SAY BLASTS SEND SHOWERS OF ROCK

Residents near Marquam quarry, at the intersection of Sixth street with Marquam gulch, say that blasts hurl huge rocks into yards and on houses near by. City Engineer Wanner last night investigated the protests. J. W. Sweeney operates the quarry, having leased the ground from the Oregon Railroad & Navigation company several years ago. He has been securing rock from the quarry for street improvements. William Martini, who resides across the road from the quarry, his son Henry and daughter Emma asserted that large rocks were frequently hurled into the yard and on the house by the blasting, and that windows had been broken. They also stated that it was dangerous for teams to pass along the country road when the men were setting off the blasts.

Other witnesses who appeared before Mr. Wanner were Mrs. Albert Riner, Peter Glonn, Frank Wagner and William Herman Dabritz. J. W. Sweeney was invited to be present, but failed to appear.

Howard Whiting, who was relieved from his duties in the office today, has accepted the position of superintendent of construction of the Home Telephone company, which will start installing its plant within a few weeks' time. FOUR BANDS NOW GLADDEN THE FAIR

The complaint that was heard during the early part of the fair that there was an insufficiency of music will probably not be heard again. There are now four bands employed to hold up this feature, they being De Caprio's Administration band, the Fourth United States cavalry band, Liberator's and the Sherman Institute bands. The Fourth cavalry band will be at the fair for one month, and its concerts will be given from the terrace in front of the Government building twice each day, except Sunday. Liberator's band will, of course, continue to be one of the chief attractions of the fair as long as it remains here. And the famous Indian band is attracting much attention.

LEARNING FLOWS FREELY.

A Dozen Technical Addresses and Discussions Conspire Morning. It was a hive of learned, scientific industry at the Atkinson school building this morning as the doctors attending the American Medical association swarmed from the armory into the adjoining building and proceeded with their deliberations. There was a hum of erudition in the school, a buzz of knowledge of tinctures and ologies in the air. It was the carnival of big words, a gab-fest of technical expressions and learning. In every room there was a meeting, at every meeting there were lectures, after every lecture there was a discourse and discussion. It was a time of supreme delight to those wise in academic lore; a time of discomfort to others. At the Atkinson school building the section of the association on the practice of medicine in meeting. It began at 10 o'clock this morning and will continue until the end of the session. The meetings include all branches of the science pertaining to the general practice. Consequently there are many meetings.

Of vastly greater interest to the public are the meetings in the Sells-Hirsch building, Tenth and Washington streets, where members of the section on laryngology and otology is talking about things pertaining to those branches. There are various meetings in the building and in point of attendance and the general appearance of industry it ranks alongside the proceedings at the Atkinson school. In the Atkinson school this morning the section on obstetrics and diseases of women held its session. Officers of the section are: C. L. Bonfield, Cincinnati; chairman; W. P. Manton, Detroit; secretary; J. H. Carstens, Detroit; A. Palmer Dодley, New York; L. H. Dun-

DOCTORS HARD AT WORK.

All Sections Are in Session and Discuss Vital Professional Topics. The American Medical association is in full swing, with each section and the house of delegates carrying out the program without variation excepting that the armory has been found to be unsuited for meetings, and the surgical section has been removed to the First Presbyterian church and the section on practice of medicine to the Atkinson school building, across the street from the armory. Every train brings more delegates. The registration has reached 1,600, and the expectation is that it will not be far from 2,000 before adjournment. In the dozen sections 242 papers will be read, covering virtually every theme that is of interest to the practitioner. The papers, as soon as read, become the property of the association and are printed in the Journal, the official weekly publication. The surgical section listens to such men as W. J. Mayo, Henry O. Marcy, A. D. Bevan, Harvey Cushing and others whose names are known everywhere. Dr. W. J. Mayo of Rochester, Minnesota, reported 215 operations on the stomach in the past two years, with the elaboration of his methods and a careful analysis of his experiences in handling cases that not long ago were thought to be beyond the realm of surgery. Here is a man of about 40, who, in a half-century, has won a place in the field of surgery so important that eminent surgeons travel there from Europe and all parts of the United States to see him operate. With his brother, Charles Mayo, who was here last year, before the state medical society, he has compelled fame to come to him.
