Paying Too Much for Trade. On the subject of Chinese immigration, Governor Mead said:

"If we throw open our gates to Chinese imigration we pay too high a price for the upbuilding of our trade in the President Goode greeted the congress for the exposition and without discus-sing economic questions, bade them wel-

Senator C. W. Fulton also refrained

sume the task of improving the water

Vast Territory Without Bailroad.

we want first the building of lines irrigation enterprises set on foot by seas also asknowledged the proferred hospitality of the Pacific northwest.

Secretary Francis' Beport.

Secretary Francis' Beport.

Secretary Francis' Beport.

Secretary Francis' Peport has been approved by the executive committee. It shows that $575 has been received from permanent memberships and $60.50 from other sources, a total of $635.90 all of which has been disbursed excepting $5. He recommends that the proceedings of the Seattle congress of 1903 be printed in the near future, having had 700 applications for copies, and that hereafter reliance be placed on personal pledges instead of state delegations for the revenues of Congress.

In the past year the secretary has sent forth $4,050 pieces of literature. A compliment is paid to Portland business men and newspapers for assistance in preparing for this congress. Secretary Francis' report in part says:

Work Before the Mational Congress.

"Some time in the near future it is to be hoped that the finances of this organization may be in such condition as to maintain a commissioner whose du-out rail service

(Continued from Page One.)

"Just transportation rates."
"Liberal government aid for river na

"Commercial supremacy of the Amer Trans-Mississippi states should sup

The session was called to order by Rufus P. Jennings, secretary of the California Promotion committee, who is chairman of the executive committee of the congress, and Rev. J. W. Brougher of the congress, and Rev. J. W. Brougher gave an invocation. Mr. Jennings then introduced Theodore B. Wilcox, president, who delivered his annual address, proffering the hospitality of Portland, thanking the congress for the honor of election to the chief office, and discussing with force and directness the problem of the development of the great west. Mr. Wilcox said:

President Wilcox's Address.

"Mr. Chairman, Fellow Members of the Congress, Ladies and Gentlemen: Owing to my inability to be with you in St. Louis last October, this is my first opportunity to express to our members my grateful appreciation of the great personal honor you then conferred on me by electing me president of this congress. And yet, I feel that it was done more as an honor and distinction to the state of Oregon and the city of Portthe state of Oregon and the city of Port-and than to me. That my personality has been utilized in bringing to our city and tate at this time this splendid body of spresentative business men of the vast representative business men of the vast Trans-Mississippi region is honor enough for a greater man than I, and I thank you, not only for my election as man president, but more, far more, for taking the time and trouble to come great distances, as most of you have done to be present at this congress, and to discuss here the various interesting subjects with which we have to do. And although addresses of welcome to our state and to the northwest will be made here today by Governor Chamber. our state and to the northwest will be made here today by Governor Chamber-lain of Oregon, Governor Mead of Washington, and Mayor Lane, and you will also be welcomed by President Goode of this magnificent exposition, I want to gay to you as a citizen of Portland that while our latchstring always hangs out here in the west, the latch has been removed and the door to our hospitality has been taken from the hinges and laid away while you remain with us. while you remain with us.

Barly West Is Now the Bast.

The Trans-Mississippi region, representing two thirds of the territory covered by the United States, nevertheless lies farthest from those points where our ancestors first landed on the shores of America. Westward from New England and Virginia, through more than two centuries, immigration has continually moved, until the early west has become the east, and only the territory beyond the Mississippi remains the west of today. Scarce 50 years have passed since first our honored pioneers braved the dangers and privations of frontier life to earn the fortune, the freedom and the health which the land of the setting sun affords. And as yet the great tracts of arabie land are but sparsely settled, the treasures of the mountain set but herely touched, the waste, places are still world, the forests still stand, and the magnificent rivers remain unsubdued to the uses of mankinds but the advancement that has been made justifies the hopes of the pioneers and stimulates us to renewed effort day by day. Our needs are many and our merits are great, but our population is sparse, our wealth but limited, and our importance singly in the halls of congress but small and unavailing. What then is there for us to do but to combine our influences and work together by all fair and honorable means for the things we need?

Things to Be Worked For.

"For the improvement of our waterirrigation of arid lands, for our live-stock interests, for the isthmian canal, for oriental markets, for statehood for our territories, and a complete territorial government for Alaska; for all these of our particular states or sections, and to make the Trans-Mississippi region as a whole great in wealth and influence, as it is in territorial extent

"And yet, my friends, we are but a part of one great whole. As I hear the men from California extol the wondrous beauties of that great state, her great expanse, and the mass and variety of her products; the men from Texas, who dwell upon the extent of their cotton re by itself; the men from Wyoming, who tell of the great wealth of her coal and oil, and the vast herds that roam her hills, I feel that while indi-vidual effort is everywhere making. that while each section stands for itself exploits its own beculiar attractions and advantages, each is aiming to be only a bright particular star in that constellation which is today and must forever be the greatest nation on earth, the greatest on land and on the seas, the greatest on the Pacific as well as on

Work Already Done.

"In the early days of your organiza-tion, one of the principal objects of your efforts was improved waterways in the west. By your combined influences you have long ago given the city of Galveston government aid to produce a deep water harbor, which by shortening and cheapening the route from the middle west to the markets of the world has d lower freight rates and greater to producers, until Galveston third in the list of ports in the United States. You have afforded a waterway to the gulf for a great portion of the state of Texas, formerly limited to the mercies of a self-content of the state imited to the mercies of a railroad. You of Chinese to this coast. 'I know that save improved the Mississippi and its China threatens a boycott against the cured a deep water harbor at San Pedro, California; and, gentlemen, with your help, we shall deepen the lower river and the mouth of the Columbia for vessels of modern type, and open its upper reaches to unobstructed navigation, just as far into the interior as there is water to float a fiat-bottomed boat, or there is a ton of produce paying a railroad two prices for its transportation.

Irrigation a Sublims Achievement.

"The reclamation of our arid lands has always been one of the principal topics to engage the attention of this body. It has inspired and aided in placing upon our atatute books the irrigation law, which in its fulfillment will be our country's crowning glory. To take the waste parts of the earth and subdue them to man's uses and benefit, to make two blades of grays to grow where nothing grew before, to make something out of nothing, this is almost creation, a sublime achievement. But the importance of this subject has been recognized, and a separate body similar to this in organization has been established for its special care and furtherance.

"Continuous to the orient as the terri-to this in organization has been established for its apecial care and furtherance.

"Contiguous to the orient as the territory we represent lies, nearer than any other great commercial nation, and the nearest portion of our own great United States, it is eminently fit that one of our principal topics for discussion, in all its various phases and from the various viewpoints, should be the universal, absorbing topic before the commercial world today—oriental trade.

"Another topic which will occupy our attention is Alaska, which has proved a wise and profitable investment to our people. She needs our influence and our help, and I bespeak your favorable consideration of her wishes.

"I cannot pass to my closing without referring to this beautiful fair, placed here by the lakeside, among the green hills, looking out upon those grand old snow-capped mountains and the great stretches of river and landscape, not alone to commemorate the achievements of the past, but to stimulate our people to new and greater endeavor in the future; and while it stands as a monument to Lewis and Clark, and all those later pioneers who utilized their discovery, it stands equally as a monument to the public spirif and progressive nature of the west.

Potent Pactor at Washington.

The members of this congress, who have for 16 years labored and traveled without compensation or emolument, know that their recommendations have been a potent factor in much of the legislation at Washington, affecting the material welfare and advancement of the west.

"But there is more to do yet, more aid to be sought and obtained, and this Trans-Mississippi Commercial congress, representing more than 30,000,000 of our people, must continue its work. Its existence depends on the devotion of public spirited citizens, who are banded together for mutual benefit by every fair, just and honorable means in our power. "I welcome you all here today, and I congratulate your various states and territories and the American people that in these days of selfish greed there are in every state and territory and in every section of them all men who, prompted by patriotism and public spirit, will work for the upbuilding and betterment of their communities, and for the glory of our common country."

Welcomed by Governor.

Governor Chamberlain welcomed the delegates for the state of Oregon and took advantage of the opportunity to speak his sentiments on the Chinese question and the need for insistence upon greater haste by the federal government in reclaiming the arid lands of ernment in reclaiming the arid lands this region. He said in part:

this region. He said in part:

"Until the Trans-Mississippi confere seed in the development of the west and south there was a lack of unity send of purpose among those who represented us in the halls of congress, as well as in commercial, and other bodies which had for their object the development of each particular section, but now each of the states embraced within the territory from which delegates to this congress come makes common cause, and all have found that acting unitedly everything is possible and easy of accomplishment, which goes to the making of a richer country, a happier and a more prosperous people.

"But much remains yet to be done, and some things to be guarded against."

"Coclie labor shall never be permitted to degrade our American workmen!" said he, indowsing what Governor Chamberlain had said.
"Development and cooperation are the keynote of this congress." said he, "and we must do as the eastern cities and states have done—work together to induce congress to improve the waterways and harbors."

W. D. Wheelwright spoke for the chamber of commerce and added his welcome to those that had preceded.

G. W. Allen, president of the board of trade, argued that, while the government should do only what was necessary for the people, and the people should do as much as possible for themselves, yet inasmuch as the federal government controlled all navigable, rivers

In the first category I call attention to the tardiness with which the semi-arid regions are being reclaimed, and in doing this I do not mean to be under-stood as claiming that the officials in charge of the reclamation service are doing nothing. I realize fully the diffiprosecution of these great government works, because of the fact that there are innumerable conflicting private inother obstacles which try the patience and retard the work. But I feel that works which have been undertaken, in this state at least, and possibly in other states, where I am not so familiar with conditions, ought to have been pushed to completion with greater rapidity than has been the case.

Too Much Bed Tape.

"I fear that this is occasioned eithe by too much red tape in the depart-ments at Washington or by a lack of appreciation on the part of the officials having these works in charge, of the importance to the people of speedy con-summation. I believe that if your congress would call the attention of in authority to conditions as they exist it would result in more aggres sive work and a speedy completion of many of the projects now under way. "There are other matters of great public interest, such as appropriations for our rivers and harbors and for the construction of canals as natural regu-lators for freight rates for commerce from the inland empire to the sea, that ought to be taken up and considered by this congress, but it is impossible for me in the brief time allotted to do more not alone on the shores of the Pacific; there are dangers lurking along the shores of the Atlantic, and they arise from the incoming of immigrants from certain countries in Europe and Africa."

General John W. Noble of Missouri, formerly secretary of the interior, responded to the welcoming addresses, relating how he almost came to the northwest many years ago and barely escaped enrollment as a coast pioneer.

Ex-Governor L. Bradford Prince of New Mexico and John T. Frost of Kansas also asknowledged the proferred hospitality of the Pacific northwest. than call attention to them "In the list of those things which ought to be guarded against and against this congress should sound ar formerly slarm is the unrestricted immigration commerce of the United States unless, more liberal laws than are now in force are enacted for the admission of their people to this country, and I know that there are those standing at the head of some of our own commercial bodies who advocate the removal of the restrictions contained in the act of congress of 1902, upon this immigration; but I venture the assertion that in many cases the threatened boycott receives encouragement from men in this country who have personal interests to subserve, and much of the clamor here for Chinese immigration comes from those directly interested in exporting products to Chinese ports, constituting a small minority of the people of the coast.

National Reformers Tell Civic Convention of Methods That Secure Clean Cities.

> REFORM ORGANIZATION THE THEME TOMORROW

ttendance at Exposition Today Will Probably Be Greatest in Weeks-Large Crowds Attend Sessions of the Conference.

The attendance at the exposi-tion today up to 11:30 o'clock was 8,702, an increase of 483 over the number of admissions at the same hour yesterday. This does not include the herd of Eliks, which began to arrive after the noon hour. If the weather re-mains clear the attendance today should run as high as 22,000. The admissions yesterday were 16,443.

n small minority of the people of the coast.

In feel that the best interests of the great majority of the people of the United States demand a rigid enforcement of the present law restricting the immigration of Chinese laborers, and if any amendment to that law is made it should be for even greater restriction than now exists. Not only that; the reasons which demand the exclusion of the cheap labor of China from our shores demand the restriction of Japanese laborers as well, and off all oriental countries that send to our shores a class of people inferior to our own, and who, under the laws of the Almighty himself, cannot intermarry and assimilate with our own peoples without their degradation and the lowering of the standard of civilization. Our friends from the east and from the south cannot fully appreciate the evils that will be wrought to our social and our industrial system by the unrestricted immigration of the cheap laborers of oriental countries. They are not homebuilders; they cannot assimilate with us; they can live and accumulate money for transfer to the orient upon a wage which our people cannot exist upon, and steps ought to be taken here and now to sound a warning against the enactment of any laws which shall make it harder for the toiling masses of this country to earn their daily bread."

Governor Albert E. Mead of Wash-Notwithstanding the atrong counter attraction furnished by the Elks, there was a large crowd in the Auditorium at 2 o'clock this afternoon when William F. Woodward of Portland-called to order the third session of the Lewis and Clark civic conference.

Governor Albert E. Mead of Washington indorsed what Governor Chamberlain had said, and laughingly remarked that it might seem to the audience that he and Governor Chamberlain had been together when they wrote their speeches, because they were so much alike in thought.

"In reference to the need of urging the government to hasten to apply the promised irrigation funds to the reclamation of lands in the Pacific northwest," said he, "we want something in evidence before the expiration of our terms of office, at lesst."

Paying Too Ench for Trade. civic conference.

The general topic of the day was "Municipal Improvement, Esthetic and Practical." The feature of the meeting was an address by John DeWitt Warner of the New York bar on "Municipal Art." The forceful sayings of Mr. Warner proved of intense interest. An abstract of his remarks follows:

abstract of his remarks follows:

Municipal Art.

Art is that which makes 'fit.' Civic art, therefore, is that of so building a city as to serve and express its uses. Its beauty is the perfection of the useful. The old city was a camp, a church, and a court. The new one is a place to do business, of residence of those who do it, of resort for those attracted there.

"As to the site, the problem is always of more perfect adaptation by man of the provision God has made. As to plan it is frequently correction of ancestors', mistakes; and both genius and enterprise are needed if we would not curse our children by dur lack of foresight. The problem of city plan is broader than architect or landscape gardener alone can deal with. Commerce must be consulted; transport interests provided for; angineering problems met; all before adornment—though artists must crown the work, and should advise from the first. "As to the site, the problem is always from taking up questions upon which there were differences of opinion, but gave a humorous address, in which he said that he would "iterate nothing but perpendicular facts," and then went on to say that when he received the summons to speak here today he was on the banks of the Nehslem river in the act of landing a nine-pound trout, President H. M. Cake of the Commerfrom the first.

'In transport, the first need is that of system, covering all factors. Then appreciation that streets, tunnels, bridges, waterways, are but parts or continuous whole. As to beauty, here the most crying need is to drop the backdoor, junkyard treatment, and by park ap-"Coolie labor shall never be permitted junkyard treatment, and by proaches and dignified station said he indorsing what Governor Chamberlain had said.

portance. The nesthetic is incongruous with dirt. In any city with soft coal smudge, to clear its skies and clean its air is the first essential to beauty. "By effective grouping of public buildings into city centers, convenience and economy are served and dignity and beduty secured.

Lead the World in Parks. 'In parks we lead the world. Here again, system and variety are first essentials. New York's recreation piers ties will be to remain in Washington during the long and the short sessions of the national congress and keep in touch with all the legislation in which and all harbors and the states had no authority therein, it was plainly the function of the sovereign power to asthe Trans-Mississippi states and terri-tories are directly interested, and whose further duty it shall be to keep track of the sessions of the various committees and have the commercial bodies and the cities that are interested in the various Mr. Allen referred to the excuse given by E. H. Harriman for the nonbuilding policy of the Harriman system in this state, and showed that of the 59,000 square miles of Oregon 56,000 are withpieces of legislation sufficiently posted that the deliberations of the committee may be assisted by influential and competent representatives from those sections who may be brought to Washington at the telegraphic request of our control of rates by the federal govern-ment," said he, "but here in this state commissioner.

"If this plan could be adopted there would be no difficulty for this organization to secure ample membership fees from the commercial, industrial and other associations who year after year send delegations to this body. We could also establish permanent headquarters in some central location and have representatives of this committee at stated reon we may have rates of any "Oregon demands only fair treatment, from railroads and government. Oreofficials at Washington to develop the resources of the northwest." sentatives of this committee at stated periods inaugurate a thorough canvass of the cities for these memberships. Governor Pardee's response for Call-fornia was a pleasing compliment to Oregon, to which he referred as "my Oregon, to which he referred as "my state—Oregon." He assured the people of Portland that their hospitality was appreciated by every delegate.

"The Pacific coast must adopt the motto of Kentucky—"United we stand; divided we fall," he said.

"But permit me to refer to a subject that has been mentioned in previous addresses—dangers from immigration. We are told that the coast will suffer sorely from the influx of Chinese. Do not allow partisanship to blind vision nor heat of debate to dim our clarity of perception. Do not forget that the dangers from foreign immigration arise not alone on the shores of the Pacific; there are dangers lurking along the Two-Year Committee.

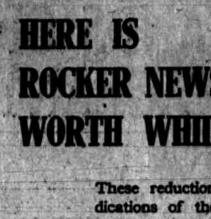

'In connection with this most important work I would also recommend that the policy heretofore followed of appointing the congressional committee each year be changed so that in the future this most important adjunct to the congress continue for a period of two years, during the long and the short sessions of the national congress. The reason advanced for this change is the detriment of removing the members of one committee just as they become familiar with their duties and supplying their places by other persons not fa-Two-Year Committee.

familiar with their duties and supplying their places by other persons not familiar with the work that has already been done and that left undone which should be followed to its conclusion. "By making this change the congressional committee would serve more effectively and at the expiration of their two years' term have a report to present that would show much improvement and fectively and at the expiration of their two years' term have a report to present that would show much improvement and at the eams time the members of this committee would be more of an aid to the senators and representatives who are really desirous of securing all the information possible in their consideration of the measures brought before them in the committee rooms affecting the welfare of the Trans-Mississippi states and territories."

Tomorrow the program covers the subject of oriental commerce, and addresses will be heard by President Wilcox, Minister John Barrott, President James J. Hill of the Great Northern, F. B. Thurber of New York, H. W. Furlong of San Francisco; W. A. Kelley will speak of Alaska, and David R. Francis of St. Louis on the benefits of expositions, and Major W. C. Langstt on "The Cdumbla hiver."

CASTORIA The Kind You Have Always Bough 'Tween Season's Sale!

These reductions are fair indications of the great household bargains we're now offering in every department.

BARGAIN

No. 8923-6-High Back Golden Oak Rocker, with cobbler seat and embossed back, well finished and finely polished. Regular, $3.50.....

No. 8843-6-Pretty Golden Oak Arm Rocker, with leatheroid cobbler seat, has curved arms and medium high back. For the sitting room. $4.50......$3.50 Regular

No. 8838-6-Arm Rocker, with fiber seat and tufted leather back. Built of selected golden oak with extra finish and polish. No. 8844-6 Cobbler Seat Arm Rocker with curved arms and curved back. with comfortable leather pad. Made of polished golden oak. Regular $8.00...$5.75

No. 8718-Large Arm Rocker of golden oak, with opera seat and tufted leather back. Built of selected ished. Regular $8.50....$6.25

No. 8926-Leather Seat Arm Rocker, with high back. Back upholstered in tufted leather. Scroll arms and extra wide seat. Full of com-Regular $10.00....... $7.75

TAYLOR

FIRST TAYLOR

are her greatest success. As to street fixtures, street lights should be less generally set far into the street. Least possible street space should be given or obstructed by any fixture, and telegraph poles and wires first of all should be

"When cleanliness, health and order are fairly secured, sculpture and paint-ing may well be studied. These beto the skeleton of its site, the fiesh of its plan, the life of its business. "Public art is of vital interest to art workers. It is the only great art—ideal —and elevating. It includes not only what the public pays for, but all that is dedicated to the public, whether by church, railway depot, hotel or theatre. "Our New York experience has taught us that politicians are ready to help; and that the masses are more prompt-to welcome public art than are the so called cultured classes. History thus repeats itself, and to the periods of public art in Greece and of the Italian remaissance the civil spirit of our people is adding a new art movement that bids fair to be most important of all.

"When Baint John tried to describe Heaven, he did not borrow from Eden but conceived of it as the city beautiful and redemption is thus typified by civi ligation—civic art in its broades sociology in the University of Chicago. He spoke appealingly for the betterment of cities along practical lines.

The second speaker was Professor Charles Zueblin, who holds the chair of sociology in the University of Chicago.

A general discussion closed the session. It was led by President William D. Wheelwright of the chamber of commerce, and C. Lombardy.

The Administration band furnished musical features for the afternoon.

Tomorrow's program will be as follows, Thomas G. Green, presiding:

Principal address, "Municipal Progress and Ways and Means of Its Accomplishment," Clinton Rogers Woodruff, secretary of the National Municipal league and vice-president of the American Civic association.

Second address, Charles Zueblin, professor of sociology at Chicago university.

zity.

Discussion led by A. L. Mills on general tople, "Organisation of Leagues in New Cities."

FORCED TO VACATE.

Goodyear Raincoat Company

Forced to vacate storeroom at $30 Washington street. Open for business Saturday morning at their new location, 172 Third street, between Morrison and Yamhill streets. 50,000 ladies and gents raincoats made up in the latest styles for the fall trade must be sacrificed at unheard of prices.

It is to be regretted that Portland It is to be regretted that Portland is to lose from its increasing modern retail stores a concern such as the Goodyear Raincoat company. This firm has sold thousands of garments to fair visitors and the Portland public. Remember our new address on and after Saturday will be 172 Third street.

Excursion Rates to Newport.

The Southern Pacific company has placed on sale at all "- Portland offices round trip tickets to Newport at rate of 35, limited to October 10, 1905, and for $3 Saturday to Moncay tickets. Ample hotel accommodations at reasonable rates are provided at this popular reason.

IT DIDN'T HURT A BIT The Palling, oer. Third and Washington.

AUDITOR IGNORES

(Continued from Page One.)

Members of the commission have stated that all they desire is to get an order of the court on the matter and they are willing to abide by that decision. They are of the opinion, however, that the cierk was irregularly appointed, as he had not served the city for six consciutive years before the charter went into effect, as required in order to be appointed without an examination. Colonal Weidler contends that instead of also merchants and tradesmen, who will $15, which does not require a man to have served six consecutive years.

EDUCATED JEWS WILL BE appointed without an examination. Col-onel Weidler contends that instead of being appointed under section 313 be freed from the usual restrictions he was given his position under section placed upon Jews.

CLATSOP BEACH

Greatest Ocean Resort in the Pacific North west VIA

Astoria & Columbia River Railroad

THROUGH TRAINS-NO CHANGE.

Leave Union Depot, daily 8:00 A. M. Arrive Gearhart Park 12:20 P. M. Leave Seaside 5:00 P. M. Leave Gearhart Park..... 5:10 P. M. Arrive Portland 9:50 P. M.

4½ HOURS ON THE SHORES OF THE GRAND PACIFIC OCEAN

This scenic route parallels the majestic Columbia for 100 miles, giving every advantage to see it in all its grandeur.

Saturday round trip tickets, good two days $2.50

Single seats in the parlor car 50 cents extra each way. For Information Apply 248 Alder St.

C. A. STEWART, Agent

I. C. MAYO, G. P. A.

Phone Main 906

ROYAL Baking Powder Is Most Economical

Because it makes better and more healthful food.