The $1 Sunday excursion to the Castrade Looks and return on the fastest of all the Willamette and Columbia river steamers, the Charles R. Spencer, starting from the foot of Washington street at 3 a. m. and returning about 5 p. m. affords one of the most delightful steamboat rides in the world. There is no other trip on earth enshrined in so much grandeur and wealth of scenery. The steamer passes through a constant panorama of mountains and glens, cataracts and canyons, hill and dale, mighty forests and rolling prairies, fishwheels in operation and the wonderful Cascade locks, built at an expense of $4,000,000 and is years' constant effort. Tourists come thousands of miles to view the entrancing beauties of the Columbia between Portlend and the locks, essecially Multnomah falls, $50 feet, and if this matchiess beauty may be seen sunday at an expense of $1. Excellent meals served on board, 50 cents.

Private E. P. Strandberg of the Centennial guards at the exposition met with a serious accident yesterday while firing a salute in honor of President Goode's birthday. Strandberg is a battery man and was ramming one of the guns. Evidently he had not swabbed the cannon perfectly and as he was reramming it, the powder left in the chamber ignited and with terrific forces shot the ramrod about 100 yards over the lake. Strandberg's glasses prevented the loss of his sight, but his forearm was fractured and his arm severely burned. He was taken to the emergency hospital, where his wounds were dressed. He attributes the blame for the accident to himself, saying he did not exercise gufficient caution.
