WOOL CROP OF EASTERN OREGON BELOW AVERAGE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Canyon City, Or., Aug. 11.—The wool crop for the season is estimated at from 19,000,000 to 20,000,000 pouncs, 1,000,000 pounds less than the output for last year. Eastern Oregon wool is not as high in quality as last year owing to the dry weather of last winter. Sheep ranges are now filled to their capacity by flocks, and as there are no new ranges available the wool output of Oregon can never be increased. Oregon can never be increased.

It is estimated that there are in the new Wallowa forest reserve 200,000 head of sheep. No steps have yet been taken by the government to prevent sheep from grazing there. Should the laws be rigidly enforced the question of the summer range in eastern Oregon would become a difficult problem.

Tes and the Effects of Tes-Drinking

While every one knows that it is wrong to stew tea, to draw from it as much of its astringent principles as possible, yet there are few who pay any practical regard to the warning not to prepare tea in this way. It cannot be too widely known that not only is theme the most essential constituent of tea, but also that it is almost as quickly soluble in hot water as is sugar. The making

The Goddess of the Sea.

From the London Saturday Review.

It might be interesting to conjecture why so many of those who go down to the sea in ships appeal for protection to a patron lady. When our Henry III was waiting for a favorable wind to carry him to England he made yows to Notre Dame de Boulogne. When Godfrey de Bouilion reached Palestine he sent back relies from Jerusalem for her shrine. When Chung How was sent to express regrets to France for the murderous riots at Tientsin he wrote back from Fohkien to ask that some special mark of honor might be conferred on the queen of heaven; his official career had given him many opportunities for noticing to, what an extent the coasting craft depended on her grace, but it had been borne in upon him afresh during this voyage how many thousands earn their livelihood on the sea.

When the coral fishers of Capri set out to join the fleet that gathers every spring at Genoa or Leghorn they hold high featival and pray to Madonna di tribute as superior of all?
