

PUSHING THE WORK

Judge De Haven Calls 26 Land Fraud Cases Today.

ARGUMENT TOMORROW ON MANY DEMURRERS

Williamson's Trial Will Begin Friday—Every Indication of Intent to Dispose of Oregon's Land Scandals.

The following telegram was received this morning by F. J. Heney:

Washington, July 5, 1905.—United States Attorney, Portland, Or.—Your loyal and successful conduct of prosecution against Senator Mitchell is appreciated and commended.

"HOYT,"
"Acting Attorney-General."

Twenty-six cases growing out of the federal grand jury's investigations into the Oregon land frauds were called up this morning by Judge De Haven for the purpose of bringing them to an issue and setting them for trial. Many of the defendants have not yet been arraigned and they will be required to appear in court and plead or demur. Others have filed demurrers and these will be decided without loss of time. In the case against the Butte Creek Land Lumber & Livestock company, represented by Judge Bennett, arguments were heard on the demurrers that have been filed and they were taken under advisement.

It is the evident purpose of Judge De Haven to clear the decks for action as rapidly as possible and to lose no time in bringing all of the land fraud cases to an early conclusion. The trial of Congressman Williamson, which will begin next Friday, will be followed in quick succession by the prosecutions of Congressman Hermann, State Senator Joseph Simon, County Judge L. R. Webster, John M. Searin, Dan J. Malarky and Judge A. S. Bennett.

The first case called was that of the United States vs. Frank P. Mays, Horace G. McKinney, E. A. Puffer, Mearns W. Ware, Emma Watson, Dan Tarpley and Robert Simpson. The defendants are charged with conspiring to defraud the government of public lands by means of false and fraudulent homestead claims. United States District Attorney Heney made the significant statement to the court that the only person to be arraigned was F. P. Mays, the other defendants having agreed to plead guilty.

Edwin Mays addressed the court: "May I please the court, I am a brother of F. P. Mays, and though not his attorney, I desire to state that he is ill in Oakland, California, and unable to be here in court."

Mr. Heney replied that he understood the facts to be as stated and the case was thereupon placed at the foot of the calendar. The specific charge against F. P. Mays is that he acquired certain tracts of land on which the patents had been obtained through fraud. Thaddeus E. Potter acting as Mays' agent in receiving and delivering the patents to the government, who has thus far escaped arrest, all of Mays' co-defendants are under conviction for the famous "11-T" land frauds.

Arguments will be heard tomorrow on a number of demurrers filed by defendants. As to Frank J. Van Winkle, indicted with Henry Meldrum et al for conspiracy to defraud the government, the charge was dismissed on motion of Mr. Heney, who stated that he was convinced that Van Winkle is not guilty. A similar order was made as to Frank W. Dungan, also indicted with Meldrum on a conspiracy charge, and as to H. L. Miller, indicted with W. N. Jones and others in connection with frauds in the Miller reserve.

Demurrers to the indictments against State Senator George C. Brownell.

JOHN HAY IS BURIED

President, Vice-President and Cabinet Members Attend Funeral.

ESCORT OF TROOPS ACCOMPANIES BODY

Services in Washington Simultaneous With the Last Rites at Lakeview Cemetery in Cleveland, Ohio.

(Journal Special Service.)
Cleveland, Ohio, July 5.—With fitting ceremonies, yet marked with simplicity, the body of the late Secretary of State John Hay was today laid in its last resting place at Lakeview cemetery. At 11 o'clock short services for the dead began in the sanctuary of Wade memorial chapel at Lakeview cemetery. In the chapel assembled a little company of distinguished mourners. Mrs. Hay and Clarence Hay were in the front bench to the right. To the left was President Roosevelt, Samuel Mather, other relatives were near. Mrs. Hay, Vice-President Fairbanks and the remainder of the company sat well in the rear of the chapel.

When the silent company assembled, Dr. Hiram C. P. Hayden began the prayer for the dead. A quartet sang two verses of a hymn, following which Dr. A. B. Meldrum, pastor of the church, read a passage of Scripture. Another hymn, a prayer and the service ended.

A squad of troops from the Ohio National Guard bore the casket down the aisle. Behind it followed the chief mourners and members of the cabinet, who acted as honorary pallbearers. The president accompanied Mrs. Hay to the carriage.

The cortege then moved to the stone plot, where the casket was lowered into the grave. Dr. Hayden then read the funeral prayer. The party at once entered carriages and were driven away. The president and his cabinet, with visiting associates of the late secretary, were driven to the train. Mrs. Hay returned to the home of Samuel Mather.

The funeral began with the arrival of President Roosevelt and party at Chamber of Commerce hall, where the remains lay in state. The party, with a squad of police led the cortege. A large number of people lined the streets leading to the cemetery and watched the passage of the funeral procession.

OREGON HOP CROP IN REAL DANGER

Julius Pincus Says It Is Threatened With Destruction by Lice.

RED SPIDER, TOO, A SERIOUS MENACE

Spraying Alone Will Save the Golden Store, Declares the Famous Bear.

According to prominent dealers, both bulls and bears, the hop crop of Oregon is threatened with destruction. Their suggestion as to the way to save the crop is to spray properly. To offset this the growers are threatened with the loss of the English market if it is found, upon a thorough examination, that too much arsenic appears in the hops from this section.

Julius Pincus, whose attitude in the hop market during the past season has never shown the earmarks of a bull, says of the situation:

"Hop growers should not make the mistake that their hops will come out all right if they do not spray. Honey dew is so plentiful among the hop yards that the situation has become more alarming than during any recent season. Hop lice are much more plentiful than they have ever been, none of the yards being literally covered with the little pests. Of course weather conditions could possibly help the growers to rid their yards of the vermin but weather conditions do not also come as they are planned. Few growers realize the danger in the present situation. The danger is such that present prospects are that the crop of the state of Oregon at the present season will be ruined. The present honey dew was shown in only a few sections but now it has appeared in every direction. Honey dew is caused by the lice puncturing the leaf of the hop and allowing the sap to escape. This causes the vine attacked to lose its crop."

According to information received by The Journal very few growers have actually prepared themselves for spraying during the present season. The danger has been underestimated on all sides. Hop lice, according to every report received, are much more prevalent now than at any previous time during the history of the hop industry of the state.

Several states, New York and Washington in particular, have in years gone by suffered the almost total destruction of their hop crop by the action of the honey dew. In most instances the vines grow just as high when attacked by the fatal disease as when perfectly free from vermin, but the hope do not form at all. The loss of the sap stops this in every case.

Red spider is another insect that the Oregon hop grower will be kept looking after during the present season. These little insects, so small that they can hardly be distinguished even by an ordinary glass, are showing a very rapid increase. Among growers they are classed among the worst enemies of the crop.

Weather conditions during the past few days have not been such as to kill either the lice or the red spider. To kill the lice, very sultry weather is needed for weeks at a time.
