of service, so that a teacher who remained in the service was sure of promotion from time to time. Irrespective of his qualifications or ability. It was not so," said Dr. Hirsch with a smile, "he sat on one of these revolving chairs and by merely keeping his seat he would gradually be screwed up higher."

"That system has been changed by the board now in office. It has established a system of promotional examinations in which various elements are taken into consideration."

Teachers for Municipal Ownership. Length of service figures for 60 per cent of the total teaching, and a certain percentage is allotted for outside service. One who remained in the service was sure of promotion from time to time. Irrespective of his qualifications or ability. It was not so," said Dr. Hirsch with a smile, "he sat on one of these revolving chairs and by merely keeping his seat he would gradually be screwed up higher."

"During the recent city campaign the federation of teachers took up the municipal ownership issue and became an active factor in the campaign. Judge Dunne, the Democratic candidate for mayor, promised that if the teachers would support him they should have a vote in naming the next school board. The teachers gave their support to Dunne and his platform of municipal ownership and he was elected. He kept his promise and a third of the new members of the school board are sympathizers with the teachers' federation. One of them is Miss Jane Addams of Hull house."

The old school board had passed resolutions commending the federation of teachers. It commended their attitude in the labor troubles. As a member of the federation of labor, the teachers had taken up the cause of the striking teamsters. Their strike was utterly unjustified.

What the Protest Says. The text of the protest is as follows: "The bishop of the several standing committees of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America:

"Whereas, The Rev. F. E. J. Lloyd was elected as bishop of the diocese of Oregon at the 17th annual convention, June 15-17, the said Rev. F. E. J. Lloyd receiving a majority of two votes; and

"Whereas, In the nominating speech made by the bishop of the diocese of Oregon at the 17th annual convention, June 15-17, the said Rev. F. E. J. Lloyd was a 'broad churchman,' and further, that he was a graduate of the University of Oxford, thereby giving the impression that he was a man of special intellectual and scholarly attainments, possessed of 'sound learning'; and

"Whereas, The Rev. F. E. J. Lloyd, a layman, was elected to the office of bishop of the diocese of Oregon, having participated in the aforesaid election, and having signed the canonical testimonial required to be signed by a majority of the said convention, do hereby solemnly repudiate our several actions in affixing our signatures thereto, because it now transpires from indisputable evidence that the said Rev. F. E. J. Lloyd is not a broad or low churchman, nor is he a graduate of Oxford or any other university."

"In view of this serious misrepresentation of the qualifications of the said bishop-elect we hereby respectfully request that the bishops and standing committees of the several dioceses re-use their consent to his consecration as bishop-coadjutor until such time as the election can be ratified at a special convention, at which full and accurate knowledge may be had concerning the bishop-elect." (Signed: A. Morrison, chairman of convention, rector of Trinity church, Portland, Oregon.)

"Henry Dixon Jones, rector Church of the Redeemer, Portland, Oregon; John Dawson, rector Church of the Good Shepherd, Portland, Oregon; Thomas N. Wilson, St. Stephen's church, Portland, Oregon; Robert Hope, All Saints' Mission, Portland, Oregon.

Bishop B. Wistar Morris has already certified to the election of Dr. Lloyd as bishop-coadjutor.
