NEW B. MEMBERSHIP WANE

(It is contended that the decision of the supreme court in the case of Nease does not apply here because in that case the selling of pools took place through the agency of a public thoroughfare, with no races in the immediate vicinity; that the case at bar is different in two respects, namely:

First, the pool-selling is a mere incident in the operation of a public thoroughfare, the gambling is conducted not in the heart of the city, but at a distance and in an inclosure where people must go if they desire to witness the performance of the horses, and accordingly does not tend to anything which constitutes a nuisance.

"As I understand it, no such distinction seems to have been made by the supreme court in the case of the state against Nease. This decision holds that under the old common law the conduct of a public gaming house constituted a public nuisance, and this was held to be true before gambling was ever made a crime under the law. There is nothing in the decision to justify the court in making a distinction between such a house conducted in the heart of the city and a gambling house on a well-traveled thoroughfare and one located in the woods miles away, if the latter was a place of public resort. The supreme court of New York has held that the conduct of a disorderly or a gambling house, no matter where located, tends to disturb the public peace because of practices which are injurious to families and disturb the foundations of public virtue.

NO RACES IF NO POOLS

sitting to pass upon a question of morals. The court is not considering the question of whether pool-selling is a pool or a race or whether it should be allowed in connection with a racetrack. The only question which the court has authority to consider is the violation or alleged violation of the terms of the lease.

Going into the equity question exhaustively, Judge Fraser quoted a large number of authorities to show that such tribunals generally interfere when it is shown that a covenant has been violated. He expressed the further opinion that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to show that he suffered damage by such violation. Moreover, authorities and text are not in agreement as to the distinction in this connection between covenants and leases.

"Another contention of the defendant association," continued the court, "is that if the terms of the lease have been violated an injunction should have no effect. Injunction, but should institute suit to have the lease set aside and take possession of the premises. I do not see the force of that contention, and the authorities certainly do not support it.
