Wild enthusiasm seized the delegates of the National Association of Letter-Carriers last night when J. D. Holland of Boston, Massachusetts, was elected president.

Speeches played, men shouted and threw their hands into the air; women clapped their hands and mingled shrill "bravos" with the hoarse babel of the delegates; every one climbed upon a chair, while a score of delegates in the rear of the great auditorium at the Armory gave an imitation of a dance. Another group seized the Boston man and bore him on their shoulders about the room.

It was the climax of the most tempestuous convention in the history of the association. Discussions have been frequent. During the convention just ended there were bitter fights and politics mingled freely and openly in nearly all transactions. In the election of the Boston man the trouble was ended, they said, and the Portland convention marked the beginning of a new era. He was their Moses, they shouted, selected to lead them from the bondage of discord.

Speeches made at midnight, and the session became wildly hilarious. Politics took a prominent part at the beginning of the balloting and deals and counter deals were numerous. However, in the shuffle a Portland man was elected to membership on the committee on constitution and laws; J. S. Roark, one of the most popular carriers in the city, being selected.

For the choice of president there were three candidates—President Keller having refused to be a candidate for reelection—J. D. Holland of Boston, M. A. Fitzgerald of New York and G. W. Davidson of St. Louis. On the first ballot Holland was far in the lead and Fitzgerald suggested that his election be made unanimous. The motion was seconded by Davidson, the other candidate, and was adopted with a cheer. It was then that the enthusiasm of the delegates became rampant and uproarious.

There were two candidates for the office of vice-president and on the first ballot E. J. Gainer of Madison was 299 votes ahead of C. Trisher of San Francisco. The California man followed the example of the defeated candidate for the presidency and Gainer's election was made unanimous.

For the selection of an executive board and a committee on constitution and laws two ballots were necessary and during the tedious process of counting the returns delegates amused themselves as best they could. Vaudeville stunts were done, songs were sung and one of the features of the period of festivity was the sudden burst of hospitality on the part of the California delegation, which extended an invitation to every delegate and their friends to enjoy the sweets of the southern states, which they said, vied with those of ancient Hurandy.

At the conclusion of the balloting and after the deluge of enthusiasm had receded, a delegate from Ohio delivered a eulogy upon the work of the retiring president. He concluded his remarks with a motion that the sum of $2,000 be appropriated to Mr. Keller. The motion was passed and the retiring executive officers extended in entertaining the delegates were passed. After the

LOAN FOR CZAR IS POLICE-INSPECTED BY MR. WITTE

Beilin Advises State That Jewish Financiers Have Furnished Russia Cash.

TWO HUNDRED MILLION IS REPORTED SECURED

Hebrews to Be Granted Full Rights in Russia in Return for Money—No Confirmation of Deal Can Be Secured in Wall Street.

(Special Dispatch by Leased Wire to The Journal) New York, Sept. 9.—That the Russian government had negotiated a loan of 400,000,000 rubles or about $100,000,000 with the Jewish bankers in this country was the purport of a cable dispatch received in Wall Street banking circles today from Berlin.

The dispatch further stated that the loan had been made on the expressed stipulation that the czar would accord to the Hebrew subjects the same civil and religious rights as those given to Russian subjects, including the right of residing in any part of the empire, whereas now they can only live in certain zones.

Ed. J. Cantwell, Secretary N. A. L. C.

Various resolutions had been disposed of the newly elected officers were installed into office. The St. Louis and Denver Letter-Carriers' bands, together with the Royal Hawaiian band from the Pacific islands, were present when the session was finally adjourned.

Before the election a repetition of Thursday's war was barely averted when Delegate G. M. O'Brien of Cleveland introduced a resolution providing for a change in the manner of representation at the national convention. He desired that one delegate be selected for every 100 members, instead of every 25, the present custom. Delegates from the smaller cities evidently thought a bomb had been hurled at them for they arose en masse and opposed the motion.

There was a lengthy debate which threatened to postpone adjournment indefinitely and Mr. O'Brien withdrew the motion with the assertion that it would surely be settled at the next convention.

Customs Gate Next Convention.

Canton, Ohio, was selected as the place of holding the next convention. During the afternoon session five minutes were allotted to representatives of the four cities that had invited the postmen and it was generally conceded that Atlantic City would be selected. During the balloting and caucusing last night, however, it is said, that a combine was reached whereby the Monument city was chosen. The other cities that contended for the selection were Atlantic City, Minneapolis and Chattanooga, Tennessee.

At yesterday's session of the convention a resolution was passed providing for the sending of a memorial to Postmaster General George A. Hays, asking that the salaries of letter-carriers of both first-class and second-class cities be increased. A committee was appointed to proceed to Washington at once for the purpose of presenting the memorial.

It is explained in the petition that the same salaries are paid now that were paid 30 years ago and that conditions in the Boston man the trouble was ended, they said, and the Portland convention marked the beginning of a new era. He was their Moses, they shouted, selected to lead them from the bondage of discord.
