

BUILDING IS FREE FROM DEBT

Splendid Edifice Dedicated by German Evangelical Church to Worship of God.

BISHOP S. C. BREYFOGLE CONDUCTS SERVICES

Structure Cost Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars and the Subscriptions Taken Yesterday Were Sufficient to Pay Last Remaining Bills.

The new German Evangelical church, Tenth and Clay streets, was dedicated yesterday with appropriate services, conducted by Bishop S. C. Breyfogle of Philadelphia. Services were held in the morning, afternoon and evening and at each the church was crowded. Subscriptions amounting to $3,000 were given, which leaves the church free of debt. The edifice cost $25,000.

At the morning service the bishop spoke in German, taking for his text, "All is Yours." In the afternoon he spoke in English on "The Power of Christ's Resurrection." At the evening service the pastors of all the German churches in the city were present. Among the speakers were Rev. John Kopp of the German Congregational church; Rev. Mr. Seebecker of Spokane, and Rev. Mr. Maurer, presiding elder of the Salem district of the Methodist Episcopal church.

YOUTH RECEIVES ITS OWN.

Dr. Van Horn Says We Are Beginning to Appreciate Young Manhood.

"There is a Boy in Your Eye," was the subject of an address by Dr. Francis J. Van Horn of the First Congregational church, Worcester, Massachusetts, before the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon.

"Every boy has looked into the eyes of his father and beheld his image mirrored there," said he. "He sees the outward reflection but fails to realize, perhaps, that his very self is buried deep in that father's life and forms a part of his being. There is not a father who is worthy of the name who does not have his boy's interest vitally at heart, and hopes and believes that some day he will become a noble, upright man."

"And so I say that the boy, the young man, is in his father's eye, and he is in his mother's eye; and he is coming more and more to be in the eye of the whole world. Youth has come into its own within the last century. We are beginning to appreciate young manhood. Never was there a time when young men were doing so large a part of the world's work. They are in the saddle riding at a gallop never known before. Whether they ride or fall or not depends upon themselves. The world is looking at them anxiously, and it is for them to prove their worth. "It is not a matter of money that I want to present to you today. The press of things material makes it seem at times that the measure of a man is a measure of stocks and bonds; and yet we know this is not so. The great thing in life is just simple goodness. That is the measure of a man today and it has been through the ages. We need not ask what goodness is. I am tired of all these sophistries and questions as to where lies the line between good and evil. When excuses are swept aside, when disguises are swept away, when our naked souls deal with naked facts, each one knows what goodness is."

OPPOSED CHILD LABOR.

Professor Lindsay Asks Oregon to Aid in Giving Minors Their Rights.

Professor Samuel McCune Lindsay of the University of Pennsylvania and secretary of the national child-labor committee, lectured at the First Unitarian church yesterday morning on "Child Labor." "The question of the hour," said he, "is whether we will take advantage of the opportunities offered us to solve the child-labor problem, or whether we are willing to see a growing army of children deprived of their birthright through no acts of their own. We need a national sentiment on this question, a national standard solidly imbedded in public opinion, even if it cannot be put on the national statute books by reason of the limitation of federal powers. "States like Oregon, which stand at the front in advanced legislation on this subject, must do missionary work in less favored communities, and lend a helping hand to forward the movement in sister states, until there is no child in all America who has not the chance to grow, play and be intelligently prepared—that is, educated—before it is asked to assume the serious burdens of our modern industrialism."

CLOSING THE GAP.

Rev. Mr. Montgomery Says Christianity Will Solve Economic Problems.

"Then tendency of the present time is to bring the church and the workingmen together," said Rev. Andrew J. Montgomery yesterday at the Third Presbyterian church.

"There have been ideal propositions made," continued he, "to harmonize the relations between labor and capital and to cure all evils of the human family, but this can be brought about only by bringing the workingmen closer together. The gap, real and imaginary, between the church and the laboring man, is being closed up. "Christianity will solve the problems that cause contention in the economic field. We should cultivate the workingman and make the church his home."

W. W. BAILEY DIES OF TYPHOID IN SPOKANE.

W. W. Bailey, manager of the Portland house of Tull & Gibbs, died Saturday night at Spokane, where he was visiting his parents. He had just returned from a trip east, where it is supposed he contracted typhoid fever. He was 25 years of age and had been 12 years with the firm in which he had worked from the bottom. His widow survives him. All his relatives live in Spokane, but he leaves a large circle of friends in this city. F. D. Gibbs of this city left last night to attend the funeral. HALF CENTURY OF GOOD WORK

Order of B'nai B'rith Celebrates Splendid Birthday With Appropriate Exercises.

PROMINENT MEMBERS TELL OF GOOD WORK DONE

What the Organization Was Founded for, What It Stands for and What It Has Accomplished in Its Fifty Years of Life on the Coast.

This is the semi-centennial year of the establishment of the order of B'nai B'rith on the Pacific coast, and Portland members are renewing their pledges of loyalty to the cause. At a meeting in Temple Beth Israel last evening addresses were made by Hugo K. Asher of San Francisco, president of district grand lodge No. 4, and Otto Irving Wise, grand lecturer of the order's grand lodge, and brother of Rabbi Stephen E. Wise.

The first lodge on the Pacific coast was formed in 1855, and one of its charter members, Jacob Meyer, is a resident of Portland. The pioneer lodge planted seed that grew and spread the benevolent work of the order to all parts of the coast. Recently two lodges in Portland consolidated with a view to giving strength that comes with union of workers in a worthy cause, and the results have been gratifying. I. Lesser Cohen, who presided at last evening's meeting, spoke of these matters, and congratulated the order on its steady growth.

Mr. Asher said the men who founded and carry forward a movement counted only as the results of their work live. "Fifty years of honest purpose and beneficent activity crown the past and give hostage for the future of the B'nai B'rith. They were strong-minded men who founded our order here in the youth of Pacific coast civilization. They came from many lands, and spoke not the same language, but they were one in the fire of a common faith. To all alike came the import of the message that Israel received from God, and gave to the world: 'Hear, O Israel, the Lord, our God, the Lord is one.' A common faith, and a common responsibility bound them together, for centuries of oppression had taught the race that all Israelites are responsible, the ones for the other."

Mr. Wise spoke of the work and future of the unique order that exacts nothing, but expects everything from its membership. He said: "It shows you a record of half a century of splendid achievement. Your reward will come not from us, but from the consciousness that you have done a good deed to the Jews. This organization set out 50 years ago to Americanize immigrant Jews and equip them for protecting themselves and their families. He told of the orphan asylums, the homes for helpless and needy, the hospitals and schools, and all the uplifting influences that the order has stood sponsor for, and spoke of the efforts the order has made for amelioration of the

GENERAL COMPSON HAS A SOLDIER'S BURIAL

Funeral services for H. B. Compton were held at Finley's undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock under direction of the Elks' lodge, and were attended by many, whose floral tributes showed their esteem for the departed friend. Judge H. H. Northrup eulogized his fine personal qualities, and spoke warmly of his brilliant army career, saying that his estate included two medals voted to him by congress for bravery in action, and numerous written documents from famous generals. The speaker read an order signed by General Custer detailing Compton to deliver 17 Confederate flags which he had been instrumental in capturing. The service was deeply impressive.

Rev. H. A. Barden, chaplain of the G. A. R., offered prayer, and a solo was sung by Miss Annie Ditchburn. At the grave the last rites were conducted by Lincoln-Garfield post, and a salute was fired over the grave by a detail of the Oregon National guard.
