Defeat Is Disgrace for Czar's Generals

RUSSIA has several beaten generals at the present time, and the question is what will eventually become of them...

The land of the Great Bear has selected its leaders from her army and navy to long survive their downfall...

It was not long ago that a famous general, at one time honored all over Russia, died by his own hand at a gambling table...

After the war the general left St. Petersburg in disgrace, and under an assumed name, took up his residence in Germany...

Japan is harsh on her defeated officers, both naval and military. During the present war in the far east a naval lieutenant who failed to carry out a task set him was publicly told by his chief to cover his disgrace by committing suicide...

A sheet was strung on the deck of the lieutenant's gunboat, and behind this was placed an armchair and a table. The lieutenant was seated in a piece of clean paper...

The British troops had entered Peking and sacked the summer palace of the emperor, a Chinese general, known as the chief of the "dragon slayers," who allowed his troops to be badly beaten...

For a long time his wretched figure was to be seen in the streets of the capital, with eyes on his limbs and a round hole in his neck as a punishment...

Well-Behaved Money. From Harper's Weekly. In these days of tainted money and apparent jealousy of wealth it is worth noting how indifferent our public is to the vast accumulations of Astor money...
